THE FLOOD OF '97.

THE central Mississippi region, embracing some of the richest farm lands of Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee, has been transformed into a great inland sea. Six thousand square miles of territory are under water, forming a monster and dreary panorama of ruin and misery. Farms, villages and even small cities are completely submerged. Several hundred human beings have probably perished in the flood. Thousands have been carried to Memphis and other places of safety by Mississippi steamboats which pick their way among the tree tops, while other thousands still cling to their homes and refuse to leave. Beds, stoves and other furniture have been carried to the roofs and there these stoical people eat and sleep and sigh as they wait for the waters to fall. In many cases, chickens, pigs and cows are with them on the housetops. Should the waters rise to where they are encamped these stoics will build rafts, encamp on them and drift whither the winds and currents carry them. Then, indeed, will the death list be swelled to appalling figures. But the prospect is not so dismal, for the waters are falling.

Though worse may come, existing conditions are bad enough. From Cairo, Ill., to Memphis, a distance of nearly 250 miles, the river is over its banks and the average width of submerged land is twenty-five miles. It is a long line of blackness and despair, with the surface of the muddy waters covered with floating timbers, wrecked houses, eddies of bloated dead animals, with an occasional lifeless human being mixed with the debris. Here and there is a mound or housetop. On some of the latter are found suffering, half-starved human beings and on the former small groups of shivering animals, wild and tame. It is not an uncommon thing to see cattle, hogs, sheep, coons, rabbits, deer and bears thus herded together.

The Mississippi is a cruel stream and never a spring passes that does not see it leave its banks and overflow the lowlands. These lands are mostly devoted to the cultivation of wheat and corn in the central section and cotton and sugar in Louisiana and Mississippi. Above Memphis there are no levees to speak of. There are a few, but they are as chaff when the big floods come. Tennessee is but little affected even at the highest stages of the river.

THE COMING OF THE RELIEF BOAT.

SCENE ON PRESIDENT ISLAND, BELOW MEMPHIS.

SCENES ALONG THE RIVER NEAR MEMPHIS.

The banks on the left are high and are supported by rocky hills that creep up almost to the river's edge. The volume of water is therefore thrown with all its terrible force to the unprotected sides of Arkansas' territory, backing up the smaller rivers and streams, causing them to overflow the lakes, thus creating an inland sea that adds new territory to its cruel waste hour by hour until the entire surplus waters of the north have gone to join the salty waves of the southern seas. A few weeks ago the snows began to melt in the Alleghany and Rocky mountains, and this, with the spring rains, caused the little mountain streams to pour great volumes of water into the Missouri, Ohio and Cumberland rivers. These, in turn, swelled the Mississippi into a turbulent torrent, and the waters broke through the levees between Cairo and Memphis and caused a flood greater than has been known in five years.

As soon as the reports reached Memphis and other points, relief boats were sent out to bring the half-drowned people to places of safety. Government boats were ordered out by the War Department. Thus thousands were saved who might have perished from hunger and cold. Nearly 10,000 persons were carried to Memphis alone. Not all the villages, however, are deserted. From some of them, which stand on high ground, and where the water runs through the streets at a depth of only a few feet, none of the residents have departed, but make the best of the situation by plying about in small boats.

Some of the scenes are graphically described by a writer who covered the entire section when the water was at its highest, on a steamer, which made its way slowly over the vast body of water, and stopped wherever human beings were in sight to pick them up. He says:

"In this body of water are occasional spots formed by what under normal conditions are lofty bluffs and high ridges of land. On these are gathered the population for miles about, sleeping and living in the open air or beneath the meager protection of a bit of canvas hoisted above them on strips of lumber or rough driftwood snatched from the encircling waters. Hunger, sickness, privation, loss of life and property abound. Hundreds of these Southern settlers remain in the inundated districts and battle stubbornly with the resistless waters, clinging tenaciously to their few belongings, and loth to leave the old spots which have become endeared to them.

"Hundreds of others view with indifference the rising waters, and remove from first floors to second floors, and at last to floating rafts and slowly withdraw to higher points, only to be again pushed back. The apparent indifference of some of these people is astounding. They have always lived in the same spot, and when offers are made to remove them to places of safety, they shake their heads and refuse to be aided. With sacks of corn carefully preserved, and with an occasional rabbit or bird, they eke out a scant existence. To them a place of safety is a strange land in which they have no kindred, and where existence can only be secured by exertion. They have passed through other periods of flood and managed to 'live through it somehow,' and the most graphic description of the horrors to come fails to move them. 'The water will drap bimeby,' they say.

"The situation is worst about fifty miles above Memphis. There the water stretches as far as the eye can see. It is nearly forty miles across at this point. Little settlements are indicated by the tops of rough board roofs, which protrude from the water, and which the boat passes slowly. On some higher points, men, women and children, cows, pigs, chickens, and even horses are to be seen huddled together and clustered about stoves, which have been carried out on roofs. A dugout canoe or two is usually pulled up beside these roofs, and the former occupants lie basking in the sun, some blessing God for its warmth, while others grumble and curse nature for the abundance of water. Some of the queerest sights to be seen are where the settlers take to what they call the 'scaffolding plan.' Groups of four or five houses stand among the trees, in which the stoves, rough beds and a kitchen table are raised on scaffolds so close to the roofs of the houses that the occupants are obliged to stoop over as they stand on floating platforms leaning over the stove or table. The women and children are forced to lie on the bed while the head of the house cruises about the vicinity and gathers driftwood to be dried and used for fuel."

IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF PADUCAH.

The flood of 1892 destroyed growing crops and property to the value of $20,000,000. The present cannot be even approximately estimated, but it will far exceed that of five years ago. From St. Louis to Cairo, all of that immense basin that was created by the earthquake fifty years ago, is deep enough to swim a steamboat. This section embraces a remarkably big part of the wheat fields of southern Illinois and Missouri. The submerged farms may be entirely useless for grain purposes for the remainder of the year. It takes growing wheat a long time to recover from a flood, however short the period may be that it has suffered. So if the Missouri and Illinois valleys are not instantly drained the fall wheat crop there is gone. But it is south of Cairo and clear down to New Orleans where the real damage is now being done. That is the part of the country that lies unprotected, where millions of acres of fertile fields and hundreds of homes belonging to the laboring people are absolutely at the mercy of the remorseless waters.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

A Week's Proceedings in the Halls of Congress—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—An Impartial Resume of the Business.

The National Solons.

The tariff bill was thrown open for amendment under the five-minute rule in the House Friday, but seven weary hours of work only served to dispose of nine of the 162 pages of the bill. Three slight committee amendments were adopted, one of which was to increase the duty on white lead from 2½ to 3 cents a pound, the rate in the act of 1890. The present duty is 1½ cents. In the Senate Mr. Gallinger (Rep.) of Nebraska presented several forms issued by the civil service commission to substantiate his recent statement that certain applicants for office were required to hop on one foot for twelve feet. The Senator read the "hopping" provision and several other questions as to the weight and height of the typesetters, which he characterized as absurd. Referring to the size and weight requirement Mr. Gallinger said: "Phil Sheridan could not have served the government if the civil service commission had got at him." The matter was referred to the Civil Service Committee. Adjourned to Monday.

In the House Saturday, only five more of the 162 pages of the bill were disposed of, making fourteen pages in two of the five days allowed for consideration under the five-minute rule. Only five amendments were adopted, all of minor importance, and each an amendment of the ways and means committee. Fully two hours were spent in the discussion of whether the foreigner or consumer paid the tax. If more progress is not made night sessions may be held. Senator Warren of Wyoming, in conference with the Republican members of the Senate committee on finance on schedules affecting Western interests, made some suggestions concerning third-class wools, looking more, however, to a change in adjustment than a change of rates.

The House Monday, without a quorum, continued debate of the tariff bill, but made little progress. The Senate resolution appropriating $250,000 for immediate use on the Mississippi, amended so as to carry $140,000 for clerk hire for members to July 1, $20,000 for miscellaneous expenses of the House and $1,000,000 customs deficiencies, was adopted, and at 5:25 the House adjourned. In the Senate a bill was reported favorably to prevent kinetoscope exhibitions of prize fights. Mr. Caffery of Louisiana secured favorable consideration of a joint resolution on making immediately available $250,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River from the head of the passes to the mouth of the Ohio River. The appropriation is to be deducted from the $2,500,000 given to the Mississippi River by the last river and harbor appropriation bill. The bill was passed confirming the compromise made between the officers of the government and the authorities of Arkansas relating to mutual claims. At 12:50 p. m. the Senate went into executive session on the arbitration treaty.

Tuesday was the last day for debate of the tariff bill in the House, and no other business was done. A number of amendments were adopted, but not one-third of the whole bill had been considered when debate closed. In the Senate Senator Allen, of Nebraska, made a long speech on the constitutionality of tariff taxes beyond those requisite for revenue. The House amendments to the Senate joint resolution appropriating $250,000 for the saving of life and property along the Mississippi River were agreed to. Among the petitions was one from the Board of Sheep Commissioners of Montana urging the most ample protection on wool, in accordance with the platform promises, and asserting that the policy of protection would not long prevail without this adequate protection to the wool growing interest.

The House Wednesday adopted the Grosvenor amendment to the Dingley tariff bill, and then by a vote of 205 to 122 passed the bill itself. The amendment gives the bill immediate effect, thus making the measure retroactive upon imports already here, but yet in bond. The President sent to the Senate the following, among other nominations of postmasters: John A. Childs, Evanston, Ill.; Joseph C. Weir, Rantoul, Ill.; William T. Pritchard, Franklin, Ind.; John W. Beard, Converse, Ind.; Henry L. Chesley, Sutherland, Iowa; James W. Perkinpaugh, Olivia, Minn.; F. P. Corrick, Cozad, Neb.; Clifford B. McCoy, Coshocton, Ohio; E. A. Deardorff, New Philadelphia, Ohio; William F. Bishop, Peshtigo, Wis.

In the Senate Thursday four Cuban resolutions were presented. The most important, by Mr. Morgan, declares that a state of war exists, and announces the policy of this country to accord both parties to the conflict full recognition as belligerents. This will be acted upon at a future day. Two others of the resolutions call for information; both were adopted. The third proposed a protest to the trial by drumhead court martial of Gen. Riviera. The tariff bill passed by the House was referred to the Finance Committee. A joint resolution directing the use of a war vessel to transport relief to India's famine districts was agreed to, and the Senate adjourned to Monday. No business was done by the House.

OUTSIDE THE GATE.

I'll not confer with Sorrow
Till to-morrow;
But Joy shall have her way
This very day.

Ho! eglantine and cresses
For her tresses!
Let Care, the beggar, wait
Outside the gate.

Tears if you will—but after
Mirth and laughter;
Then, folded hands on breast
And endless rest.

"As the Angels."

BY EMMA A. LENTE.

"There's simply no use in stopping here any longer, Fred. We've exhausted the place."

"Think so, old man? Now, I don't."

"Well, what is there to stay for?"

"Look there, Morris; the answer is visible."

The "there" was a wide expanse of field, stream, forest, lake and mountain. The vantage ground was a grassy hillside dotted with trees. Under the shade of the grandest maple reclined the young men who had been undecided where to spend their vacation, and had drifted to this spot on their wheels, led by the glowing description of a friend as to the charming scenery and the quaint lovableness of the inhabitants.

"They will take you into their hearts as well as their homes," he had said. "You will be asked to high tea, and if there's a wedding you will be invited as surely as if you were near of kin; at a funeral, you will be expected to mourn with those that mourn. It is a sweet, primitive place now; it will be spoiled when the tourists find it."

And so, scarce caring where they went, as long as it was away from city sights and sounds, Fred White and Morris Garth, one a writer, the other a bank clerk, had come to the little nook among the hills in the up-country.

They found a boarding place with a Quaker family, consisting of a widowed mother, with a son and daughter. The house was a fit habitation for the quiet, gentle Friends. It was set in a large garden, filled to profusion with old-time, always-sweet blossoms. There were stately hollyhocks of gorgeous hue, balm and sweet williams, spice pinks and bachelor's buttons, and day lilies. The front door had a heavy metal knocker which, when struck, brought to the porch the mistress of the house, who, whether to friend or stranger, would always say:

"Thee is very welcome; walk in."

The young tourists, on accepting this invitation, stepped into a cool, shadowy hall, fragrant with spice pinks, and then were shown to upper rooms, where all the belongings were simple but spotlessly clean.

"Everything seems like Sunday afternoon, Fred, even our gentle landlady. There seems to be a sort of sacred calm about the house. I wonder if a fellow could have a smoke?"

The supper, to which they sat down with the family, was abundant and delicious. The son, who ate hurriedly and disappeared, was a clerk in the one store of the community; the daughter, very childlike and quaint, said nothing except the words necessary in serving the meal, but her quiet, "Will thee have some more berries?" or, "Hadn't thee better try the sponge cake?" seemed to be very persuasive.

After supper they all sat on the porch through the long summer evening, and were like old friends by bed-time. The tired travellers were soon asleep, but the simple country girl lay long awake, thinking of the wonderful things she had heard of the great outside world and the people who lived in it.

The days went by without a break in their monotony till Morris Garth, thoroughly rested, felt like going on to gayer scenes; but his companion seemed loth to move farther than a few hours' spin from the little hamlet.

One morning Garth received a letter which, for him, decided the matter.

"Awfully sorry to break up with you, old man, but I've got a summons from my brother, Ross. He's coming north two weeks sooner than expected, and I must meet him at once, so as not to lose a day of his company. Won't you come home with me?"

"Thank you, no. Go to your brother without a thought of me. I'll stop here a day or two longer, and perhaps write a bit. I didn't mean to, but I've one or two ideas that may be caught."

"All right, old man; don't let them escape. I wonder if little Rachel will miss me any? What a quaint child she is!"

She watched the young wheelman ride away with tears in her gray eyes, then, turning to Fred White, said, naively:

"But thee is not going. I am so glad!"

"Why? Are you very lonely when no one is here?"

"We didn't use to be; we should be now—thy friend and thee have so kindly talked to us, and let me have the pretty magazines, and all. I have learned so much from thee! Please tell me some more of the world and its ways."

"I do not want to make you restless and discontented, little one. The great world is not as good a place for soul and body as this."

"But thee likes it better? Thee would not like to stay here always, would thee, just here?"

"No; my place is outside, in the whirl and hurry. But I like this retreat now."

He might be pardoned for saying it. The vine-wreathed porch, with the sunbeams flickering through on the yellow-painted floor, the mingled sounds of bird and bee and cicada on every side, the easy rocker, and, more than all, the little gray-eyed Quaker girl, with blushes wavering over her sensitive face, who sat opposite, eagerly drinking in every word. No wonder he was lured on to tell her of all the beautiful places where he had been; of museums and picture galleries, of concerts and operas, of oceans and rivers and ships, of palaces and jewels and silks.

"And thee has seen it all! Oh, I think I shall die if I may not see it, too!"

"Possibly you may, when you are grown up."

"Grown up? I do not think I shall ever be very large."

"Well, you have the most of your life before you at any rate. No one knows what may happen; but let me say you will never be any safer or happier than you are right here."

"Would thee like to go to our meeting?" said Mrs. Russell, the next Sabbath morning. "It may be a silent meeting; we can never tell. But, mayhap, thee would find it helpful."

"Certainly I'll go. May I ride my wheel?"

"Thee might, but I wish thee wouldn't. It savors too much of the world for the Lord's day, don't thee think? There is room in the wagon with us, and thee is very welcome."

"Thank you; I will come with you. But why is one wheel more worldly than four wheels?"

Gentle Mrs. Russell thought a moment, and said, with a smile:

"Really, friend, I cannot tell, only a wagon does not appear so unseemly; at least, it does not attract so much attention."

It bade fair to be a silent meeting indeed, save for the song and twitterings of birds in the trees. The men sat on one side of the white-walled room, enjoying, perhaps, the only wakeful hour of absolute rest they had during the busy summer's week; the women sat in long rows opposite, looking so demure and spotless in their soft gray attire, that it seemed to the critical worldling who watched them that they could have no sins to repent of, no shortcomings to bewail.

The silence was growing oppressive when an old man rose slowly in his place, and with closed eyes, and hands clasping the rail in front of him, began to speak. After he had ended a few moments' silence seemed to be the benediction, and all arose, gravely shaking hands, feeling strangely strengthened and comforted.

"I'm glad Friend Royce felt called upon to speak to-day," said Mrs. Russell, on the way home. "It's a helpful thing to be instructed by one so near to the Kingdom as he is. He's eighty-two years old, and has always lived in the faith. Did thee enjoy the meeting, friend?"

"I was much interested in it, Mrs. Russell."

The young people sat on the porch that night, watching a glowing sunset.

"If it is wicked to love gay and beautiful things," Rachel said, "why does the sky look like that?"

"My dear child, it is right to love all beautiful things! Who says it is wicked?"

"I've always wanted a dress, pink, like that palest bit of cloud there, but it would be sinful for me to wear it; it is sinful for me to want one, or a bonnet with flowers on it."

"Rachel is getting some vain notions," said her brother. "I feel sometimes that the Friends are too strict, though I ought not to say it."

The mother came out and sat in the glowing light. On her face was such a look of full content and serenity that the restless questioning died away, and over them all settled the holy peace of the Sabbath evening.

The following week there was excitement in the little hamlet. It was caused by a marriage; and not only the kindred but the near neighbors were bidden to it, as a matter of course.

"Thee was specially mentioned, Friend White," said Mrs. Russell, when Fred declined going. "They are not of our people, but they are very worthy. They would feel hurt if thee did not come."

And so he walked with his hostess and her daughter to the wedding, feeling half amused, and half impatient with himself for being decidedly nervous. The simple ceremony was soon over, and the cake and currant wine passed, and then in the smiling sunshine the bridal party rode away to their new home across the hills to the westward.

Rachel had been intently curious. She had hardly breathed during the service, and her cheeks were rose-red, and her eyes almost black. But as she sat on the porch after tea she looked unusually pale and weary. Here little hands were clasped, and she was watching the fading light. At last she said slowly:

"Will thee be married some time, Friend White?"

Fred started at the unexpected question.

"Why, I don't know, child. Possibly I may."

"Marriage is a solemn thing, isn't it? And beautiful."

"Solemn, certainly, and I hope beautiful to those who engage in the venture. Do you ever expect to marry, little one?"

"I cannot say. That is as the Lord wills."

"You will make a sweet wife for some fortunate man in a few years. And I will send you a beautiful wedding present, with my best wishes."

A flush came and went, leaving her paler than before, and she said quietly:

"In heaven they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels. That is best, after all, doesn't thee think?"

"Yes, for the dwellers in heaven. But we are on the earth; and may God give thee the best of all it can supply!" he said, falling half unconsciously into the sweet Quaker speech, and feeling his heart strangely stirred.

Another and another week went by, and Fred White still lingered among the hills. He was not wasting his time entirely, for he had written and sent off two short stories; but there was a chair and desk waiting for him in the sanctum of his brother-in-law, and Morris Garth would chaff him unmercifully if he ever found out how long he had tarried in the up-country.

Why he stayed he could not tell, unless it was to keep a pair of gray, childlike eyes from running over with bitter tears; but he must break away soon, he kept saying to himself. Little Rachel would miss him; she had few interests in her narrow life; but childish griefs are quickly lightened, and he would sometimes send her the magazines she found so delightful.

"I really think I must leave soon," he said to Mrs. Russell.

They were sitting on the porch one afternoon, while Rachel was far down the garden walk, gathering flower seeds.

"We shall miss thee sorely. I wanted to ask thee something. What does thee think of my Rachel?" Her voice trembled, but before he could answer, if indeed in his surprise he had known what to say, she went on. "I've blinded my eyes all I could, because I couldn't endure to see what's coming; but Friend Newell, who was here to-day, says she has failed very much; she's not seen her since spring. She thinks we ought to have a doctor. Does thee think that she is fading away—my Rachel?"

"My dear Mrs. Russell, no! She doesn't complain or even cough, does she?"

"No, oh, no! She never is really ill, but so tired always of late; thee must have noticed how little she eats; and her sleep is much broken."

"But she is so young, Mrs. Russell. She will soon outgrow this weakness. She ought to have advice and a tonic, however."

"She's been taking a strengthening medicine right along for months. I hoped she was better; I couldn't see she had changed so much."

"Probably she hasn't; don't worry about what that visitor said; she was very indiscreet, and also mistaken. Children often grow too fast, you know, and when your daughter is grown up, she may be as strong as any one."

"Why, Rachel is grown up! She is nearly twenty."

"Mrs. Russell! I thought she was about fourteen or so. She seems like a child to me."

"I know she is small, but I can't hope for her to grow taller—or stronger, I'm afraid. Her father and all his people were frail and short-lived. Hush! She's coming."

Rachel came up the walk, flushed with her exertions and bright and happy over some exquisite blossoms she had found. The mother's spirits rose as she looked critically at her. Friend Newell had been mistaken, and she herself had been foolish to disturb her genial boarder with her forebodings.

For he did look disturbed. He was thinking of many things which Rachel, in her child-like innocence had said; of words he had spoken lightly, thinking they fell on childish ears; but now he feared they had sunk into a woman's heart. She was frail and ethereal looking, surely. The flush soon died away from her delicate cheeks, and the sparkle out of her eyes, and her hands were such tiny hands! Poor little Rachel Carew!

The parting came next day. It was a sad thing, but it had been more cruel to defer it. Fred White was not so sure as once he had been that the child would cry her eyes out and then get over it; now he feared she might cry her heart out. Yet he had really no cause to reproach himself, unless it might be for tarrying so long; and no comfort to give, but to promise to come back next summer, and to write sometimes and send her papers.

He looked back from his wheel at the turn of the road, but Rachel was now standing where he had left her at the end of the porch, with quivering lips that could not steady themselves to bid him good-by, and that he did not dare to kiss; for she was not a child.

His heart was heavy as he rode over the hills and down through the valleys, and it would not have been lighter had he seen the little Quaker maiden, when her storm had passed, lying like a wilted flower on the lounge in the lonely, shadowy best room. Poor little Rachel Carew!

About five months later, among the letters placed one morning on Fred White's desk, was one addressed in unfamiliar writing. Feeling a prescient thrill, he opened it:

"Friend White—Dear Sir: I write a line to say thee need not trouble to send any books nor flowers no more for my Rachel, for she has gone away. She left us New Year day. It is the Lord's will, but it has made us nigh heartbroken. Thee has been kind, so kind! She said to tell thee so, and to give thee her dear love, with thanks for all thy remembrance.

"Faithfully thine,
"RUTH CAREW."

In how few words can tragedies be told!

The man laid his face down on the letter, wetting it with sudden tears, and said brokenly:

"Dear little Rachel! Blest little Rachel! Far happier than to have remained here, for now and forever she is 'as the angels.'"—Waverly Magazine.

A Bloodhound's Keen Scent.

A remarkable exhibition of the keenness of scent of the bloodhound was given at the little town of Bronson, in Allen County, the other day. The town recently appropriated $100 out of the city treasury for the purchase of one of these animals, the purpose being the detection and capture of thieves who were operating in the neighborhood, and a test of the hound was considered desirable. At noon three men started out on foot and walked four miles into the country. Then they mounted horses, and by a circuitous route returned to the town. Six hours later the hound was permitted to smell a glove which had been worn by one of the men, and the next instant with a deep growl he caught up the trail and followed it on the run. At one point the men had walked for thirty yards on a fence, and when the hound came to this point he carried his nose along the rail with hardly any reduction of speed. Coming to the place where the men had mounted he took up the trail of the horses and followed it into town, where, in a crowd of more than 100 men, he picked out the one whose glove had been given him to smell.—Kansas City Journal.

Jubilee.

Jubilee, according to the Jewish definition, denotes every fiftieth year, being that following the revolution of seven weeks of years, at which time all the slaves were made free, and all lands reverted to their ancient owners. The jubilees were not observed after the Babylonish captivity.

THEATER OF THE ANCIENT GREEKS.

THE heroic little nation which has attracted the attention of the whole world by its fearless action in Crete is really the mother of all the arts and sciences of modern times. Especially is the Greek the mother of the drama. Athens was the seat of dramatic progress, and it was there that all the literary talent of the nation was enlisted in its service. The arrangement of the theater and its origin is full of interest. It seems probable that its inception was a mere platform, with a sheet of cloth stretched up behind it for a sounding board, the spectators seating themselves as best they could. Then came a wooden theater, which fell down in the year 500 B. C. It was replaced by a stone building at Athens soon after the Persian war, and many of the other states followed her example. The theater at Athens had no roof. A semicircle of seats as an amphitheater was traversed by radiating gangways. The lower rows were reserved for state dignitaries and the judges who decided the merits of the play. Before them was a semi-elliptic or semi-circular "orchestra," with an altar, called the thymele, in the center. The chorus executed its movements there, and during the acting took definite places around the thymele. Behind this at a greater elevation was the proscenium, which may be described as in form a long, shallow box with an open front. The walls served for scenes, whether landscape or palace. The sides were furnished with scenery painted on triangular prisms, called periaktoi, mounted on vertical pivots, revolving as a change of scene was called for. The first scene painter who applied the principles of drawing in perspective with light and shade effects to the stage did so at Athens about 400 B. C. "Properties" were not unknown, as thunder and lightning were represented, and Euripides had real trees on the stage in one of his plays.

PRINTERS IN HARD LINES.

Typesetting Machines Have Put Hundreds Out of Work.

What becomes of all the pins? is a question that has puzzled economists for generations. Millions are made every year, and yet the world is not overstocked. What has become of the printers since the introduction of typesetting machines? is a question far more interesting and important.

During the past five years typesetting machines have been set up in the city printing offices all over the country, and in the city of Chicago alone there are over 200 of them. Each of these machines does the work of three men. It takes but one man to run each machine; consequently there are 400 printers in Chicago bereft of work because of the substitution of machine for hand composition. All of the daily newspapers use machines; all of the book-publishing houses likewise have them; a few of the job printing establishments employ them upon pamphlet and circular work; one concern does straight composition on machines for various job printing houses at a reduction in price from that formerly allowed for hand composition.

The situation, from the printer's point of view, is growing worse daily. The weight of years is telling upon the majority. The younger among them have succeeded in mastering the art of typesetting by machinery, but the older members of the craft have found it difficult if not impossible to do so. In view of the new order of things the employers, in co-operation with the Typographical Union, have reduced the hours of labor so that a larger number of printers may find employment. The average duration of a machine printer's labor is seven hours daily, while he is permitted to work but six days a week. This gives opportunity for the employment of a considerable number of substitutes, who thus manage to earn enough to subsist upon. On two other days in each week the machine operators are permitted, if they choose, to put on substitutes. At the present time all are urged to exercise this privilege, although no effort is made to compel them to do so.

No trade requires of those who follow it as high a degree of intelligence and as wide a scope of general information as "the art preservative." Not only must a printer be able to read and write readily, but he must also understand the rules of grammatical construction in order that he may correct the blunders that may creep into his copy. He must have a knowledge of history and of men who make and have made it. He must be familiar with the record of passing events, and have at least a smattering of the arts and sciences. He must be quick to detect errors that others make and ready with a substitute for an imperfect or inelegant sentence. Many a writer has been saved from humiliation by the kindly interposition of the printer whose task it has been to put his manuscript into print.

It is not surprising, therefore, that with these qualifications many hundreds of printers have graduated into other avocations which are regarded as occupying a higher industrial plane. On nearly all of the daily newspapers of Chicago practical printers find scope for their talent. A majority of the managers, editorial writers and workers who have made the Chicago newspapers what they are—the greatest in the world—served successively as printers' devils, compositors and writers.

One result of the coming of the typesetting machines has been a great increase in the number of small job printing offices throughout the city, with a small job press, a couple of fonts of body type and a fair assortment of job type suitable for card, bill head and circular work. An enterprising and industrious man can earn a good living. From neighboring tradesmen and professional men he can procure work enough to keep him busy and net, in most cases, more than he could earn at the case. Many of these printers are increasing their facilities year by year, and when old age overtakes them will be in possession of a business that will assure them a competence if not comparative wealth. They are pursuing a course that merits reward, at any rate.

One gratifying fact in connection with the printing craft is the gradual decrease of late years of that class known as the tramp. He seldom makes his appearance in Chicago. Intemperance, which has always been the greatest foe of the printer, is decreasing. Employers demand reliable men, and these being plentiful there is no room for the bummer. When any such come to the city they soon discover that their chances of obtaining employment are meager, and they betake themselves to other fields.

Acknowledging the fact that machine typesetting has wrought a revolution in their craft the printers generally face the situation with fortitude and even cheerfulness. Those who can do so are qualifying themselves as operators; those whose years preclude them from attempting to learn what is practically a new trade are looking about them for other means of earning a living. Hundreds have sought the smaller towns where the typesetting machine is yet a dream and where its cost will keep it in banishment for many years to come. A few—a very few—have surrendered to an inexorable fate and have gone to the Childs-Drexel printers' home at Colorado Springs, but the vast majority are battling manfully with fate and will continue to battle until "the jig is up."

She Reads Hieroglyphics.

Mrs. James Robottom, of Jersey City, is an indefatigable student of everything Egyptian, having made such progress in her work that the great Egyptologists of France and Germany have written to urge her to complete her investigations by an extended stay in the land of the Pyramids. Ten years ago somebody loaned Mrs. Robottom "One Thousand Miles Up the Nile." She read it while convalescing from an illness, and became so enamored with the subject that she has pursued it vigilantly from that day to this. She has lectured in Jersey City and Brooklyn several times, and has been invited to speak at Cornell. One of her talks is about Queen Hatasee, a legend of whom adorns one side of the obelisk in Central Park. This Queen was the daughter of one of the warrior kings of Egypt. Mrs. Robottom reads these legends easily, having long since familiarized herself with hieroglyphics.

NOTES ABOUT SCHOOLS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

Proper Way to Teach Geography—Famous Pictures Are Powerful Educators—The Teacher Should Not Resort to Sarcasm.

Ways of Teaching Geography.

The teacher of geography who makes the study consist wholly or even chiefly in learning the location of places, fixing in the memory and reproducing map forms and memorizing the fragmentary and juiceless bits of information furnished by the text-book makes almost as great a mistake as that made by some of the extremely "modern" teachers of this branch who go to the other extreme and present little more than a succession of disconnected stories of remarkable scenes, and peculiar occupations and modes of life in remote and unimportant lands.

The one method is deadening because it lacks in human interest, the other is debilitating because it lacks the element of serious work. Pupils taught by the first learn map symbols without knowing what they mean; those taught by the second have a jumble of "vivid pictures" as unsubstantial and unrelated as the impressions they get from "Alice in Wonderland" or "The Arabian Nights." A hazy, nebulous mass of facts relating chiefly to the strange and picturesque things in foreign and unfrequented countries, however much entertainment the child may get in the presentation of such matter, is not of much real value, and should not be regarded as geographic knowledge. But the wise teacher will avoid both extremes; he will teach only a reasonable amount of map work, but having decided in his own mind what is reasonable for the particular class in hand will require that the tracing and sketching lessons carefully selected shall be thoroughly learned. Then he will supplement the descriptive text with whatever may be needed to illuminate and vivify the lessons. Such supplementary matter will be definitely associated with the map, so that in the child's mind the knowledge thus imparted shall have a local habitation.

It is seldom wise to read a long selection or make a long talk, however interesting it may be, without making frequent pauses to question the pupils on the meaning, refer to the map, or have the substance of a paragraph stated, in order to insure attention.—Western Teacher.

Procession of the Holidays.

As I gazed down the path of the year, I descried
A wondrous procession, which passed by my side.
And if you will listen, I will tell of each one
Of the merry paraders, whose long line began
With the bright, youthful New Year, leading on with a nod,
St. Valentine's day and the little blind god.

What next do I see? Ah, that story absurd
Of George and the hatchet—we'll give it a word.
But of all the paraders, comes hither the worst,
With his dunce cap, the symbol of April the First.
Arbor Day now advances with promise of spring,
Of seed-time and bird-time, and every good thing.

With the pure lily emblems, bright Easter comes by,
And then, ere 'tis vanished, we hear the glad cry,
"All hail to the May Queen," and lo! she comes on,
As fair as the morning and bright as the dawn.
But sad is the contrast—with gentle heart sore,
Comes Liberty, mourning her martyrs of war.

Now, after old Time has passed on a brief space,
Comes "the glorious Fourth," with a smile on his face.
Next, clothed in his garments of toil, we behold
Honest Labor Day marching with step free and bold.
And then at the end of the column we see
Thanksgiving and Christmas, both brimming with glee.

A Silent Educator.

A photograph or lithograph of a famous picture hung in a classroom is a silent but powerful educator of the taste of pupils. The teacher may be asked something about the picture by some thoughtful pupil; if not, the attention of the pupils may be called to it after a time. They may be told something about the artist, wherein he excels as a painter, where the original painting is at present, and various other interesting things connected with the artist's name. Sketches done by the teacher may be placed upon the wall, for instance, sketches of the three orders of Greek architecture or of some of the decorations of the Parthenon. These sketches upon paper with sepia will give an artistic and refined aid to any room. A glass bowl into which may be placed (with a care to the arrangement) the flowers which the pupils bring will help to nourish a taste for artistic arrangement of flowers that is of great value. In fact, anything that can strengthen in the pupils a love for painting everywhere so much the stronger is the barricade against evil.—School Journal.

Sarcasm.

The sarcastic teacher! Does she never dream of the harm she does? She would be aghast at the thought of "whipping" a child, of degrading and brutalizing his higher nature by the use of force. Does she never suspect that the weapon she uses is a thousand times more brutalizing and degrading to all that is good in the child than the rod could ever be? Some day an angry and insulted pupil will give back to her as good as she sends, and she will be horrified at his impudence, not realizing that she alone is to blame for it. Some sins are venial, but for a teacher to sharpen her wits upon her pupils is not a venial sin; it is mortal. Sarcasm kills sympathy, confidence and love, and in return it can create nothing but hatred, distrust and malice.—School Education.

In Institute.

When your instructor is explaining some difficult point or has given his opinion on some disputed question, do not keep up a running comment in a half audible tone with some neighbor equally thoughtless as yourself. It is disrespectful to the instructor and the other teachers. It is a commentary upon your own ill manners, and is beneath the dignity of any one who is supposed to have ordinary politeness.—Exchange.

Results Disappointing.

President Eliot, of Harvard, thinks the results of our school system are disappointing with regard to the training of the people in reasoning power. "A democracy," he says, "needs a diffused reasoning power. It cannot be safe otherwise. If one singular fallacy could be removed from the people's mind, the country would be safe. It is the inability to perceive always what precedes a result, what is the real reason, which produces a certain result. If we could find a way of instructing our children as to this fallacy, it would be a great means of safety, and the only way is through the grammar school program. There is at present no subject taught in the grammar school which leads to the improvement of the reasoning power or the power of observing and drawing proper inferences. Arithmetic doesn't do it, for arithmetic is a precise and accurate science, and is not available in the ordinary uses of life. The exigencies of life are changeable and uncertain, and arithmetic is the very opposite. To my mind, there is no more useless study in the grammar school than arithmetic."

Busy Work Devices.

Give pupils each a small box and a foot-rule, let them measure the box and write down the dimensions as follows:

Length of one side equals
Breadth of side equals
Area of one side equals
Area of both sides equals
Length of end equals
Breadth of end equals
Area of one end equals
Area of both ends equals
Length of top equals
Breadth of top equals
Area of tops equals
Area of bottom equals
Area of top and bottom equals
Area of entire surface equals

Archbishop Langevin decides to reopen the parochial schools in Manitoba and maintain them by private subscriptions.

The faculty of Mount Holyoke College recently announced that John D. Rockefeller had given the college $40,000 for a dormitory.

The largest class in chemistry ever known at the University of Vermont, numbering about seventy, is now making use of new facilities in the three chemical laboratories.

The legislative committee on education, of Hartford, Conn., decided to report in favor of granting a pension of $1,200 per year to Dr. Henry Barnard, the veteran educator, who is now 87 years old.

The people of Walden, N. Y., are much concerned about the proposition to do away with the use of blackboards in the public schools. The reason given for abolishing blackboards is that they are injurious to the eyes of children.

At the fall elections of the seventy-two county superintendents in Wisconsin, fifty were re-elected. Of the twenty-two new superintendents elected, five are ladies, making a total of thirteen lady county superintendents in the State.

The American University in Washington under the direction of the Methodist church, will have cost, when completed, from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. Twenty-six buildings will stud an expanse of ninety acres. The hall of history now being built will cost $200,000. The land cost $100,000.

The reply of Dr. Morgan, of Oberlin, to a student who asked him, whether he could not shorten his course of study for the ministry, is, at least, suggestive. "When," Dr. Morgan said, "God wishes to make an oak, He takes many years to complete it; if he would make a squash, only a few weeks are necessary."—Presbyterian Banner.

W. C. MacDonald, the millionaire tobacco manufacturer of Montreal, who has already given $1,500,000 to McGill University, has just made a further donation of $600,000 to that institution. Of this amount $450,000 is for the erection of a building for chemistry and mining and metallurgy, and for the endowment of chairs of architecture and mining and metallurgy.

The British Royal Commission on secondary education suggests that the universities are the proper institutions to take up the task of giving the professional education required for teachers of academies and high schools, as has already been done by two Scotch universities. The science of education ought to be studied where other branches of mental and moral philosophy are fully handled by the ablest professors.—School Review.

A committee of fifty-one, one from each Senatorial District of Illinois, was appointed at the late meeting of the State association, with Joseph Errant, Esq., member Chicago Board of Education, as chairman, to secure legislation from the present General Assembly to enable school boards to purchase text-books in the open market, and loan them free to pupils in the public schools, the pupils to have the option of purchasing them at the actual cost to the board.

The inestimable value of properly conducted fire-drill in school has recently been demonstrated in the case of one of the Brooklyn schools. The presence of mind of the teacher, together with the training previously given to the children, undoubtedly prevented a panic. A pupil threw a lighted match into a waste paper basket, and the flames spread at once. The teacher formed her pupils into line and had them file out as if going for recess. Meantime, the flames were put out.

Horseflesh Popular in Germany.

Horseflesh appears to be a popular food in the larger towns of Germany. According to an official statement, 7,620 horses were slaughtered in Berlin and 2,284 in Breslau, while more than 1,000 were sold at Munich, Dresden, Magdeburg and Cologne respectively. The total number of horses slaughtered and consumed in Germany during 1896 reached the astonishing figure of 18,164.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..... APRIL 8, 1897

PRESS DECEIVES AGAIN

The Press is lame again, this time in both feet, in its remarks about Sheriff Ralston and Sheriff Stroh. It says the reason that Ralston returned that $2 per diem court fees into the treasury was because the fees of the office amounted to more than the statutory salary of $2,200." Here is where the Press continues to try to deceive. The fees may have amounted to that much, but the fees "collected" did not. Mr. Ralston did not get all his salary till last fall, two years after he went out of office.

Here is what Mr. Ralston himself says: "There was no time during my term of office, but what the county was owing me. And when I went out in November '94, the county owed me $800.96. I did not get all that was due me till December, '96"

The facts are, Mr. Ralston obeyed the law, which requires all fees, of all kinds, to be turned into the treasury when collected, no matter whether the county owed him or not. This required him to turn into the treasury, the $2 a day court fees, and he did it, under the belief that an officer of the law, should set the example of obeying the law. Had Ralston kept these fees, or any other, although the county owned him money, he would have violated the law, and been subject to either an indictment or a whitewash. Will the Press and other republican papers show that Stroh likewise obeyed the law? They can easily get his own statement as to the amount of fees he turned over each month, and they can easily find how much he turned over in a lump, in March, after an examination of his accounts by the county commissioners and their attorney. A short, plain statement like this will settle the whole matter Shall we have it?

JUST AS WE EXPECTED.

The Clipper, of course, objects to our conservative course in publishing the report of Expert Ernst. We distinctly stated that we refused to publish the list of uncertain orders, marked "Exhibit E." because so many of them had since been found to be all right, and others might still be found all right. Such publication would no doubt be an injury to innocent parties, as we then said. But the professional ringbuster over at Garrett, objects to this decent course. Hear him:

"The COURIER promised its readers the report of Expert Ernst and the very part of it that would interest the public was left out. The people want to know who held these orders and whether they knew they were raised or not, The COURIER says.

But we refrain from publishing this list because, many of the orders are probably genuine, but because the publication of the names would result in injury to innocent parties.

The idea of an innocent party being injured is, indeed, amusing. The facts are that the machine has compelled Barns to keep these names a secret. He was quick to take the Clipper to task when one of our orders was found to have been raised, and at the same time he did't know whether it was ours or whether it belonged to the Butler Review. But the "innocent party" gag was not on his mind at that time. It looks as though Barns has been taking a full hand with the crooks and no one need be surprised that fraudulent deals will be discovered between himself and the court house looters.

Well, in order to satisfy the longings of the Clipper to have these bad orders exposed, we copy these two, which are, as we are informed, among those for which no bills or other authority have as yet been found."

"No. 1171, Series N.; A. J. Little, $31.22."

"No. 1458, Series N.; A. J. Little, $51.30."

How does the "expose" suit?

"No. 1171 N." was dated on the stub, "July 18, 1894." The "A. J. Little" signed to the stub, is the same handwriting as used in filling out the rest of the stub. Both filling out and signature seem to be in Coffinberry's handwriting. But of that we cannot be certain.

The other order, "No 1458 N." has date on the stub, "Oct. 4, 1894." The signature is in the same handwriting as in No. 1171, but the stub is filled out in Mr. Borst's handwriting. No. bill can be found for either of these orders. Can the Clipper explain these? Does it know who forged these orders, if they were forged? Does it "know who held these orders?" If so, will it please explain, as this "is the very part of it that would interest the public." In other words, Will the Clipper do its share "to explain these fraudulent deals?"

Commissioners Impeached!

The two members, Isaac Hague and J. W. Bateman, charged by the Grand Jury with various short comings.

These include negligence in discovering crookedness of officers; Failure to examine records; Taking pay for services not contemplated by law; Allowing fradulant bills of Surveyor and other officers, etc., etc.

Tuesday's Daily.

The surprise of the session was brought forth this morning, it being a formal impeachment of the Board of Commissioners by the members of the grand jury and the prosecuting attorneys. It seems that the new law just passed under which any officer can be impeached is now in effect and that if an officer is impeached successfully, he will be obliged to pay over to the prosecutor $500, and at once vacate his office. Any citizens can sign charges of impeachment and so call the impeached officers before the court for trial on the charges named. In this case as mentioned above, the grand jury and prosecutors sign it. They are: Geo. Rowe, Jacob Cook, Alex. A. Mason, Michael Eckhart, Peter Coyle, Frank Fisk, A. Eugene Davis, and Frank S. Roby.

The accusations freed from all extra words, are:

That these two members of the Board, Hague and Bateman, had failed to perform their duties as county Commissioners in various ways;

They claim the Board failed to audit the reports of township trustees;

That they failed to inspect the work of the county auditor and secure correct annual settlements, or to see that redeemed county orders were canceled;

That they permitted to be formed, a conspiracy among certain county officers, by which many false orders were issued and put on the public, and failed to discover these forgeries and raised orders:

That they allowed the auditor to issue orders to anyone he chose, and without authority of law,

That they refused to examine the books of the county or see that they were properly kept;

That they illegally allowed pay to W. H. McIntosh for services in auditing the accounts of the county officers;

That they neglected their duty as to bridges, whereby the county lost large sums of money;

That they employed one Jack Hilton to make bridge plans for the county and paid him $75, of which he paid Frank Dills $25, which they say seems to be for Dills' influence in getting him, Hilton, the job;

That they permitted said Hilton and other bridge builders to conspire together to defraud the county, by agreeing on prices too high;

That instead of employing a competent engineer to superintend. the building of bridges, they allowed one of their number to act as superintendent. and allowed him pay for such services without the authority of any law;

That they had made a bad bargain in the contract with Hunter, who called those fees due the county, and which should have been, at least in part collected by the county clerk; and that they failed to object to Hunter's report, and to the books he sold the county, and that they have tried to cover up and conceal this bad bargain.

It is further charged that the Board illegally allowed sallary to C. E. VanAuken when surveyor, by allowing him he was not engaged all those days in full pay for every day in the year, when working for the county, but a part of the time for other parties. And also for allowing said VanAuken $698.51 to other persons for helping him on county ditch work,

That said Board failed to discover the defalcation and raising of orders by Fair;

That when the Board employed Mr. Ernst to investigate county matters and when certain ex-county officers have plead guilty and given punishment, and while others are under indictment said Hague and Bateman, seek to embarrass the bringing of these indicted persons of justice;

That they have taken numerous illegal fees for themselves by holding special sessions and in inspecting bridges.

On these charges, it is now asked that the court call these two men up for trial on impeachment and have their offices vacated and judgment entered against each and in favor of the Prosecutor, for $500.

The hearing of this case is set for Monday of next week. It has caused much heated discussion.

The few things that came into court this morning were of startling character. The court opened at 9 a. m. with Judge Watkins on the bench. The first case called was that of Krontz vs VanAuken, but nothing was done in this. Then the Judge called up the case of the county against the bondsmen of Ex-treasurer Fair. It will be remembered that on Saturday, the attorneys for the bondsmen sprang a surprise on the attorneys for the county by asking that Fair's salary be applied to reduce the $11,000 of Fair's shortage. If this could be done. and it could be shown that Fair had not been paid, each bondsman would have to pay about $150 less to make up the shortage. It opened up so many points of law and other questions, that it was laid over till to-day. And even now Judge McClellan asked for a continuance to give him time to further study the case. As he ceased speaking, Judge Penfield, one of the bondsmen, arose and in effect, fully abandoned the position the bondsmen had taken Saturday, by asking that the case be brought on any time, as he for one was willing to have the county come in and take any judgment against the bondsmen, it thought fair. This was another surprise, but it showed that after considering the questions involved, the bondsmen found that if by that set off they reduced their losses a little; yet they might at the same time, invite other losses they had not foreseen. The bondsmen present retired with him and their attorneys for consultation. A side court held by Judge Watkins in the rear room settled the Krontz-VanAuken case this afternoon. Krontz pays all costs and gets the office.

Yesterday forenoon after the motions we spoke of were out of the way. Judge Penfield took up the case of the state against Charles Clouse for stealing furniture and bedding from Mrs. Freeman's house in Jackson township it is a lively case. The daughter of Mrs. Freeman testified to the articles being her mother's. The court room looked like an "old junk" shop, with the piles of mussed up bedding, feather beds, coffee grinders etc. etc. Mrs. White testified that many of these things were found in her house, and that they had been brought there by Clouse, who sold them to White. There the sheriff found them and took them away. She said Clouse was there when the sheriff came, but kept out of the way till he had gone. (It will be remembered that Mr. and Mrs. White were also suspected of the stealing and White was arrested, and may yet be brought into the case.) Trial went on all day. J. E. Rose defended Clouse, while Davis and Welsheimer conducted the prosecution.

As the Weekly goes to press Wednesday afternoon, the Clouse case is in the hands of the jury.

After the Clouse case was fairly started, Judge Watkins in the rear room, was hearing the case between Krontz and VanAuken, as the parties were now ready to settle, though it took a good while to conclude it. By two o'clock in the afternoon, they were within $6 of settling and a half hour later, they had agreed. Krontz pays all costs made so far, and is to have the office. VanAuken resigns all claim to the office. The other suit as to the nomination of Krontz, and which was to come off some time in Angola, is dismissed. The court ordered VanAuken to restore to Krontz all the furniture of the office which he has been holding so far, and Krontz' title to the office is now complete. He is the surveyor, the office to which he was elected. It settles a difficult case and one that was causing a good deal of trouble. Now people will know what to do, when they want that kind of work done, and where to go for it. And the Board of commissioners will be able to see their way clear to pay the surveyor.

A Well-Known Clergyman Rejoices Because His Son Is Saved.

A noted devine wishing his name suppressed writes: "Yenowine saved my only son from an ignolbe lot. As a youth he was indiscreet and his case was deplorable. Your remedy appeared as a ministering angle, and in June he will marry one of the brightest girls of my flock. Will send you a picture of my first gradchild. God bless you and Yenowine. A Truthful Statement.

An excellent and invaluable remedy, for the cure of cough, cold and hoarseness, is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and Mr. Jas. Hadfield, 350 West St., New York City, verifies this statement. He writes: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is a most excellent remedy for cough, cold and hoarseness, and I take great pleasure in recommending it to all, who require such a valuable household medicine." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

The Last Day of School.

Last Friday the patrons and patron's friends, gathered at the Pyles school house to the number of seventy-three and at once took charge of the school house, and placing boards across the desks, spread a feast "fit for a king." While all of this was taking place the teacher, Herman L. Brown was standing around like a "josh" at the World's fair. He was so surprised that he could not say his soul was his own. But when taken to the table he did it a justice such as he is capable of doing.

After a part of the bountiful feast had been devoured and the table had been removed from the house, all proceeded to the school yard and engaged in a few games of black man, ring-around a rosy, snap and catch 'em, etc.

Now it was the teachers time to "surprise the surprisers." After getting in the school room and getting seated (as many as could,) he treated them with a literary program well interspersed with music.

Next, the teacher presented the school with a beautiful picture, and after the audience sang, "God be with you till we meet again," they were dismissed and thus closed a successful school-year. Each one went away with a "I am glad I was there," kind of a look, that seemed to say, "May we have many more times just like this."

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any person, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is orpid and slug ish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Hea ache, Indigestion Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store.

Important to Reason Your Future Interest!

EVERY Breeder and Stock Raiser seems slow to consider his best interests. When market values are low they imagine, because prices are below the ordinary range of past markets, that the future can not change the present condition of affairs.

Experience in the past teaches us that a man who engages in the Breeding of Stock, when everybody else disposes of his surplus, is sure to reach the best market for what he produces. The man who engages when every body else is seeking the same investment is certain to lose upon his efforts The secret is, go into business when stock is low and sell out when stock is high.

Therefore, it is plain to be seen that our Breeders have become discouraged and abandoned the breeding for the past three years, until we seldom see a colt at its mother's side, and our horse buyers are searching for good horses. The time has come when only the best horses will be in demand.

Why not wake up and continue to breed the best, and reap the harvest of a future market?

How shall we do this?

There is but one way. The BLACK PERCHERON is the superior horse for draft, and the CLEVELAND BAY for general use. Solid bred colors, smooth in conformation, docile and kind in disposition, and the only true bred horses that will cross satisfactorily on all grades of mares.

Therefore, the only way is to breed your mares to the Black Percheron or Cleveland Bay, Which will make the Spring and Fall Season of 1897 at D. N. Myers' Livery and Sale Stable, and Farmers Feed Barn in Auburn, Ind.

THE CORRECTLY DRESSED GIRL

Is a living picture and only Needs one of our New Spring Hats to make a material angel of her. The picture isn't finished without it. It is the finishing touch that makes the American girl divine. The assurance that her headwear is chic, fits her face and suits her style is comforting to any woman. Our Hats and Bonnets are just such comforts.

Correct Styles, Dressy Appearance

Are noticeable features of our Spring Wraps. There are characteristics about them you don't commonly meet, peculiarities that just suit dressy people. The comfort of a light-weight wrap is in the assurance that it is stylish, and that comfort owns possesses from Best to Chespest.

Do You Want a Perfect Spring Suit?

Of course you do; every lady does who buys at all. It took expert makers and fitters to make each of our Ready-Made Suits and Skirts, Expert cutter, expert fitter, a sleeve expert, shirt expert, waist expert. All expert works from the cutting of the armhole to binding the skirt—each do their part and stick to that part. The result is perfection. If you want perfection, come here for it.....

Wash Dress Goods.

If you have an eye for exquisite color effects, you will be delighted with our new Wash Dress Goods, Dainty Organdies, Chic Tissues and Natty Lawns, Fine French Productions, all at Very Lowest Cash Prices.

Some Folks Smile

when we talk about Stockings that Fit, but there is comfort in fit and satisfaction in the appearance of Ladies' and Children's Hosiery. Why do manufacturers labor to produce shapely Hosiery, regular made, full fashioned, if any old shape would do? Women who know the difference between good and bad hosiery will understand us, and will come here for Stockings that Fit.....

Because We Pay Cash.

There is a saving clause attached to this business that directly benefits every one who buys goods here. We Pay Cash. The influence of this cash on the mail policy effects the price of nearly everything we buy and sell. Prices shrink when measured in Spot Cash. We give our customers the benefit of this shrinkage and a little more besides.

—A group of pictures of the late Senators and Representatives, may be seen in Olds Bros. show window and the familiar faces of Dr. Nusbaum and C. M. Brown we recognize at once. They are the property of Senator Nusbaum and were left there to be framed. Bnd by the way, Olds Bros. can make up a frame nice enough for the president.

—Clint Potter is a candidate for marshall on the democratic ticket at the coming election. He is a good man and capable. In fact we have plenty excellent material. The COURIER hopes that the man who gets the nomination for marshal, will be elected, and then put in all his time working for the town. There is plenty of work for an able bodied man, work that needs to be done. But if we are to hire cheap hands to do this work, let the town pay them what they get, and save the high price paid the marshal. But we prefer to have the marshal do the work and then pay him for it.

—Rev. Ira Hicks predicts fatal storms for April and May and specially urge all who can reasonably do so to make preparations for the care and shelter of stock against the storms to come Have you any refuge for yourselves against the tornado? The probabilities of fatal storms in April and much of May over the country generally, are such as to call for wise and timely preparations against their deadly visitations. Places of absolute safety are easily in reach of all who care to provide them. It's not a question of knowing how, but will you?

—The Sunday edition of a Cincinnati paper would be 26½ inches wide by 29 feet and 4 inches long if it were all in one strip, printed on both sides. The paper contains 288 columns of matter, 54 columns and 4 inches of which was advertisements. The subscription price is $18 a year.

—Our readers will remember mention last week concerning the sheriff and deputy who were beastly drunk and were taking two prisoners to the Michigan City Prison. H. M. Henning who was home over Sunday was on the same train and says that the sight was a most horrible disgusting one. Conductor, passengers and all felt like dumping the two hogs out of the train. It is too bad the two men who were hand cuffed did not search their pockets, and unlock the cuffs and place them on the sheriff and his deputy and land them in prison.

—Agent I. M. Zent and wife went yesterday to Vandalia. Ill. where they will visit Mr. Zent's parents a couple of weeks. It will not only be a visit, but a much needed rest, for Mr. Zent has been giving his time closely to his duties for a long time, and has earned a vacation. We trust both may enjoy the two weeks fully. Warren Melency of Angola, takes Mr. Zent's place while he is away.

THE ELECTIONS.

The April elections of Monday gave a general result in favor of the democrats. They were mostly city and township elections, though in Michigan and a few other states, a part of the officers were chosen. The state ticket in Michigan went republican, but by much smaller majorities than they had last fall. In Ohio, all the strong republican cities went democratic. Canton, the home of McKinley went on a democratic majority of 400, though the republicans had 500 last fall, Cincinnati gave the democrats 7,000 though it had gone 20,000 for McKinley. And similar gains were made in nearly all the towns.

CHICAGO GOES DEMOCRATIC.

Tuesday's city election in Chicago gave Harrison, silver democrat, 142,000; Hesing, gold democrat, 16,000; Sears, straight republican, 60,000; Harlan, independent republican, 67,000. Harrison has a plurality of 75,000. McKinley carried the city last fall by 70,000.

CONVENTION AT AUBURN.

The DeKalb Co., Christian Endeavor Convention will be held this year at Auburn, in the Presbyterian church, on Saturday, April 17th. There will be a forenoon and afternoon session. An interesting program has been arranged. d&w-1t.

BUTLER.

C. M. Lewis and his oldest daughter have gone to California. Mr. Lewis goes into the fruit business with his father, Jerry Lewis, and his daughter goes mainly for her health. This is Mr. Lewis' second attempt to make his home on the shores of the Pacific. His many follow him with good wishes.

Mrs. Mary Kurtz of Wilmington Center has so far recoved as to be able to visit Butler again.

E. V. Campbell will graduate from the Toledo Medical College this week.

Died April 2, 1807 at her residence in Troy township, in the 75th year of her age, Lydia Emerson, wife of William K Emerson. Died April 4, 1897, at the same residence, William R. Emerson, in the 82d year of his age. Lydia Helwig was born In Tuscarawas, Ohio, Jan. 23, 2823 where she lived until she reached womanhood. William R. Emerson was born in Ireland, on the 14th day of April 814. William R. Emerson and Lydia Helwig were married at Canal Dover, Ohio, July 4, 1840, and lived in that vicinity until 1842 when they removed to Indiana, settling in Troy township where they continously resided for fifty five years. Their union was blessed with eleven children, six of whom, one son and five daughters survive their parents. Mr. Emerson's illness, which was without pain, began a number of weeks ago and his relatives from a distance had been hastily summoned, anticipating his early death. On last Friday morning Mrs. Emerson who had been in about her usual health, died very suddenly of paralysis. Preparations were made for her early funeral, but in the mean time, Mr. Emerson continued to fail rapidly and it was suggested that her funeral be delayed. On last Sunday evening Mr Emerson also died. Thus these two persons who joined their fortunes together fifty seven years ago and who had lived for fifty five years in one place departed this life within a few hours of each other. Their funeral took place from their late residence last Monday, Rev. Dustman of the Lutheran church of Butler officiating. His discourse which was one of the great feeling and effort was founded on Job 17: 16, Our rest together is in the dust. They were borne to their last resting place in Farnum's Cemetery about two miles east of their residence in separate hearses, and each consigned to rest, side by side in the same grave. Perhaps the first instance of its kind in the history of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Emerson were kind congenial and happy in their nature. Dutiful and loving parents, good neighbors, true friends, and memories of them will remain green long after their bodies have returned to dust.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common, as a bad breath; and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite, complexion and general health.

CONSTIPATION

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Auburn will probably, no longer be in darkness, as the city council, last night entered into an agreement with the Mining Company to light the town for 3 years. The proposition as presented by Mr. McIntyre to the board by Chairman Miller is as follows; it being given by him only verbally:—"That the Mining Company would furnish 18 or as many more lights as the town desired, 1200 candle power, at $60.00 a light a year, for midnight service, moonlight schedule; that new lights would be furnished, new wires, and line put in repair in general, that the contract be made for three years. The above in substance is the proposition as presented to the board. After discussing it thoroughly, the board decided to accept the contract for a term of two years, and the incandescent lights in the engine house to be free,

Anecdote and Incident

"Sir," said Dr. Johnson to a friend, commenting upon a widower who remarried, though his wedded life had been unhappy, "it is the triumph of hope over experience."

When a husband milks the cow, and allows his wife to keep the money made by selling the milk, all the neighborhood women see a halo around his head whenever they look at him.

A clerk in a Chicago book store was surprised not long ago, when a young lady came into the store and said to him: "I want to buy a present of a book for a young man." "Yes, miss," said he; "what kind of a book do you want?" "Why, a book for a young man." "Well—but what kind of a young man?" "Oh, he's tall and has light hair, and he always wears blue neckties!"

Of Matthew Arnold as a school examiner, a tale is told by a fellow-inspector of a class of girl pupil teachers that he asked Arnold to examine for him. Arnold gave them all the excellent mark. "But," said the other inspector, "surely they are not all as good as they can be; some must be better than others." "Perhaps that is so," replied Arnold; "but then, you see, they are all such very nice girls."

It was related of one of the members of Grant's first Cabinet, a former college professor of the "know-it-all" variety, that he was on one occasion discoursing on the subject of the Druses, when an auditor interrupted him with the remark that the cyclopedia did not agree with him. "Oh!" was the reply, "I know a great deal more about the Druses than I did when I wrote that article in the cyclopedia."

Senator Voorhees once had succeeded in delivering an appeal which had brought tears to the eyes of several jurymen. Then arose the prosecuting attorney, a gruff old man, with a piping voice and nasal twang. "Gentlemen," said he, deliberately, "you might as well understand from the beginning that I am not boring for water." This proved so effectual a wet blanket to the emotions excited by Mr. Voorhees that he realized the futility of his own "boring."

After the expulsion of Louis Philippe in 1848, Louis Napoleon let several months go by before offering himself as a candidate for the chamber. He was elected and presented himself while the law decreeing his exile was still in force. One of the deputies protested against his taking his seat. Louis Napoleon arose, hesitated, bungled, and sat down without having been able to address the assembly. "After that," said the objecting deputy, "I withdraw my objection."

General Thaddeus H. Stanton, the paymaster general of the army, called at old Fort Brydger, in Wyoming, about twenty years ago, to see an old friend named Hastings, who was one of the custodians of the abandoned post. He met a man named Williams, and inquired for Hastings. "Oh, Hastings is dead," said Williams. "Dead!" said Stanton, in surprise; "what did he die of?" "Committed suicide," said Williams. "The devil you say!" responded Stanton; "how did he commit suicide?" "He called me a liar," answered Williams.

Maurice Barrymore was once in London with a new piece which he was anxious to have produced. He had read it to a manager and it had been decided that he was to play the leading role. About a week after it was supposed to have been definitely settled, "Barry" received a note from the manager asking him to call. Barrymore called and the manager said: "I like the piece, old fellow, but I don't see how I can use you in the cast. Your beastly American dialect won't do at all, you know. They won't have it." "Well, that's strange," said Barryomre; "they told me on the other side that they wouldn't have me on account of my beastly English dialect. What am I to do; give recitations on the transatlantic steamers?"

An Oakland bootblack, an honest man who would not deceive his patrons, when he first went into business six years ago, put up a sign which read: "Joe Garibaldi, bootblack. Has two small children." Each succeeding year found him deserving of more sympathy, for he kept amending the sign, until it read eight small children. A few days ago Joe's stand was locked for a whole day, and when he returned the next morning he confided to the butcher's boy that his baby died. His first work was to amend the sign so that it might not mislead the public, and it then read, "Joe Garibaldi, bootblack. Has seven small children." Then, to avoid being placed in a false position before the public, he added with his finger and shoe-blacking, "One he die."

A devoted couple, who apparently had been long separated, were thrust suddenly into each other's company (says the Boston Evening Record) at a largely attended reception. A lady who tells the story was present, in company with an educated deaf girl. The happy reunited pair displayed fully the thoughts that were in their hearts by the beam upon their countenances. Suddenly the young man drew near to the one whom he adored and said in a low tone, inaudible to those about him, a few seemingly affectionate words. The deaf girl watched the proceedings with intense interest, and suddenly broke into a broad grin. Her companion inquired what it was that amused her. She turned about so that the couple could not see her, and replied: "That man said, 'If all these people were not here, I'd kiss you. If they don't get out of the way pretty soon, I shall have to before them.' The girl replied, 'Then I shall scream.'" The deaf girl understood their words by the motions of their lips.

A New-Yorker, who has spent time and money in developing carrier pigeons, and may be called Jones for short, says the Sun, was boasting at his club one night of the great flights that his pigeons had made, when Brown said: "I'l bet you the best dinner the club can furnish for every one present that you haven't a pigeon that can fly from Philadelphia to New York." "It will be simply robbery," said Jones, "but I'll take your bet." Brown stipulated that he should carry the pigeon to Philadelphia himself, and he did. Before releasing the bird he clipped his wings, and then he returned to New York by a slow train. "Well, I released your pigeon in Philadelphia this morning," he said to Jones that night at the club; "has he returned yet?" "Not yet," said Jones. The next day Brown again asked Jones about the bird, and, when Jones admitted that his pigeon had not come back, claimed the bet. The owner of the pigeon said that he wouldn't admit defeat. The pigeon didn't show up on the second day; but on the third day, when Brown asked jeeringly, "Isn't it about time for that supper? I don't suppose your pigeon has returned," Jones replied promptly: "Yes, he has; but—er—well, his feet are very sore." Brown paid the bet.

Overwhelmed by an Avalanche.

An extraordinary escape from death was lately recorded by a newspaper of Mountain Home, Idaho, a mining town high up among the mountains, where avalanches of the most fearful description are not infrequent. On the first day of last December a citizen of Mountain Home, Frank Andreas by name, started at an early hour in the morning to go from a mine to a blacksmith shop, some distance away on the side of the mountain. With him were his two big dogs, which are in part of St. Bernard blood.

The dogs were gamboling about in the snow some distance from their master, when a great snowslide, which the warmth of the sun had dislodged some two hundred feet up the mountain, descended upon Andreas with such velocity that there was no escaping from it.

He was borne along with and under the snow, and lodged against the side of the gulch much farther down. Above him the snow was packed hard. Andreas did not know how deep it was—in reality it was about four feet above his head—but he did know that it was so hard that he could scarcely move a muscle.

Andreas quickly began to experience difficulty in breathing. Luckily he had been carried along by the avalanche in an upright position; he had thrown up his hands in an effort to save himself, and his left arm had remained in that position—thrust upward. By working it from side to side in the hard-packed snow, he made a small opening up into looser snow in which there seemed to be some air; at any rate, he could breathe enough to save himself from suffocation at present.

He knew, however, that he could not live in such a place long. He struggled and pushed, and tried to enlarge the opening made by his left arm, picking pieces of snow from about his body with his right hand and working them into the opening.

But he would certainly have grown discouraged, after he had worked vainly thus far half an hour or more, if he had not heard a scratching and burrowing sound above his head. He knew by this that his faithful dogs had escaped the avalanche, had found the place where he was overwhelmed, and were digging him out.

This gave him strength for new efforts. Now he bent all his own endeavors, not to getting out—he left the dogs to uncover him—but to getting air enough to keep him alive until the dogs should succeed in digging down through the hard snow. He worked his left hand upward and about, and as the dogs dug downward, he soon succeeded in getting a little hole through to the air.

For an hour and a half he and the dogs were at work, and at the end of that time he succeeded in dragging himself out upon the side of the excavation the dogs had made. There, more dead than alive, he took deep draughts of the mountain air till these revived him, and he was able to go on his way.

An Ancient Custom.

Shakspeare, upon parting Brutus and Cassius prior to their tragic end on the plains of Philippi, did not seat them around a convivial board, where each might bespeak the other's health and long life in a bumper of wine. Perhaps the immortal author, in his fidelity to the gravity of those stirring times, could not reconcile the solemnity of that parting with the cup that cheers. There is no doubt, however, but that wine or its equivalent was as easily obtainable in those days as it is to-day.

Indeed, Biblical history is responsible for the statement that Father Noah accumulated a jag of such tremendous proportions as to be a disgrace in the eyes of his children. The account says further that the old patriarch cast off his clothing, and that his sons and daughters, deeply humiliated, rescued him from his shameful exposure.

There are many evidences in the explorations of the buried cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum that alcoholic beverages played a leading part in the luxury and debauchery of those ancient times. When Vesuvius' merciless shower of ashes and lava descended upon the people it found many of them in various stages of intoxicated abandonment, and in the progress of recent excavations have been found numberless bottles, filled with ashes, setting just as the revelers had left them when forced to flee on that awful night, more than 1,800 years ago.

So far as this history reveals, the use of stimulants or narcotics has been common to all nations of the world. Alcohol in one form or another has been used by almost all; but in its absence the Mohammedans and aborigines adopted opium, tobacco and hemp.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Fairy Stones in Virginia.

Down in Patrick County, Virginia, there is found a peculiar stone much sought after by superstitious people, who believe that the possessor of one of these queer stones is perpetually endowed with good luck. The stones vary in size, and many of them are in the shape of a cross. This is, perhaps, the cause of a legend that is related about them. It is told that fairies were sent all over the world to carry the news of the birth of Christ. After the glad tidings had been spread the elfs fashioned the stones into crosses, as mementos of their services. An enterprising jeweler has taken advantage of the superstition and the legend, and is doing a thriving business in the fairy stones, as they are called.

ORIGIN OF MAY DAY.

FESTIVAL OF THE FLOWERS AND ITS ANTIQUITY.

May Day 4,000 Years Ago—The Day in Egypt, China, Mexico and Peru—Old English Customs in Connection with the Floral Holiday.

First Day of May.

For the origin of May Day with its joyous associations, we are compelled to go back to a time when men personified the powers of nature and called them gods and goddesses. How far back the goddess of the flowers was adored at the season when the earth put on her green mantle with its floral spangles of every hue, we do not know, for the earliest records speak of a spring festival as an institution already well established and even then known more from ancient times. The Egyptians made pictures of everything, so it is not surprising that among the paintings on the walls of their catacombs there should be found some which, from the accompaniments of flowers, garlands and wreaths, are judged by the antiquarians to be of a spring festival, a feast of flowers. May Day is therefore at least 4,500 years old, and it is quite possible that Adam and Eve celebrated May Day in the garden of Paradise if they stayed there over one season.

When traces of May Day are discovered in the earliest ages of Egypt and at the dawn of history in Greece, among the Etruscans, among the Celts of the Rhone and the Germans of the Rhine, in Scandinavia and Wales and Ireland, among the natives of the Indian Peninsula and among the Aborigines of America and Australia and New Guinea, the conclusion is safe that such a custom is of universal observance and remotest antiquity. So it may be that the Chinese are not as extravagant as they seem when they claim that May Day originated in the Celestial Empire 90,000 years before the flood, being instituted by the never-to-be-enough-praised Emperor Chi-Whee, who was fond of flowers and employed exactly 1,000,000 men to take care of his garden.

Leaving, however, the claims of the glorious Chi-Whee to be defended by his own people, it is worth remembering that a festival, in many particulars bearing a close resemblance to our May Day, was celebrated all over Italy and the south of Europe at the beginning of the Christian era, when every one who could spare the time went into the woods and fields for a day's outing, gathered flowers and returning laid them on the altars of Flora. It is also interesting to know that on these occasions the goddess of flowers was personated by a young girl, the prettiest who could be found, who, during the day, received the homage of her friends and was crowned with the spoils of the fields, a genuine Queen of the May. As cities grew, it became inconvenient to go far into the country, for the excursion steamers and railroad trains packed full of pleasure seekers were not, and a substitute was found by bringing a tree into town, setting it in the ground in a public place, decorating it with flowers, which the country people, in the hope of gaining shekels, or obeli, or denarii, or whatever other coin was legal tender for debts public and private in the neighborhood, were easily induced to bring in. Thus, in the May pole is seen the descendant of the green tree, and the dancing about it in circles is explained by the fact that the only way to dance round it at all is in a circle, and also, perhaps, the circle has always had a mystic significance, being much used in charms and incantations. Having learned this much from the antiquarians, these dignified folk may be told to go about their business, for the rest of our knowledge of May Day and its festivities may easily be had from other sources than their ponderous and almost unreadable tomes.

From authors of our own tongue we may glean almost innumerable references and allusions to the pretty custom of hallowing the May Day, and we also learn that less than 200 years ago the May pole was as indispensable in every English village as the stocks or the pillory. When the Puritans, who were not afraid either of the name of traitor, or of deserving it, by beheading their King, came into power, the idea of any one presuming to enjoy himself while he groveled here upon the earth in the humble capacity of a worm of the dust, was intolerable to them; so, with bell ringing and carol singing, and other vicious indulgences, the May Day dancing and flower gathering were tabooed and May poles were all cut down. But after grim old Oliver passed away, the night of the storm that shook all Europe, the people began to amuse themselves again, erected taller May poles than were ever known before, and danced about them harder than ever. But, as often happens in such cases, when nobody opposed the May Day and its pole, both soon fell into what Grover Cleveland would term "innocuous desuetude," and now there is hardly a May pole to be found in all England. The custom of remembering the day, however, still survives, and little girls wearing garlands, and carrying with them a doll decorated with flowers, termed the "Lady of the May," still go about the towns on this day, presenting their doll to the passers-by as a modest hint for halfpence.

In the quiet country districts of France, Germany and Italy there are still queens of May, young girls who are on this day crowned queens of the festivities. In many parts of Europe the May festival takes the form of games and athletic sports of various kinds. It is a singular fact, as showing not only the universality of the custom, but also the fact that all the varieties probably had one origin, that many of the features of the celebration in countries very widely separated, are almost identical. The Chinese, as well as the English, had a queen of the May, while in Mexico and Peru, the crowning of a young girl with flowers at this season is a hint of the same thing.

While there seems nothing so transient as a jovial custom like this, nothing is, in reality, more permanent, and the manner in which apparently frivolous and meaningless celebrations are handed down from parents to children, from race to race, constitutes one of the bonds which unite us to remote ages and countries far distant from our own.

Increase in Weight.

In Williamstown reside two young men of a scientific turn of mind. They have been discussing whether a man weighs more after eating than before, and have decided that eating adds nothing to the weight, while drinking makes itself known in avoirdupois. Monday they weighed themselves just before going to dinner. Mr. Porter weighed 191 pounds, and Mr. Wheeler 165. They also weighed what they ate for dinner, and the experiment showed that the smaller man was the better feeder, for, according to the scales, he got away with three and a half pounds of eatables, while his companion's capacity was only two pounds. The men weighed themselves again directly after dinner, and both declare that their weight was not increased at all.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Hard to Keep Awake.

In the long arctic nights there is a constant difficulty in keeping awake. Greely had to make very strict rules to keep his men awake during the long arctic night. Beds were not allowed to be made, and the men were compelled to get up and move about.

Man's Bitterest Enemy.

"Sin is always man's bitterest enemy," writes Dwight L. Moody, in "Mr. Moody's Bible Class," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "It separates him from his Maker. It separates him from his fellow-beings. No position is to ohigh for sin to debase; no place so hallowed but it seeks to corrupt; no home so sacred but it seeks to destroy. 'Sin, like hollness, is a mighty leveler,' says a distinguished divine. And what may be the cause of the thousands of suicides which have occurred during the past year if it is not a loathing of self? It is sin then which makes a man loathe himself. It is sin which makes man's life become a burden from which he so often seeks to free himself by his own hand."

NERVOUSNESS AND NEURALGIA.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

An instance of a marvelous cure of nervousness and neuralgia of long standing is furnished in the case of Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, of Napoleon, Ripley, Co., Ind.

A reporter drove to see Mrs. Johnson a few weeks ago, but as she was not at home he was unable to accomplish the purpose of his mission. However, Mrs. Johnson, learning what was desired, wrote a letter, in which she said:

"I understand that you were desirous of learning whether my trouble had been cured, and if a cure had been accomplished how it had been done. It is true and the marvelous cure was accomplished by nothing other than the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. For some time I had suffered from nervousness and neuralgia. I continually grew worse, although I was being almost constantly treated by my physician.

"As time wore on I grew weak, reduced in flesh, and was unable to do much of my work. I tried different remedies without avail, when I was advised by a neighbor to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I at once did. I felt better on taking the first dose, and when I had finished one box I had experienced a great change. I took several boxes and was entirely well. I have now used three boxes, and can honestly recommend them, as I believe I would have been in the same condition today, or perhaps worse, had I not been advised to take Pink Pills."

Mrs. Johnson also stated that she induced some of her neighbors to use the pills, which they are doing with good satisfaction.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Air Jam in a Tunnel.

A curious state of things was observed in the tunnel of the underground railway of Buda-Pest on account of lack of ventilation. For a stretch of more than two miles there is only a single ventilator, which is entirely insufficient, and the trains running through the tunnel compress the air within like that in the gun barrel of a Zalinski dynamite gun. It is stated that on several occasions the cars were raised bodily from the tracks by the pressure of air and gas, and the passengers were almost suffocated. Steps have been taken to increase the number of air shafts, so that there will be at least ten of these in each mile, and very large exhaust fans will do away with the danger of insufficient ventilation, which now renders the employment at the same time of the two tracks in the tunnel absolutely dangerous.

PICKED UP ON BROADWAY.

A True Incident.—A woman was picked up in the street in an unconscious condition and hurried to the nearest hospital. On examination her body was found to be covered with sores caused by the hypodermic injection of morphine.

This mere wreck of a woman had once held an honorable and lucrative position in a large publishing house in New York. Her health began to fail. Instead of taking rest and medical treatment, she resorted to the stimulus of morphine.

The hospital physicians discovered that her primary trouble was an affection of the womb, which could readily have been cured in the first stages.

If, when she had felt those severe pains in the back, the terrible headaches, the constant sense of fullness, soreness and pain in the pelvic region, she had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, it would have dissolved and passed off that polypus in the womb, and to-day she would have been a well woman sitting in her office.

Why will women let themselves go in this way? It seems passing strange that a woman like this one, so highly educated, and so well placed, should have depended on morphine, instead of seeking a radical cure.

There is no excuse for any woman who suffers—she need not go without help. Mrs. Pinkham stands ready to help any woman; her address is Lynn, Mass. Write to her; it will cost you nothing. In the meantime get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the nearest drug store. The following letter from one of your sisters will encourage you:

Mrs. Bertha Lehrman, No. 1 Erie St., 27th Ward, Pittsburg, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I can hardly find words with which to thank you for what you have done for me. I suffered nearly seven years with backache and sideache, leucorrhœa, and the worst forms of womb troubles.

"Doctors failed to do me any good. I have taken four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one box of Liver Pills, and used one package of Sanative Wash, and now can say I am well and have been steadily gaining flesh; am stouter and heartier now than I have been for years. I am recommending your Vegetable Compound to my friends. Again I thank you for the good health I am enjoying."

TARIFF BILL PASSED.

THE DINGLEY MEASURE GOES THROUGH THE HOUSE.

Receives 205 Votes Out of 348—Republicans Present a Solid Front—Amendment Adopted to Affect All Future Imports—Lively Scenes.

Vote Is 205 Against 122.

Washington special: Amid great enthusiasm on the floor and in the galleries the House of Representatives Wednesday passed the Dingley tariff bill, and the duties imposed by the bill are now in force and the Wilson law is a thing of the past if the last amendment attached to the bill before its passage in the House fixing April 1 as the day on which its provisions should go into effect shall be held to be legal by the courts. The Republicans presented an unbroken front to the opposition. All the rumors that dissatisfaction with particular schedules of the bill might lead some of them to break over the party traces proved unfounded. On the other hand, five Democrats braved the party whip and gave the bill the approval of their votes. These five Democrats are interested particularly in the sugar schedule. Three came from Louisiana and two from Texas. One Populist, Mr. Howard, of Alabama, voted for the bill. Twenty-one other members of what is denominated "the opposition," consisting of Populists, fusionists and silverites, declined to record themselves either for or against the measure. The Grosvenor amendment which provided that the provisions in the bill be immediately enforced was passed by a strict party vote.

The vote on the final passage of the bill stood—yeas, 205; nays, 122; present and not voting, 21, giving the bill a majority of 83. Speaker Reed added to the climax of this ten days' struggle in the House by directing the clerk to call his name at the end of the roll call, recording his vote for the bill.

As the hour for voting arrived the excitement increased. Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee, was recognized for five minutes to close the debate for his side. He briefly reviewed the "extraordinary" methods by which the bill was being brought to a vote. He charged that amendments were cut off because the leaders of the majority feared that they might be crushed by their own cohorts. "I defy you now," he said, "to give us an opportunity to amend the sugar schedule, which was framed to protect the biggest trust in the country. And to-day you crowned the infamy of the bill by making it retroactive." Mr. McMillin concluded by having read at the clerk's desk the words of Speaker Reed, then in the opposition, on the occasion of the passage of the Wilson law. "With those words," said he, "I let the bill go forth to the just execration of a robbed and outraged people."

Mr. Dingley then took the floor and closed the debate in a ten-minute speech. He spoke of the extraordinary circumstances which produced the exigency which Congress had been called in extra session to meet. The Ways and Means Committee had labored faithfully for months to adjust duties to present conditions. There might be some little dissatisfaction with rates. He assured his colleagues and the country that he felt confident the bill would accomplish the purpose for which it was framed.

The debate being at an end, the committee rose and the bill, with pending amendments, was reported to the House by Mr. Sherman, the chairman of the committee of the whole. The roll call on the passage of the bill was then taken, and was followed with intense interest, and the Republicans applauded vigorously when the Speaker announced the result. The galleries joined in the demonstration.

TAKE OUT A MILLION.

How the Bucket Shops of Chicago "Work" the Country.

John Hill, Jr., chairman of the committee on gambling of the Chicago Civic Federation, has been at Eldora, Iowa, before the Hardin County grand jury. It is claimed he secured some valuable information affecting the bucket shops alleged to be running in that part of the State.

It is claimed it has been proved to the satisfaction of the grand jury that a certain produce and stock exchange of Chicago is doing a bucket shop business. It is claimed there that the institution—acting for the Chicago concern—took $38,000 out of Hardin County in one week last January, and has secured from the people of Iowa over $1,000,000 during the last four months. A large number of prominent business men, farmers and young men are among the principal losers.

Mr. Hill has the names of many losers, as well as evidence in the cases. He claims that agents of the bucket shops are traveling over Iowa systematically organizing the business, and that the main evidence is to the effect that two former employes prove that the business is only carried on the books of the company and not in the open market.

In an interview at Eldora Mr. Hill said few people had any adequate idea of the extent to which the State of Iowa is being drained to enrich the bucket shop proprietors of Chicago, and that his mission now is to secure evidence throughout the country districts that would convict those men and drive them out of the business, which, he asserts, has no connection whatever with legitimate market quotations or speculation in actual transactions on the Board of Trade, but is a system of gambling in which the operator has every advantage, no matter how prices may fluctuate, and the patron is inevitably a loser if he stays in after the initiatory stage of the game.

Public sentiment in Eldora is largely against the bucket shops, and much condemnation has been poured out against the commission company by press and pulpit. One minister there directed one of his sermons as an attack upon the local concern. Young men there have been drawn into the place, and some of them have lost about all they had on wheat.

A suit has been commenced in the courts by W. F. Beck, an attorney, charging fraud. One of the reasons of the grand jury continuing this investigation was in order to obtain positive proof whether the commission company is an authorized agency of the Chicago institution.

The Chicago house has leased wires from the Western Union Telegraph Company running through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Iowa. It establishes agencies in small towns where no other bucket shop or legitimate house is represented, its object being, apparently, to avoid comparisons of prices with the quotations of other houses.

Clem Houser's two little boys of Young America, Cass County, had read of the Jackson and Walling hanging. They fixed things in a woodshed. One played the criminal, the other the hangman. Tobacco.

The smoking of tobacco in America probably dates back to the remotest traces of man on that continent. The mounds of the Ohio and Scioto Valleys so abound with red-stone tobacco pipes that one of them is named from these relics of early man as the "Tobacco Pipe Mound." It is well known that among the North American Indians the smoking of tobacco together is a most sacred pledge of peace. The practice is intimately interwoven with all their rites, social habits and customs.

The First Thermometer.

The first thermometer was made in 1621 by a Dutch physicist named Cornelius Van Drebbell, and consisted of a tube filled with air closed at its upper end and dipping at its other extremity, which was open, in a bottle of nitric acid diluted with water. As the temperature rose or fell the air in the tube increased or grew less in volume, and consequently the liquid descended or rose.

Reforms Need More than a Day
To bring them about, and are always more complete and lasting when they proceed with steady regularity to a consummation. Few of the observant among us can have failed to notice that permanently healthful changes in the human system are not wrought by abrupt and violent means, and that those are the most salutary medicines which are progressive. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the chief of these. Dyspepsia, a disease of obstinate character, is obliterated by it.

European Peanuts.

Peanuts grow in large quantities on the northwest coast of Africa, but are known there as ground nuts. They are dug up by the natives and bartered with the European traders for merchandise, tobacco, etc., at many places on the Gambia River, and afterward shipped in steamer loads to European ports, principally to Marseilles. The nuts are not roasted for retail sale, as in this country, but crushed and a fine oil extracted, which is valuable commercially.

A DISTSESSING SPECTACLE.

Sheriff and Deputy in Charge of Two Prisoners Dead Drunk.

Michigan City News.

The sheriff of Randolph county and one of his trusted deputies arrived in the city last night on the L. E. & W. train at 8:05 o'clock in charge of two prisoners and the officers were so drunk that they were unable to get from the train without assistance. The prisoners were two young men of respectable appearance. They were Frank Purcell and Marshall Steward both sentenced on the charge of petit larceny, the former for two and the latter for one year.

The prisoners were handcuffed having been securely chained early in the morning when they left Randolph county in charge of the sheriff. After the party had left Indianapolis the sheriff and his deputy began drinking from a quart bottle. By the time the train reached Plymouth, the sheriff was dead to the world and his deputy little better. The passengers on the train were disgusted; some of them conversed with the prisoners who asserted that they had nothing to eat all day. They were asked why they didn't escape, as they easily could have done, but the one year man would not agree to this as he wanted to serve his short term and then go back home. When the train stopped at the depot in this city, the prisoners got off and were taken in charge by two prison guards who luckily happened to be at the depot. Cold water was thrown in the face of the sheriff, but he was laid out cold. The deputy managed to get out after an effort.

The two officers continued their spree and this morning were a sorry looking sight. The sheriff succeeded in getting to the prison this morning to turn over the papers of the men's sentence. At the prison, he made himself obnoxious and had to be shown the door. After considerable discussion, the brilliant sheriff and deputy managed to roll aboard the south bound Monon train this morning.

Started Up

The Greenler Co Hoop factory is nearly completed. The sawmill was started this morning and is running full blast. In a few days the other machinery will be motion and they will then turn out the hoops.

We have just received the January number of Bliss' Quarterly, published at Pensacola, Florida, by Charles H. Bliss, late of the now defunct Times-Post of this city. The Quarterly just received is a splendid book of 140 octavo pages and sets forth all the advantages, points of interest, commercial importance and historical facts of the old city of Pensacola. It is profusely illustrated with several hundred photogravures of interesting views and portraits of leading men. It is a highly creditable book and Mr Bliss has placed the citizens of Pensacola under obligations to him for presenting their city so handsomely.

Poor Blood

When a horse is poor in flesh, a new harness won't give him strength. If a house is cold new furniture won't warm it. If your strength is easily exhausted; work a burden; nerves weak; digestion poor; muscles soft; if you are pale and worn out, the trouble is with the blood. It is not so much IMPURE blood as POOR blood. Pills won't make this blood rich; nor will bitters, nor iron tonics, any more than a new harness will give strength to the horse, or new furniture will make a house warm. For poor blood you want something that will make rich blood.

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites is the best remedy in the world for enriching the blood.

The Same... Old Sarsaparilla.

That's Ayer's. The same old sarsaparilla as it was made and sold by Dr. J. C. Ayer 50 years ago. In the laboratory it is different. There modern appliances lend speed to skill and experience. But the sarsaparilla is the same old sarsaparilla that made the record—50 years of cures. Why don't we better it? Well, we're much in the condition of the Bishop and the raspberry: "Doubtless," he said, "God might have made a better berry. But doubtless, also, He never did." Why don't we better the sarsaparilla? We can't. We are using the same old plant that cured the Indians and the Spaniards. It has not been bettered. And since we make sarsaparilla compound out of sarsaparilla plant, we see no way of improvement. Of course, if we were making some secret chemical compound we might.... But we're not. We're making the same old sarsaparilla to cure the same old diseases. You can tell it's the same old sarsaparilla because it works the same old cures. It's the sovereign blood purifier, and—it's Ayers.

Friday's Daily.

—Dr. Carey was up from Spencerville yesterday attending the meeting of the DeKalb county medical society.

—Austin Eicholtz principal of the schools at Spencerville was in town yesterday. He has the reputation of being an excellent teacher and school worker. We are pleased to make his acquaintance.

—The COURIER this morning received an invitation from F. W. Hoffman and Claude O. Chick who have been conducting a dental parlor in the Gandy block, but have been absent during the last few months finishing the course in college. There are fifty-four graduates in the Senior class this year. The invitation reads:—The Faculty and Graduating Class of the Indiana Dental College, Department Dental Surgery, University of Indianapolis; invite you to be present at the Commencement Exercises to be held in English's Opera House, Tuesday, April 6, 1897, at eight o'clock.

—The Ex-Warden and several convicts who held responsible positions as book-keepers, bank clerks and cashiers, of Walla Walla, Wash., penitentiary, are now undergoing a state investigation. The state has been defrauded of thousands of dollars, in the sale to merchants and farmers, of grain bags, hop cloth, twine, etc. Warden Coblentz a year ago committed suicide and it was thought then that he was short. The amount was placed at $40,000, but experts who are at work now find that the shortage will reach nearly $100,000. A definite report cannot be made as the most important records have been destroyed. It would appear that not only in DeKalb county has there been robbery, but even in the penitentiaries where men are sent to be punished for such work, the convicts and Warden form a club and rob.

—Editor Minor of the Garrett Herald and Rev. Pearce, pastor of the Baptist church at this city and Garrett, have been indulging in a law suit. The trouble seems to have arisen over an account of $6 which Minor claims Rev. Pearce owed him. But the divine insisted that $3 was all that was due and called at the office and tendered him the money. Mr. Minor would not accept that amount and as Rev. Pearce started out, Mr. Murray, an employ of the office held the door shut. No sooner had he placed himself against the door than the little minister took him by the collar and removed him and passed out. He then had Minor and Murray each arrested, and were taken before Squire Van-Fleet. Mr. Minor was fined $5. and costs and Mr. Murray $1. and costs. Thus endeth the first act. We understand that neither Mr. Minor nor Mr. Murray are satisfied with the decision of Justice, and will appeal the cases to the higher court.

—Auburn no doubt will become noted as a military city this summer. We will have Major Kuhlman with probably both members of his staff, Co. K 3d Reg., and the Independent military company under command of Chas. DuWan, and last, but not least, the little "soldiers," the Epworth Guards, and if need be to fill up a couple squads of the old veterans and a like number of the Sons of Veterans could be mustered in. Our citizens can well feel proud of the proficiency, and high rank some of these men have attained in military circles, and especially is this true of Major Kuhlman. It is hoped the new man who may be elected as commander of Co K. may be equally as well qualified for the position, as his successor. It will be remembered that the company were presented a beautiful flag by our citizens for loyalty and courage in facing the enemy in the two weeks service during the strikes of '94. It will also be remembered that in a competitive drill during the Centennial celebration at Ft. Wayne, Co. K won first money, $300, and came home with all honors and as the crack company of the regiment. May every member of the Indiana National Guard in Auburn remain true to the oath he has taken and strive to become more proficient in the service of the state.

BADLY MIXED!

Are The Cases Now Being Tried of Ex-county Officials.

INTERESTING COURT NEWS.

For Saturday Readers of the Daily Courier.

Work to continue next week.

Friday was consumed till afternoon finishing up the damage case between Moore and Lisher. The attorneys made very able and interesting pleas and afternoon the jury retired, to settle it, and from the buzzing that came from their room, they had a warm time over it. It was not until nine o'clock that they reached a decision. It was in favor of the defendant.

After the jury had gone in to settle the Moore—Lisher matter, Judge Watkins, went on with work that would come before the court alone. The case of Krontz vs VanAuken for possession of the effects of the surveyor's office, was called up and some argument ensued. VanAuken's attorney, Roby, wanted to have this case wait till the other case, which is to be tried at Angola, to see whether Krontz was properly nominated. But Krontz' attorney, J. W. Baxter, wanted this case at Auburn tried soon. The Judge took time to study it over.

Next was called up the case of D. W. Fair vs Coffinberry, to have set aside the deed by which the latter had turned his property over to his wife. J. E. Rose and Attorney Frazier, of Wabash, represented Coffinberry, while Roby was for Fair. The case will be called up for further work soon.

The next called was the case brought by the auditor for DeKalb county, against the bondsmen of D. W. Fair, which in substance is to require them to make good the shortage in that office. The attorneys for the county, are Rose & Rose and McClellan & Garwood; for the bondsmen are Hartman and Roby. A discussion arose, over the case, and when Mr. Hartman gave notice that an effort would be made for a set off. It is said that a part of Fair's salary has not been paid him, and it is claimed that the amount of shortage charged to the bondsmen should be reduced that much. Then arose a discussion of the law. It appears that, all over the state, the boards of commissioners have been allowing county treasurers to draw their pay quarterly, although it would appear there is no law for this. It appears that the salary law was left in an uncertain condition. Each officer is to get his pay out of the fees he collects, and all fees coming into his hands must first be turned over to the county. Then each quarter the commissioners can make him an allowance equal to the amount of fees he has collected and turned over to the treasurer, and no more. Now, a treasurer collects but little in fees, only the 4 per cent he gets on the collection of delinquent taxes. This would give him only $30. or $40. in this county. So the question is: Has Fair anything due him, or not? And if he has, can it be used as a set-off? And right here comes in a new law, just made, that was intended to heal this matter of the treasurer's and auditor's salary. Both are in the same boat, though an auditor is liable to get in more fees than the treasurer. It is quite a muddle, and after talking awhile, and not being able to agree, the matter was postponed till Monday, April 5. It will be seen that these cases of Fair, Coffinberry, Krontz and VanAuken are going to make considerable stir before the term closes.

Mr. McIntosh has employed Judge McClellan and Judge Morris to defend him in his case, which will likely be tried in Auburn, and has every reason to expect a triumphal acquittal. He was indicted, it would appear, for the reason that he bought many county orders, and when the crash came, some of them were found to be forged. He expects to prove that he knew nothing of their fraudulent character or of the forgeries that were going on in the auditor's office. We certainly hope he will establish his innocence, but it will cause him more or less worry and expense. And right here we wish to reiterate, that the COURIER hopes to see every innocent man vindicated, but no guilty man go unpunished.

This, Saturday, morning the case against Fair's bondsmen was brought up again. As noted yesterday, the bondsmen had asked to have Fair's salary used to set-off, or reduce the shortage of $12,000 they are likely to have to pay for him. Fair's salary, to the amount of about $3,300 was paid him in county orders, as the commissioners believed they had a right to do. And if the orders so issued were not good, then the men who bought and now hold them will be the losers. If this is so, then the county never paid Fair that $3,300, but still owes it to him. If they owe it to him, then Fair's shortage will be that much less and the bondsmen will have to pay only about $8,000. Mr. Hartman's motion yesterday, was to have it fixed that way. McClellan and Rose, for the county, made a motion to have the Hartman motion dismissed. This morning, Judge Watkins overruled this motion, and so the Hartman motion will be brought up in a few days, and argued on its merits. It is going to be a difficult case.

The Krontz—VanAuken case also came up again this morning. VanAuken's attorney had asked to have the case postponed. This motion was this morning overruled, and the case in some phase or other, will be argued Monday.

Court adjourned at noon, and Judge Watkins went home, to return Monday noon.

He will not have that "bad taste," then and may feel more friendly to Auburn's large manufacturing industries.

—There is competition in photography in Auburn now, and its just there should be, as there are competors in all other lines of business. People are too apt to become selfish, thinking that they have a monopoly of the business, and thereby drive some trade out of town, which could be retained. A Mr. Rench of Ligonier, has opened a new photograph gallery in the rooms over the Auburn Steam Laundry south of the jail. He will give our people pictures at hard time prices. CLEMENS WOLF.

TO OUST HIM

Impeachment Proeeedings To Remove F. A. Borst.

Thursday's Daily.

This, Thursday morning, the grand jury brought in the long expected impeachment against Frank Borst, to put him out of office. This is under the new law, which provides that an officer may be impeached and put out. It is the same law under which the two commissioners are called up.

The case against the two commissioners is to come up next Monday, and if all parties are ready, it may be finished in a day or so. It now looks as if Frank Borst or, some of the men at Michigan City, would have to be brought back as witnesses in this and similar cases.

COURT.

The trial jury were dismissed for good yesterday afternoon and went home. Court only lasts one more week, the last day is Saturday, April 17.

There came near being a speck of war in the court room yesterday. While Prosecutor Davis was making the closing plea for the state, in the Clouse case, he said something that Mr. Rose, the opposing counsel thought he had no right to say, and he objected toit, first in words, and then by catching Davis by the arm. The spectators looked for trouble, but the episode was over in less time than we are telling it.

Judge Watkins went home yesterday afternoon, and will return Monday, the 12th, to hear the county cases argued. In the meantime other cases will be going on before Judge, Penfield.

The attendance at court has been very large this week. The trial of Clouse and White brought out many from Jackson township, some as witnesses and some merely to hear the trial.

We are asked nearly every day why accused persons are kept so long in jail without a trial. We cannot answer this, except at random. It may be that a man comes into jail just after the grand jury has adjourned, and so cannot be indicted till the next term of court when a new grand jury meets. There may be other reasons, but we do not know of them. People complain of what seems to them a needless expense, in the boarding of prisoners for so long a time.

We forgot to mention the result of the case, between McIntosh and Orr. Squire Walborn before whom the case was argued, decided that Mr. McIntosh was liable for the money that Orr had paid for the county order he bought of McIntosh. We presume the case will be appealed.

Friday's Daily.

The most important case that came up yesterday was that of Brandt vs Garrett Electric Light Co. This is the Garrett light plant controlled by Henry McIntyre. It is a stock company and Brandt, it appears is a stockholder. He claims he is being frozen out, and that the plant is badly managed. So he seeks to have a receiver appointed. Mr. Brown, of Angola, acted as jugde; Rose & Rose were attorneys for Brandt, and McClellan and Garwood were for the Light Company. The trial showed that Mr. Lackey, now of Auburn, was secretary and manager of the plant, and Henry McIntyre, was president. In brief, the testimony goes to show that the amount of stock authorized was $10,000, and the paid up stock was $5,000, but that the plant cost about $15,000. Then to even this up and give the stockholders a showing $5,000 more of stock was authorized. The mismanagement complained of, however, seems to be chiefly, that in 1892, McIntyre and Lackey caused to be voted to them by the stockholders, too big a salary. McIntyre was to have a salary of $2,000 with $1,000 for expenses, this large sum being voted to him, because of the great amount of work he had done in securing good business, especially in getting the contract to furnish light for the B. & O. Company at Garrett. And the increased business would require more work of the president in getting up an increased plant. Mr. Lackey, as secretary was at the same meeting given a salary of $750 with $250 for expenses was also charged that some of the patrons are dissatisfied with the service, though Mr. McIntyre, while on the stand, denied this. He also thought the salaries not excessive. It seems that these men are still the president and secretary, though both live in Auburn. Mr. Lackey says he has had an independent telephone line to Garrett, since he has been here, until lately, when he uses the other lines.

This Friday, morning, the McIntyre case went on. Mr. Cribbs a stationary engineer for the B. & O. and some night watchmen testified for plaintiff to the effect that the arc lights in the shops and yards, sometimes went out. On cross examination, they said these lamps belonged to the B. & O. before the McIntyre plant was used, and were now in use by the latter, but would be returned to the B. & O. when the present contract expires.

Saturday's Daily.

The McIntyre electric light case was continued yesterday, all day. Mr. Brandt was on the witness stand a long time. He is the complaining witness who wants a receiver appointed. He is an electrician and was for a time employed by the light company soon after they went into operation. He had been secretary the first year, and was chosen for the second year. The first year, he gave a bond of $2,500, but the second year gave none and admits, that he was a few months after being elected, put out of office because of his failure to give a bond. When asked why he did not give a bond, he said the officers of the Light Co. wanted him to get one of the Guarantee Companies to go on his bond, and that this would cost him more than his salary. So he allowed them to take his job away from him. He gave a detailed statement of how the plant had run down since he left it, naming nearly every part of it, and giving reasons why it would not work well. He admitted cross-examination that he had tapped the company's wire and put up a light of his own in his own home, free of charge, but insisted that he had spoken first to one of the employes of the plant and in that way got a sort of permission. He is apparently well educated, but did not seem to comprehend. Geo. Henderson's skill as a short hand writer, for he gave his testimony in such deliberate and broken chunks as one would give to a longhand reporter. He evidently is not onto George's curves. He claimed McIntyre had been the means of his losing the money he put into the plant. It is plain that the two men are unfriendly.

SATURDAY.

There was no court this forenoon, as the McIntyre case was put off till Judge Brown should reach here from Angola on the 3 p. m. train. Then the remaining witnesses will be examined and the attorneys make brief pleas and try and end the case. Of course, it will not be over when we go to press. A great deal of interest centers about the impeachment cases against the two commissioners which is to come up on Monday. This case will be tried before Judge Marsh of Winchester, Randolph county, who will reach here on the north bound noon train Monday.

SPARLING VS NUSBAUM.

This is a new case, started this morning. Dr. Sparling last year, bought out Dr. Nusbaum. Now he brings an injunction suit against Nusbaum to enjoin him from practicing medicine, claiming that Nusbaum agreed not to practice here any more. Sparling's attorneys are Pomeroy, Roby & Link. Nusbaum's attorneys are Baxter and Brown. The hearing was before Judge Penfield. The petition finally asked, only, that Nusbaum be enjoined from selling the notes given by Sparling, until the injunction case, proper, can be disposed of. This temporary order, was granted. Then came a short hearing of another Smithfield case.

THE WINNER.

Fred Yesbera is making some of his latest pattern bicycles, the pattern of '97. It is called the the "Winner," and is in all regards a splendid machine, everything of the latest and best patterns, with all the new ideas found in the best high grade wheels. All who are judges of bicycles should call and see these Auburn made wheels. A novelty, to us, at least, is the bicycles he is making for little boys, the size of Ward Yesbera and Charlie McClellan. These little wheels are as complete and perfect in all their parts as the wheels for grown people. They are quite a curiosity.

Horrible! Horrible!

Innocent children by the thousand are constantly dying of diarrhœa whose life might be saved. How quickly the common works! Flesh speedily wastes away as though subjected to fire. You need change of water, and change of food and change of air. The handiest and quickest and safest thing you can do is to procure at once a bottle of Dr. Hand's Diarrhœa Mixture, at any drug store, for 25c. It's wonderful how quickly it brings good results. FUN AT THE ARMORY.

Thursday's Daily.

The Cake Walk given by the Trumpet Note Band at the Armory last evening, produced a good deal of fun, both for the participants and spectators. The attendance was not very large, as it is a new thing here, and people did not really know what it was. It turns out to be entirely different from the original cake walks of the colored people. In this case the band boys sold tickets to such as chose to enter the "walk." Then, near the south end of the hall, was drawn a chalk line about six feet long, north and south. The procession of ticket holders formed on the floor and marched around the west side then turned east across this line, and so on around. Sam Campbell, sat to the south of the line, with his back to it, and held a watch in his hand. Three minutes after the march began, he struck the table in front of him, and that stopped the marching. The ones nearest to the line, and just coming to it got that cake. This was continued as long as any cakes were left. The prize winners were:

E. M. Bishop and Jake Raut for the first march; Geo. Grund and Byron Rainier, got the second; Hod Thomas and Lew Blaney, the third; Ed. Baker and John Grube, the fourth; Mrs. Penfield and Mrs. Geo. M. Henderson, the fifth; Brad Ralston, got the sixth. It is likely the boys will try it again some time.

AROUND THE WORLD.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS OF THE GLOBE.

News from Foreign Shores—Domestic Happenings—Personal Pointers—Labor Notes—Political Occurrences—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Etc.

Hostilities Begun.

A special from Elassona, Macedonia, says: Bands of Greek brigands have entered Turkey at Krania, in the vicinity of Grobina. The Turkish troops have been engaged with them and fighting is in progress. At the Turkish headquarters this news is looked upon as being of the gravest description in view of the excitement here. Edhem Pasha has sent orders to have everything in readiness for an advance of the Turkish army in force. It is not yet known whether Greek's troops were among the bands that have entered Turkish territory.

Torture and Steal.

Information comes from the little hamlet of Parkertown, east of Toledo, that three masked men broke into the house of James Ford, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ford, both aged over 80, and, after abusing the old persons, bound, gagged and robbed them of the savings of many years. The house was looted from top to bottom, and many valuables, besides a large sum of money, were taken. The robbers then broke into the barn of ex-Sheriff Starr, stole a buggy and team of horses and escaped towards Sandusky.

Mrs. Stanford's Life Insurance.

Mrs. Leland Stanford of San Francisco, has signed a contract by which her life is insured for $1,000,000. The policy is said to be the largest ever issued. By the terms of the contract Mrs. Stanford is to pay an annual premium of $170,000, and upon her death $1,000,000 will be paid by the company to the Leland Stanford Jr., University. Should she live ten years and continue the annual payments of premiums, the university will receive at her death $2,000,000 instead of $1,000,000.

Father and His Twin Babes Fatally Burned.

Boston (Ind.) special: James Gammon, a farmer living near Marietta, and his twin babies were probably fatally burned by an explosion of an oil can in the hands of Mrs. Gammon, while filling a burning lamp. Mr. Gammon was rocking the babes by the table when the accident occurred. The woman caught a quilt from a cradle near by and smothered the flames, but not until serious injuries were done.

Rivera Rescued.

Key West (Fla.) special: News was received here that the Cuban insurgents had made an attack on the train upon which General Rivera was being taken from Sant Cristobal to Havana. Reports say that the insurgents were successful in their attack and that General Rivera was freed. It is impossible to get a confirmation of the report, but the Cuban sympathizers here believe it to be true and are accordingly jubilant.

Mr. Bryan Hurt.

Hon. W. J. Bryan was injured at St. Augustine, Fla., by the caving in of the piazza from which he was speaking. Nearly four hundred men and women were precipitated about twenty feet to the ground, and many of them injured, but none fatally. Mr. Bryan was picked up unconscious, and removed to a physician's office where an examination revealed that he received no injuries of a serious nature.

Masked Men Hold Up an Operator.

Two masked men entered the Chicago and Grand Trunk depot at Mishawaka, a station near Laporte, Ind., and held up the operator at the point of revolvers. He was bound, gagged and locked in a box car, after which the safe was looted. The amount secured is unknown. The Lake Shore office was looted last week and the operator similarly treated. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

New York Is Not "Greater."

Albany (N. Y.) special: Messages from the Mayors of New York and Brooklyn on the charter have been received. Mayor Wurster of Brooklyn, approves, but Mayor Strong of New York, disapproves of the charter. The charter will now have to be passed by both houses of the Legislature over the Mayor's veto. It is thought this can be easily done.

Hanged Himself with Twine.

John Roth, married, was found dead hanging by a piece of twine to one of the posts in the Home Milling Company's mill at Wapakoneta, Ohio. He had been drinking.

Fatally Hurt by an Explosion.

The cylinder head of the immense Corliss engine at the Eagle Cotton Mills Madison, Ind., blew out, fatally injuring Captain James Hartley, the chief engineer.

Farmer Killed in a Well.

W. A. Laybourn, a wealthy farmer living near Laporte, Ind., was killed by the caving in of a well. He was buried under eleven feet of dirt and brick.

Blown to Pieces.

The middle section of the Peoria and Eastern freight train was blown to pieces on the Belt Railroad switch west of Indianapolis. It is not known whether the train was first wrecked or whether the explosion caused the wreck. Two carloads of whisky exploded, destroying also two car loads of tobacco, one of lumber, two of eggs and one of theatrical scenery. The promiscuous mass took fire and several cars were destroyed. The force of the explosion threw the iron work many rods and piled up a mountain of freight. A tramp was seriously burned.

EASTERN.

A man claiming to be John McNeil, president of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, was dangerously wounded by footpads at Rochester, N. Y.

The Lebanon, Pa., Rolling Mill Company, owning the large iron plant known as Light's mills, has executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors. President Samuel E. Light said the cause of the assignment was attributable to the necessity of the company carrying $43,000 of notes drawn by other firms who have since assigned or failed, thereby compelling the company to pay interest on their own money. The assets are in excess of liabilities and reorganization of the company will be made as soon as may be expedient.

The battleship Iowa made her official trial trip off Rockport, Mass., at the rate of sixteen and three-hundredths knots. The Iowa is officially known as "seagoing battleship No. 1." The Iowa is larger than the Indiana in length, beam and other measurements, but the disposition of the battery is the same, except that she carries four 12-inch guns, where the Indiana carries four 13-inch and six 6-inch guns, as against the Indiana's four 6-inch, and her secondary battery is 22 rapid-fire and machine guns, as against the 20 of similar caliber on the Indiana. In a word, while the Iowa is the larger ship of the two, her armor and armament are both lighter than those of the Indiana. These differences in plan are based upon the fact that, while the Indiana is intended as a fighting ship, with every other quality more or less subordinated to that of ability to give and take hard and heavy blows, the Iowa is designed to combine with the latter quality the attributes of an all-round seagoing cruiser. The dimensions of the Iowa are: Length on the load water line, 360 feet; extreme breadth, 72 feet 2½ inches; displacement on normal draught, 11,300 tons. The contract speed was sixteen knots, with a premium of $50,000 for each quarter knot in excess. The main battery of the Iowa consists of four 12-inch breech-loading rifles in the two main turrets, eight 8-inch breech-loading rifles mounted in pairs in the four turrets at the corners of the casemate, six 4-inch breech-loading rifles mounted in sponsons, or with shields, and twenty-two rapid-fire and machine guns. With the stability due to her great beam she can fight with her whole battery in any weather. The Iowa's full war complement is 512 officers, seamen and marines. The contract price of the boat was $3,010,000. Her maximum coal carrying capacity is 3,000 tons, and gives her a cruising radius of about 16,000 knots at the most economical speed.

City elections in Wisconsin show the Democratic vote was in the ascendant. St. Louis, Mo., remains Republican. The result in Michigan seemed to favor the Democrats, and in Illinois also heavy Democratic gains are reported. Many Kansas cities chose Democratic Mayors and Councils.

Weeks have elapsed since the terrible wreck on the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad at White River, Ind., in which five lives were lost, and not one of the bodies has been recovered. The work of repairing the large crevasse made by the raging river after the wreck has been completed, and all train service has been resumed over the main line of the road.

The wooden span of the north-end approach to the Ohio connecting railroad bridge at Pittsburg collapsed Monday morning while a Fort Wayne freight train was crossing, and the engine and thirteen cars were precipitated to McClure avenue, fifty feet below. Fireman William Haggerty was killed instantly and Engineer William Graham so badly injured that he cannot recover.

At Kincaid, Kan., Mrs. W. H. Burkey and her daughters Effie and Jennie Kirby were shot and seriously wounded Sunday afternoon by George Miller of Moran, who called at the house and asked to see Miss Effie Kirby, a daughter of Mrs. Burkey by a former husband. Mrs. Burkey declined to admit him, fearing him, as she knew that the youth was recently released from an insane asylum.

For some little time the probable candidacy of United States Senator W. A. Harris of Kansas for the nomination for president of the fusion forces in 1900 has been common gossip among Kansas capital politicians. The Topeka Daily Capital in this connection says: "A little political cloud no bigger than Senator Harris has risen over Mr. Bryan's chances for the leadership of the Popocratic forces of 1900. The former is being urged by his friends to make the race."

Col. George F. Payne, a well-known gold miner of California for more than a quarter of a century, who has just arrived at Pomona, Cal., from Arizona, says that Yuma is wild with excitement because of the two finds of marvelous rich gold ore. At the Pichaco mining district, twenty-five miles north of Yuma, on the California side of the Colorado river, are the Golden Dream and Noonday mines. For several weeks the men at those mines have been getting into rich ore and the owner has been offered as high as $175,000 for his mines. Thursday men in both mines, at almost the same hour, ran into ledges of ore that yield over $6,000 to the ton. Four specimens from these ledges were found to run $2,750 per ton. Twelve carelessly selected bits of rock assayed $3,120 to the ton. The ledges in the Pichaco district are all very large. One ledge of low-grade ore there is sixty feet wide. No one can tell yet the dimensions of the ledge in which this rich ore has been found, but it is certainly a big one. Besides there is constantly coming into Yuma every day news of rich fields in the Gleason district, twenty miles east of Yuma, near Tacna Station, and surrounded by desert.

SOUTHERN.

J. P. Atkinson, the 17-year-old son of Gov. Atkinson, and Miss Ada Bryan Byrd, aged 14, eloped from Atlanta, Ga. They took a train for Tennessee, but, fearing detection, they left the train, secured a horse and buggy at Kingston, and left for Rome. The parents of the youthful couple are greatly shocked at the conduct of the pair and have offered a reward for their detention, if apprehended before the marriage takes place.

The Richardson Building, the largest in Chattanooga, Tenn., and one of the largest in the South, was totally destroyed by fire Saturday morning, and two persons lost their lives. Fire caught from the furnace in the basement and ran up the elevator shaft. The dead: Boyd Ewing, S. M. Patton. One hundred offices and four stores were in the building. The total loss amounts to about $400,000, with insurance of about $200,000.

A reunion of the survivors of the battle of Shiloh—those who wore the gray as well as those who were garbed in blue—opened Tuesday at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., on that famous battlefield. This is the thirty-fifth anniversary of the commencement of the battle, and the reunion was under the auspices of the Shiloh Battlefield Association, composed of ex-soldiers, Union and Confederate. A general invitation had been extended to all other soldiers and civilians and a dozen States were represented in the crowd that went out to the battlefield. The morning program was confined to an informal reunion, the exercises being fixed for the afternoon, with Gen. J. A. McClernand of Springfield, Ill., presiding. Those on the program were Dr. Joseph E. Martin of Jackson, Tenn., for the opening address on "A United Country," response by Captain E. Y. Hedley of Bunker Hill, Ill., and Gen. James R. Chalmers and Gen. McClernand contributing some "Recollections of Shiloh" from the standpoint of the gray and the blue. The special feature of the occasion was the dedication of the Ninth Illinois monument, which marks the spot where 219 men of a battalion of 400 fell in one day's fighting, sixty-nine killed and 150 wounded.

WASHINGTON.

At Lafayette, La., the Blanc brothers were executed. They murdered Simon Begnaud, a merchant at Scott, La., about a year ago. The boys were both under 20 years of age.

President McKinley Wednesday sent a message to Congress saying that $150,000 to $200,000 was immediately needed for relief in the flooded districts in the Mississippi valley.

The State Department has received notice from the Turkish Government that it finds it inconvenient to raise the grade of its mission in Washington to that of an embassy on account of the increased expense which would thereby be incurred. This decision of the Turkish Government will prevent the President under the existing law from nominating ex-Secretary John W. Foster as ambassador to Constantinople, as it is understood was his desire.

The Supreme Court has decided not to hear oral arguments this term in the case of the United States against the Joint Traffic Association, on appeal from the Federal Court of New York. The day set for hearing is Oct. 18, but other hearings were set for the same day, and the case may not be reached before November. This decision of the Supreme Court to postpone action until next fall will be a serious disappointment to the railroads. Their wish was that the points involved in the Joint Traffic Association case would be disposed of this spring, so they would know exactly what was before them, and whether or not they would have to appeal to Congress for remedial legislation before the adjournment of the special session. The action of the court is open to the construction that, in the opinion of the Supreme Court, there is no necessity for extraordinary haste on the part of the tribunal to extricate the railroads from the uncertainty for which they themselves are largely responsible. The controversy between the Government and the railroads is not of the Government's seeking, the provoking cause of the litigation being the roads themselves.

FOREIGN.

Aubrey Beardsley, the artist, is dangerously ill at London, and it is feared he cannot recover.

The Bulgarian Government has advertised for proposals for building eighty-two miles of railroad from Ronstchouk to Tirnovo. United States Consul Stephan at Annaberg reports that a deposit of 540,000 francs in the Sophia National Bank is required as security, and that full plans, etc., can be obtained by American bidders for 20 francs upon application to the ministry of public works.

An Havana dispatch of Monday says: The prevailing belief is that Gen. Rivera will not be shot. An order is said to come from Madrid to spare his life. This is not prompted from motives of humanity, but to make a good impression upon the United States and other nations. Gen. Weyler is furious, it is reported, and may cause the order to be withdrawn, in which case Gen. Rivera would be put to death. A report from the insurgents says that Gen. Rivera received orders from Gen. Gomez to turn over his command to Gen. Roloff, and was about to report to Gen. Gomez for other duty when he was captured. That his capture was brought about by treason is still suspected, but Senor Jorrin is no longer accused. The traitor is thought to have been a petty officer under Gen. Rivera.

Havana dispatch: It has just transpired that Rivera was captured in a hospital and not in battle, as the official reports alleged. Rivera had been wounded in a skirmish two days previous to his capture and when seized was receiving treatment in a Cuban hospital. He had with him his staff and 100 men. The attack on the hospital was made by 4,600 Spanish troops under Hernandez Velasco. Rivera, though wounded, endeavored to cut his way out, but fell, pierced by two more bullets. Acting Captain General Ahumada has received orders from Minister of War Azcarraga, at Madrid, not to try Gen. Ruis Rivera immediately by court martial. The Minister thinks that a summary court martial, followed by the shooting of Rivera and Baccalou, would have a bad effect in Europe. The Spanish general, Velasco, has been instructed to offer Rivera a pardon on condition that he use his influence to induce Brigs, Ducaisse, Vidal, and Delgado, and other insurgent leaders in Pinar del Rio to surrender under the amnesty decree. Delgado said he would lay down his arms to save Rivera's life on condition that he himself and his immediate followers be paroled.

FLOOD VICTIMS AIDED

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY'S APPEAL IS HEEDED.

He Asks Congress to Act at Once in the Matter of Relief, and in a Very Brief Time $200,000 Is Appropriated.

Message from the President.

President McKinley appealed to Congress Wednesday for relief for Southern flood sufferers, and Congress was quick to respond. Here is the text of the message:

Information which has recently come to me from the governors of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, and from prominent citizens of these States and Tennessee, warrants the conclusion that widespread distress, involving the destruction of a large amount of property and loss of human life, has resulted from the floods which have been submerging that section of the country. These are stated, on reliable authority, to be the most destructive floods that have ever devastated the Mississippi Valley, the water being much higher than the highest stage it has reached before. From Marion, Ark., north of Memphis, to Greenville, Miss., a distance of more than 250 miles by river, it is reported there are now at least fifty towns and villages under water, and a territory extending from ten miles north of Memphis to 200 miles south, and from five to forty miles wide, is submerged. Hundreds of thousands of acres of cultivated soil, with growing crops, are included in the submerged territory. In this section alone there are from 50,000 to 60,000 people whose property has been destroyed and whose business has been suspended. Growing crops have been ruined, thousands of cattle have been drowned, and the inhabitants of certain areas threatened with starvation. As a great majority of the sufferers are small farmers, they have been left entirely destitute and will be unprepared for work even after the floods have subsided.

The entire Mississippi Valley in Arkansas is flooded and communication with many points cut off. In Mississippi a like condition exists. The levees in Louisiana, with a single exception, have held, but the water is rising and the situation there is reported as being extremely critical.

Under such circumstances the citizens of these States look for the co-operation and support of the national government in relieving the pressing cases of destitution for food, clothing and shelter, which are beyond the reach of local efforts. The authorities who have communicated with the Executive recognize that their first and most energetic duty is to provide, so far as possible, the means of caring for their own citizens, but nearly all of them agree in the opinion that after their resources have been exhausted a sum aggregating at least $150,000, and possibly $200,000, will be required for immediate use.

Precedents are not wanting that in such emergencies as this Congress has taken prompt, generous and intelligent action, involving the expenditure of considerable sums of money, with satisfactory results. In 1874 $300,000 was appropriated, and in 1882 $350,000 was also appropriated for relief in the same direction, besides large sums in other years.

The citizens' relief committee of Memphis, which has taken prompt action, has already cared for from 6,000 to 7,000 refugees from the flooded districts, and they are still arriving in that city in large numbers daily. Supplies and provisions have been sent to the various points in Arkansas and Mississippi by this committee, but the most that can be done by these efforts is to partly relieve the most acute cases of suffering. No action has yet been taken for the great majority of the inhabitants living in the interior, whose condition has already been described.

Under these conditions, and having fully exerted themselves to the fullest extent, the local authorities have reluctantly confessed their inability to further cope with this distressing situation unaided by relief from the Government.

It has, therefore, seemed to me that the representatives of the people should be promptly informed of the nature and extent of the suffering and needs of these stricken people, and I have communicated these facts in the hope and belief that the legislative branch of the Government will promptly re-enforce the work of the local authorities in the States named.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

A resolution was at once passed by the House appropriating $200,000 for the sufferers and, the Senate giving it speedy sanction, the resolution was carried to the White House, where the President gladly signed it. Sufferers from floods along the Red River of the North are included in the resolution. Secretary Alger acted with promptness for distribution of relief for flood sufferers. Six army officers were sent to Memphis, and, dividing the Mississippi into six sections, will ascertain the needs of the people. Another detail of officers will follow, distributing rations in accordance with the reports of these officers, acting in harmony with the local relief committees. Memphis will be headquarters for the purchase of supplies and distribution. The six districts into which the Mississippi will be divided for purposes of investigation and distribution are as follows: From Memphis down to Helena; from Helena down to Greenville; from Greenville down to Vicksburg; from Vicksburg to New Orleans; from Memphis to Cairo; from Cairo up.

BATTLESHIP IOWA IS THE QUEEN OF AMERICAN WAR VESSELS.

The battleship Iowa is the queen of the American navy. By her grand work Wednesday in her speed trial she proved herself to be the superior of the Indiana or Massachusetts. Incidentally she earned a premium of $200,000 for her builders, William Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, by making an average of seventeen knots an hour over the regular Government course off the Massachusetts coast in the four hours' trial required by the Government under the contract. The Iowa just did it, and that was all. In fact, so narrow was the margin that all the reckoners had to carry out their figures to the fourth decimal point in order to make the speed for the whole course average seventeen knots an hour.

BREAK IN THE LEVEE BELOW MEMPHIS.

STORY OF THE WATERS.

10,000 Square Miles Flooded, and 200 Lives Lost.

Ten thousand square miles of flooded farm lands, 200 lives lost, and $100,000,000 worth of property destroyed. This is the record of the huge yellow monster that coils its length like the slow spreading tentacle of an octopus from the British line to the Mexican gulf. It is the record of the insatiate Mississippi. Seven States are wailing and wallowing and floundering in the muddy torrent, and thousands of people have gone sailing over their farms and into the flooded forests on logs, on rafts, on the roofs of their houses. On the small knolls that yet rise above the deluged lands in Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, little groups of half-starved men are gathered with their families and farm animals, waiting for the rescue that comes so slowly.

And still the tide rises and swells and widens and sings its long song of death and disaster through the broken levees, and still the six-foot snows of Minnesota and the Dakotas melt and pour their vast volume into the already unprecedented current. Levees from St. Louis to Vicksburg are broken and destroyed. Crevasses are everywhere. Twenty thousand men have fought night and day, and are still fighting the roaring waters. In the backwoods and isolated lowlands of Arkansas and Mississippi thousands of poor settlers have been deluged and are cut off from communication or rescue. Thousands of farm animals have been drowned. Culverts and bridges have been washed away and railroad traffic impeded. Relief is slow and inadequate, and the end is not yet.

DRAPER DID THE DEED.

Confesses to the Murder of Charles L. Hastings at Jacksonville, Ill.

Charles L. Draper has made to his pastor, Rev. Dr. Morey, a complete confession of the murder of Charles L. Hastings in the abstract office of Judge Kirby at Jacksonville, Ill., March 31. He said that he had been in the employ of Judge Kirby for some time, when Hastings came back to the city without means and in despair over losing his property. Draper said he interceded for Hastings with Judge Kirby and secured him a position. They went to work together and from that time the trouble began. Draper claimed that he had shown Hastings every kindness only to be rebuffed. He would do a great amount of work preparing papers and Hastings would label them with his name and take the credit of preparing them.

The trouble culminated when Draper pressed Hastings for a reason why he was so cool and was answered with an oath that he wanted nothing more to do with him. An appeal to Judge Kirby had no effect and Draper resigned and then began business for himself. In order to get through with his work he had to have access to the books he had helped to prepare. He had kept a key to the door, and decided to see if the combination on the vault door had been changed and found it had not. He went there night after night to take off the abstracts of titles. He was suspected and was shadowed by a detective for over a month, but he held off until the detective went off duty and a day or two after made his last visit to the office. Hastings unexpectedly entered and Draper says attacked him, and during the struggle which followed he drew a knife and inflicted the fatal stabs. Draper says he has retained Gov. Johnson of St. Louis, and he, with Col. Pat Dyer, will make a stubborn fight for the man's life.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

THE WEEK'S DOINGS IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Comprehensive Digest of the Proceedings in the Legislative Chambers at Washington—Matters that Concern the People.

Lawmakers at Labor.

Most of the members of the House have gone to their homes and some of them do not expect to return until the Senate has passed the tariff bill. At present Speaker Reed is determined to enforce the program of having the House meet every three days and immediately adjourn without attempting to transact any business. It is not certain, however, that the policy of nonaction can be adhered to. Great pressure is being brought to bear upon the Speaker and his lieutenants in the House to prevent consideration of other business. Until the tariff bill is reported the Senate will occupy its time in discussing the arbitration treaty.

The Senate Monday by unanimous vote adopted a resolution reciting the reports that Gen. Ruis Rivera, the Cuban commander, is about to be tried by drumhead court martial and shot, and expressing the judgment of the Senate that if these reports are true the President of the United States should protest to the Spanish Government against such a violation of the rules of civilized warfare. This resolution was not sent to the House of Representatives, but became effective as a measure of advice to the President by its adoption. After the disposal of the Cuban question the day was given to speeches, Mr. Elkins speaking for two hours on the development of the American merchant marine and Mr. Lindsay advocating the passage of the Torrey bankruptcy bill. A joint resolution was agreed to directing the Surgeon General of the Marine Hospital service to aid the Mississippi River flood sufferers by the distribution of tents, blankets, food and medicine under the epidemic fund of 1893, and to purchase further supplies under the present epidemic fund for distribution.

The Senate Tuesday was occupied by discussion of Cuban affairs and the bankruptcy bill. The President sent to the Senate the following nominations: Treasury—Alonzo J. Tyler of Tennessee, to be collector of internal revenue for the second district of Tennessee; Park Agnew of Virginia, to be collector of internal revenue for the sixth district of Virginia. Navy—Theodore Roosevelt of New York, to be assistant secretary of the navy; Captain A. S. Crowninshield, United States navy, to be chief of the bureau of navagation in the department of the navy; Rev. William G. Cassard of Maryland, to be chaplain in the navy. Postmaster—William Barrett Ridgely at Springfield, Ill.

The House acted promptly Wednesday on the President's message and adopted a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to expend $200,000 for the relief of the flood sufferers of the Mississippi Valley. Adjournment was taken until Saturday. Cuba and the flood sufferers divided attention in the Senate. The reading of the President's message urging Congressional relief for the devastated regions of the Mississippi River was followed by the passage of a joint resolution offered by Senator Jones of Arkansas, appropriating $150,000, to be immediately available for the flood sufferers. It was passed by the unanimous vote of the Senate. The plans were changed, however, when the House resolution appropriating $200,000 for the Mississippi River and Red River of the North was received. This was accepted in lieu of the former resolution and was passed unanimously. Mr. Morgan of Alabama resumed his speech in support of the resolution on declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba.

The Senate Thursday heard Mr. Morgan of Alabama for the third successive day on his resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba. Mr. Nelson of Minnesota spoke for two hours on the bankruptcy bill, opposing the pending Torrey bill. Mr. Chandler offered a resolution, which was agreed to, as follows: "Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be directed to investigate the payments made or agreed to be made by the interstate commerce commission for attorneys' fees, and also to inquire whether in any cases the attorneys of the commission have also been employed by railroad companies in similar cases, and further whether any additional authority from Congress is required for the employment of counsel in any pending proceedings which have been instituted by or on motion of the commission." The House gave no evidence of life.

He has been president of the Marquette Club, a social-political organization with a great influence in Republican affairs. In last fall's campaign he was a leader for McKinley.

At Portland the dead body of Philip Snyder was found lying in a hog yard, with his throat cut from ear to ear, and by his side the pocket knife which had been used to do the deed. Snyder had made careful preparations for taking his own life. He leaned over a fence, cut his throat, and let his head hang on the top rail. When he became so weak by the loss of blood that he could no longer stand, his body slid to the ground, where it was discovered.

Something of a sensation was caused in Evansville by the filing of a suit in the Superior Court by fifty prominent citizens against the American Investors' Trust Company of New York. The plaintiffs allege that they paid money to the local agent of the company to be applied to the purchase of real estate, and that the money was not used for that purpose. They sue to recover the money. Auditor of State Dailey has prohibited the company from operating in the State.

There arrived in Shelbyville the other day two foreigners, who were selling what they said were canary birds, and the parties succeeded in doing a land-office business with the housewives of the town, who were greatly taken up with the exceptionally pretty pets. Later however, these same ladies were decidedly out of humor when they found that the birds were nothing more nor less than English sparrows, which had been painted to resemble canaries, the paint washing off.

Word was received from Pittsburgh of the sentence of W. R. Rader of Muncie, to five years in the Columbus, Ohio, military prison on a double charge of desertion from the regular army. Rader twice enlisted, the last time under an assumed name, and both times ran away. He was trapped by a Government detective, who worked beside the man in the mill in Muncie, roomed with him for awhile, and then took Rader back to Pittsburgh under pretense of getting him a better position.

Reuss has been crying nearly all the time since he has been in jail. The only cause he gives for the killing is that he was nearly crazed with liquor and did not know what he was doing.

A RESURRECTION THOUGHT.

The bulbs that were hid in the darkness
Through the winter time and the snow
Have felt the thrill of the sunlight,
Their hour to bloom they know.
Purple and gold and scarlet
And white as the robes of a king,
To the glory of love at Easter
Their beautiful wealth they bring.

The grass that was brown and withered
And cold on the sodden plain
Has been kissed by the tender sunshine,
Caressed by the crystal rain
And its bright green lances quiver,
Lo! twice ten millions strong,
And the birds, with her nest among them,
Flies up with a sudden song.

And we, who have seen our darlings
Reft from our side away;
Who have wept in silent anguish
O'er the cold and pulseless clay,
Take heart in the Easter gladness,
A parable all may read,
For the Lord who cares for the flowers
Cares well for our greater need.

He knows of the loss and anguish,
The grope of the stricken soul;
He will bring again our dear ones,
By his touch of life made whole.
We shall need and know and love them
In the spring beyond the sea,
That, after earth's dreary winter,
Is coming to you and me.
—Mrs. M. E. Sangster.

THE EASTER LILY.

EASTER was but a fortnight off and two little girls, Lulu and Fanny, were watching with great interest mamma's calla, which at last was budded. Every morning they came early to the windows, where a few house plants were struggling for existence, and although every time they hoped to find a flower, and every time were so sadly disappointed, still the next morning found them at their post, hoping, in their childish faith, that some little blossom might be found for them.

All winter long they had watched the tiny leaflets unfolding, and these few plants had been carried back and forth, from one window to another, to catch every gleam of sunshine that strayed into the little room they called home. Every night these little loving hands had carefully covered the delicate leaves for protection from the chilling winds that would creep through the cracks and crevices, for old Boreas is a cold-hearted fellow, who shows little mercy for the poor, and worries his way into their chimney corners as if he were a welcome visitor.

But I don't think he had caught sight of this little bit of summer or he would have curled up the leaves with his cold fingers, and blown with his icy breath, until the tiny stalks became limp and lifeless, and the soil itself stiffened around the poor little roots. The little girls knew all this, and had covered their treasures so carefully at night, and cared for them so tenderly by day, that at last they were to be rewarded for all their labor—the lily had budded.

Long years ago—in fact, so many that it seemed to Lulu and Fanny a beautiful dream—there was a dear little home, where plants bloomed in the windows, and a warm fire gleamed in the grate; and in the springtime birds sang in the trees, and the lawn was covered with the greenest grass, where the bright spring flowers opened their eyes. And then, somehow, for the little girls could not tell how, all these beautiful things had faded away, only they and mamma were left, and mamma had to sew all the time, and sometimes she cried, too. Now these plants were all the garden they had; and only to think of it, the lily had budded; they were so happy; they must look oftener than before to see if the flower were almost there.

So the days crept by, and it seemed as if the lily would never unfold. To be sure, the winter was long and cold, and some days so dark and cloudy that the sun forgot to look into their windows, and some nights were so cold that the lily itself came near being chilled, so the bud was not very strong.

However, the days were getting warmer, for Easter was almost there.

At Sunday school the teacher had told the children that on that day Christ had risen from the dead, and how beautiful the Easter morn would become to them if Christ indeed had risen in their hearts, and she went on to tell how some Christians, during the forty days before Easter, would deny themselves some known pleasure and strive to consecrate themselves anew to Christ.

"My dear girls," she added, "are not we all willing to deny ourselves something for the sake of Christ? to give up some amusement, or habit, or treasure, that perhaps may be crowding us out of the kingdom?

"Is there not some object dear to us we are willing to give up for him? He gave his all for us—life, kingdom and heaven itself; his precious blood was shed, that we through him might live; and what have we done for him? Is there not something we can lay upon the altar as a sacrifice, so we may be prepared to receive his love into our hearts?"

All the way home from Sunday school, Lulu and Fanny were talking about what they could do for Christ; and perhaps, because they did not quite understand what was meant, or else had so little to give, they were a long time wondering what they could give to Christ; at last Fanny said: "I know what it is—the lily, we can give the lily to Christ; you know the teacher said it must be something we thought a great deal of, something dear to us, and I believe we care more for the lily than anything else." "But how will we send the lily to him?" asked Lulu. "I don't know," said Fanny, "but I guess God will show us how." And now that the lily was to be given to God, they bestowed more care than ever upon it; each day the bud grew larger, and you could begin to see a rim of white above the green.

The days sped on, and there were only four days till Easter, but in the meantime a malignant disease had settled over part of the city, and little children were rapidly falling at its approach; each mother trembled as she held her loved ones, for who knew how near the angel of death might be; he hovered around the homes of wealth and comfort, and of poverty and want, until at last the shadow fell across the street and into the room where the Easter lily was.

Fanny lay there unconscious of the sadness and gloom that had settled upon their little home; sometimes in the delirium of fever she would talk about the lily—God's lily, as they called it now. Each day the shadows deepened, so dark, so sad, and to-morrow was Easter.

All night mamma and Lulu watched the little sufferer, hoping for some word or look of recognition; morning was slowly dawning, Easter Sunday, when so many ages ago Christ had risen from the dead, and brought with him light and life to the waiting soul.

Away off in the distance you might catch the chime of the old cathedral bells as they rang in the joyous morn—perhaps some of the music reached Fanny's ears, for half opening her eyes she stretched her hand toward Lulu and whispered: "I will take the lily to him." Just them the sunshine burst into the room, Lulu turned to the window, and there unfolded in all its beauty was the lovely lily.

Long hours afterward, when the Sabbath bells were pealing their glad notes, and choral voices sang, "The Lord is risen indeed," the little child lay there so still, so beautiful, with the smile of heaven upon her lips, and holding in the waxen fingers her precious gift, the Easter lily.

AN EASTER ANTHEM.

BEST OF THE YEAR.

The Easter Holiday Season and Its Delightful Associations.

EASTER is more delightful in its associations than any other holiday season of the year. It follows a period of conventional mourning. It is a revival from traditional depression and gloom. It opens the morning of hope and expectation. It reveals the unfolding buds of the year and of human faith and promise.

In these respects it differs in significance from the autumnal thanksgiving and later Christmas holidays. Autumnal holidays mark the end of the harvest, when all its fruits have been gathered and when gratitude is expressed for every gift of Providence to mankind. The year is closed. Reflection is the sole occupation of the mind.

Truths may be gathered from experience as fruit is gathered from the soil. But in the autumn every human sentiment is inspired by a knowledge that the best products of the year have been gathered, that its enjoyments are closed, that its fugitive hours, opportunities, events and lessons, that all which it contained for good or evil, have become an element of the unreturning past.

Easter is the period of resurrection. It is an emblem of the revival which nature experiences with each return of the sun in its orbit and of the rains and dews at their appointed time. It brings vernal sunshine, airs and odors. It is celebrated by offerings of flowers, by gayety in attire, by festive display, by all the gaudy outward semblance, in which the dayspring of the heart and of the season is clothed.

The Christianized Easter which the world celebrates is a higher inspiration of pagan philosophy, renewed, refined and etherealized by the influences which proceeded from the tragic events on Calvary and from their sublime conclusion. From the earliest era when man began to study the world around him and deify its manifestations the spring was sanctified as the period of the year when the vigor of nature's creative forces first was displayed. Every form of ancient mythology recognized the vernal equinox as the point of rejuvenation for the world of vegetable and animal life. Every wind of spring that blew and every wave that murmured were regarded as the source of new vital energies in production and growth.

From these beautiful pagan beliefs to the beautiful new Christian belief the change was not violent nor phenomenal. It was a graceful evolution from heathen to Christian thought. It was transition of that which was false but was almost as beautiful as truth to the beauty and holiness of truth. Coleridge described the abandoned fictions of classical beliefs:

The intelligible forms of ancient poets,
The fair humanities of old religion,
The power, the beauty and the majesty
That had their haunts in dale or piney mountain,
Or forest, by slow brook or pebbly spring
Or chasm, or watery depth—all these are vanished;
They live no longer in the faith of reason.

In places of these fantastic heathen images the new religion brought realities of grace and truth. The old fictions of the earth and air dissolved and disappeared. They were succeeded by the gospel of peace and good will to all mankind—of universal practical charity, of faith manifested in good works, of all the gospel lessons which Easter day and its associations convey. Pagan philosophers and poets reached only the fancies and dreams of men. Christian philosophy reaches the profoundest depths of the intellect and the heart.

This is the lesson and instruction of the day! It relates both to the past and the future. It is a reminiscence and a promise. It combines the garnered wisdom of ages with the hope of all the years to come!

Day of Great Joy.

The Easter of Rome transcends in pomp and splendor that of all other countries. The Pope is borne into the great gallery of St. Peter's, and gives his solemn benediction, "to Rome and the world."

Poland feasts at this period on saffron cakes, roast pig and little lambs served with pistachio plums. The number of dishes cooked is enormous. Eggs form a part of all the pastimes. The religious services are devout and impressive.

In Mexico it is the great festival of the year. In the City of Mexico the population fill the streets and the parks, which resemble the most beautiful gardens. People passing each other in the streets throw flowers with their salutations. Bands discourse sweet music, and there is general abandonment to the delights of the festival of their "Sunday of joy."

In America the occasion is observed generally but quietly. Presents are exchanged, eggs and flowers are given a prominent place, and the church services are unusually impressive. If the Americans had any special use for the festival in a worldly way they might designate it as the "feast of hats." The feminine portion of the community wear new hats, according to the ancient tradition that to be lucky all the year, something new must be worn on Easter Sunday.

IN JOYOUS GREETING.

Gifts that Are Fraught with the Season's Spirit.

The custom of giving Easter gifts is on the increase. A few years ago a simple card sent to friends was accounted sufficient recognition of the day. But the card swelled into a leaflet, the leaflet into a book, and now the book has sought the companionship of divers and sundry articles of a distinctly feminine character, and with them proceeds to organize a Christmas at the beginning of spring. With a slight change of sentiment even Christmas and New Year's presents can pass muster as Easter offerings. The cards are delicate in design and spring-like in coloring. Facetiousness creeps in through the only channel open to it, manifesting itself in groups of chickens and pictures of rabbits on cards designed especially for children.

The eggshell, variously decorated, is ubiquitous, as usual. The decoration of eggshells is not so difficult as it looks to one familiar only with their fragility. To prepare them, wash the shells first with vinegar and then with soda and water; puncture a small hole in each end and blow out the contents. Make a solution of plaster of paris and water, thin enough to run easily, and fill the shell half full, using a small paper funnel, then insert the two ends of a piece of narrow ribbon and continue the filling. It will take about twenty minutes for the plaster to harden. Then give the egg a sizing with gum water to make the color take, and it is ready for decoration.

Goose and duck eggs filled with plaster of paris, prettily painted and arranged in a nest of colored cotton wool, in one of the little Japanese baskets that may be purchased for 5 or 10 cents, make cunning gifts for children.

Anything that is just a little out of the ordinary is acceptable at Easter. Photographs mounted on bits of tinted cardboard or framed in delicate white frames prettily decorated make satisfactory presents—if given to the right people.

An Easter Catastrophe.

'Tis Easter day, the sky's serene,
New dainty gowns and hats are seen,
A fragrance sweet the breeze instills
Of violets and daffodils.

Where parks are green, the fountains play,
Nature revives, and maids display;
I have no heart for all of that—
The breeze has spoiled my Easter hat!

Outcome of Centuries.

The resume of Easter customs finds the central idea in the fact that they are the outcome of eighteen centuries of religious zeal, and the concentration of genius and enthusiasm in art, science, poetry and learning of every sort. Easter is a crystallization of the hope expressed in its solemn observances, deliverance from death, founded on the story of the great Teacher of Nazareth, and carrying joy and life into the dead and desolate theories that in the dark ages held the world in dominance. The festival of the soul is the highest and greatest of all the ceremonies of Eastertide.

VICTORIA'S JUBILEE.

The Extraordinary Event Will Be Celebrated Magnificently.

The sixtieth anniversary of the coronation of Queen Victoria will be celebrated in a magnificent manner in London. It will be a stupendous affair beyond question—something unmatched in the history of Christendom. The great sovereign, in whose honor all will be done, is worthy the homage which her subjects will pay her. It will be paid gladly and with complete national unanimity, in spite of substantial sacrifices which it will involve.

It is not a very alluring prospect which London holds out to strangers who think of seeing this town en fete next June. It is distinctly a home festival which the British empire will hold in its capital city. Strangers are not invited, not even the rulers of other nations. Of course strangers will go, but they must not complain if they find the accommodations scanty and that preference has been given to members of the British family who come from distant parts of the empire. The aim of every human being in London on Tuesday, June 22, will be to see the Queen and the royal procession. The number of persons who will be possessed by that purpose on that day cannot be estimated at less than six millions. It will probably be more. It will undoubtedly be the largest number of men and women ever assembled in the history of the world. This massing of humanity will be the marvel, the memorable event of this memorable day. The spectators themselves will be the great spectacle. The most impressive sight ever witnessed was the silent multitude, three millions in number, who lined the Champs Elysees and the Bois de Boulogne last October waiting for the entrance of the Czar into Paris. One who drove the whole length of the route just before the procession passed over it describes is as if like riding along the dry bed of a river, with all humanity for its banks. A crowd of 10,000 or even 100,000 is within one's comprehension; it is an assemblage made up of units. When the number mounts into the millions it is no longer a crowd, it is no longer human. It is a new and mighty creature having attributes like unto no other. In its presence is almost awe. There is revealed the meaning of the words: "The voice of the people is the voice of God." Such a sight will Queen Victoria witness on her great fete day. She and her escort will be the real spectators. Their eyes will see and their ears will hear the face and the voice of Great Britain. That, indeed, is a mighty privilege. It will be interesting and memorable no doubt—a spectacle which the children's children of the children who see it will read about, but how much more valuable would be the place of a private soldier in the procession itself. A fortune by comparison should be the price of that privilege if money could buy it. The people to-day and history in future will, however, make chief account of the jubilee procession in its movements in London. The route is six miles, and the crack troops of the British army will be used instead of police to keep the line of march. In all about 25,000 military will be employed during the day to line the streets and keep order, besides forming guards of honor and firing salutes. Cavalry in the arrangement forms a very important element, and it is officially stated that there will be ten cavalry regiments employed. The navy will be represented by large contingents of blue jackets and royal marines. The procession will be a mile long. It will comprise four regiments of cavalry, eight squadrons of the Household Guards and other infantry, seven bands and three batteries of artillery. These will lead the line and be followed by the troops from India and from the colonies. Then will come the Duke of Connaught and his staff, Lord Wolseley, the commander-in-chief of the army, and the headquarters staff. Following this brilliant cortege will come the Queen's carriage, escorted by the Prince of Wales and other British and foreign princes on horseback. The procession will close with other carriages containing the princesses and ladies of the court, members of the colonial governments and more military. The demand for reserved seats to see the parade is great. The lowest price at which one will be sold is $25. Ten thousand dollars has already been paid by speculators for a day's rent of one building facing St. Paul's Churchyard.

CHAS. A. DANA, "THE DEAN OF AMERICAN JOURNALISM."

CHARLES A. DANA, editor of the New York Sun, and president of the United Press, the news-gathering organization which recently assigned, is called "the dean of American journalism," and it may be truly said that it was he who lifted journalism to the dignity of a profession. There are those who attribute to his influence the fact that newspaper writers have been enabled to earn salaries more or less commensurate with the intelligence and ability involved in their work. Mr. Dana is now 78 years old, and most of his long life has been spent in work connected with the writing and editing of newspapers. He worked with Horace Greeley on the Tribune and was paid $20 a week for work that he afterward avowed was worth four times the money. It was these early rebuffs that determined his career. He was not impressed with the newspaper hack of the early days, and he set to work to teach newspaper men the real meaning of their calling and to establish a code of journalistic ethics which will long survive him. He had the pleasure of repaying Greeley's roughness by supporting him for the Presidency of the United States. The date of his real greatness in the newspaper field is that on which he became the editor of the Sun, which has ever since been the favorite journal of newspaper men generally in America. For many years Mr. Dana has not been active in the management of his paper, although its conduct is dominated by his ideas. He is a benevolent man, fond of encouraging Utopian dreamers even if he does not believe in their philosophy, and, withal, is perhaps the most picturesque figure in newspaper literature of America, standing, as he does, between the old orthodox ideas and the new journalism of the day.

HOSPITAL CARS.

Austria Has the System Perfected for Railroads.

Austria has a complete system of railway hospital cars for use in the event of an accident. Railway accidents on anything like a big scale never occur in Austria. Yet Austria, with its system of slow-paced trains, possesses a capitally organized plan of ambulance relief carriages in the event of a smash in which many persons have been injured. The relief movement has emanated from Vienna, a center where the practice of affording "first aid to the wounded" is carried out to perfection. Improvised goods vans were formerly used for this purpose. Large ambulance cars, however, have been of late specially constructed at the Florisdorf Works of the Northern Railway Co., and are now stationed singly at busy centers along the main line. They each contain ten beds, and the interior of the car is as roomy, complete and comfortable as any hospital ward. The new car possesses many advantages, affording shelter as a temporary hospital in the event of serious accidents occurring to local railway workers.

INTERIOR OF THE HOSPITAL CAR.

STICKY FLY PAPER.

It Has About Run Poison Fly-Paper Out of the Market.

The manufacture of sticky fly-paper had its origin in Grand Rapids, Mich., about a dozen years ago, and already it has nearly driven the poisonous paper out of the market. The sticky paper is by no means dangerous, whereas the poisonous paper has caused children who have drank the water from it considerable displeasure, and death in some instances. As to how the fly-paper is made, and the dimensions of the business, but little is known to those who are not directly interested in it. The sticky preparation is not protected by patents or copyright, for to secure such protection it would be necessary to make public the formula, and none of the machinery used is patented for the same reason.

From 300 to 500 girls are employed in the manufacture of the sticky paper. The sticky preparation, of course, is the principal feature of the paper, and it possesses the quality of staying sticky to the end without drying up when exposed to the air and sunlight.

It flows smooth and even and does not "strike through" the paper upon which it is spread. The paper is a good quality of cheap manilla, printed on one side and covered with the sticky stuff on the other.

Around the edge is a strip of paraffin to prevent the balsam from oozing out, and inside of this wax frame is death to flies.

The wax strip and the sticky stuff are put upon the paper in one operation by a machine which was made in sections in different machine shops, so as to keep its construction a profound secret.

The Trouble.

"I'm surprised that she is opposed to the wheel. She is a broad-minded woman."

"Her broadness is not all in her mind, however."—Detroit Journal.

The difference between what people seem to be, and what they are, is about the same as the difference between the picture on a tomato can, and the tomatoes.

The Impeachment Proceedings Against Him Dismissed.

FAIR vs COFFINBERRY

Trial Set for Next Week, Friday April 23d.

COURT WILL CONTINUE ALL NEXT WEEK.

Tuesday's Daily.

The arguments for and against took all the afternoon yesterday and were very able and exhaustive. Judge Marsh said he wanted to hear the case fully as the law was a new one to him as well as to the attorneys. Judge Zollars said a case of this kind must be tried by a jury. He objected to several points in the charge. It ought in each case tell when and where and how all the acts named occurred.

Roby replied the specifications were plain enough. Hague had been in office two years and four months; Bateman one year and four months. He made a special point that the Board had neglected to make examination of auditor's office, or the issue of orders, many county orders were being issued without authority.

Zollars answered that it was ridiculous for anyone to come into court a charge of wrong doing on the part of any officer, without stating when and where it was done. No one has a right to make such a charge if he does not know enough to say when it was done. You cannot avoid making plain any statement that contains charges against a citizen, even in the matter of collecting a debt, and still more when the good name of a citizen, even is at stake. The prosecutor cannot come into court and assail the good character of any man without saying when the wrong complained of was done. If they can't put their finger on some exact date, they should themselves be arraigned. He regretted greatly, that the law gives the prosecutor $500 and costs. He thought there was probably no incentive to wrong doing in DeKalbcounty in this, but it might be in some other counties.

The Judge admitted that this matter of the time of committing a wrong, is generally required in some cases. But in this case, there are other clauses of the charges that arsufficiently definite, which should be held good. Take it altogether he would overrule the motion to have new and more specific charges made.

Zollars then moved an exception to this ruling. As to the clause as to auditing the trustees reports, he showed that this is done in August, which is prior to this act.

Roby said in the prosecution of these cases there has been no person feeling nor hope of gain. He is prepared to make all these charges good. As to the acts being before March 8, we are prepared to prove all charges made.

Zollars asks that prosecution show the dates of the acts charged. The judge and all thought it would be better to make some case on something done since March 8, when the law was passed. Judge Zollars said only the 10th, is good, as others were prior to March 8. Roby claimed that all charges were based on Sec. 35, which reads:

When an accusation in writing, verified by the oath of any person, presented to a Circuit Court, alleging that any officer within the jurisdiction of the court has been guilty of chargin and collecting illegal fees for service rendered, or to be rendered, in his office, or has refused or neglected to perform the official duties pertaining to his office, the court must cite the party charged to appear before the court at any time not more than ten nor less than five days from the time accusation was presented; and on that day, or some other subsequent day not more than twenty days from the time the accusation was presented, must proceed to hear, in a summary manner, the accusation, and evidence offered in support of the same, and the answer and evidence offered in support of the same, and the answer and evidence offered by the party accused; and if, on such hearing, it appears that the charge is sustained, the court must enter a decree that the party accused be deprived of his office, and must enter a judgment for five hundred ($500) dollars in favor of the prosecuting officer, and such costs as are allowed in civil cases.

He said that an ex-post facto law is not confined to criminal laws. And even if it were, this is a law that deprives of an office or punishes him by a fine.

After Zollars closed, Judge McClellan addressed the court. He gave some authorities, in addition to those cited by Judge Zollars.

J. H. Rose followed, with the citation authorities, all going to show that this law of March 8, 1897, would not apply to any act done before that date.

An ex post facto law would come in as a criminal statute if it imposed the payment of a fine.

Roby spoke again, as to the position taken by the prosecutor and grand jury acting only as individuals acted as in the discharge of a duty. Then he illustrated his position by supposing the case of a bank, looted by employes in the owner's absence. The returning owner would ask "Why did not the vice-president find this out and save my property? This is the case of the county of DeKalb. Thinks the act of March 8, was passed for this very condition of things. My opponents argue that if you could not put these men out before March 8, you cannot put them out now.'

These men took the office knowing they were liable to impeachment if they did wrong. The constitution provides that an officer may be impeached, and this statute merely provides a means for doing this. He added, that so far he had referred to this case as if the defendants were on trial on a criminal action. They are being tried as public officials not as private citizens. Court adjourned till 7 in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The entire evening session was used by opposing counsel arguing on the preliminary steps. The prosecution claimed that the trial could go on under the new law, although the acts complained of were done before the law went into effect the day of its passage, March 8. Speeches to this effect were made by both Roby and Davis. On the other hand the attorneys for the defense, continued to cite proof that no act of the commissioners done previous to March 8, could be tried in this case, as a law so constructed would be retro-active, or ex post facto, and the constitution of the United States forbids the making or use of any ex post facto law. The arguments were very able, and the speech by Judge Zollars, especially strong.

All afternoon and evening, there was a large attendance, including four ex-commissioners. They are Lyman Lockwood, O. H. Widney, John Hoffleder and James M. Henderson. They felt a deep interest in the case, as they had served from three to six years each on the Board.

There was quite a ripple of interest shown, when Judge Zollars called attention to a law, which he said he had never heard of before, but which Judge McClellan had called his attention to. It was a section in the Statutes of 1881, which plainly makes it the duty of any Judge, at the beginning of each term of court, to audit the accounts of the clerk, and see that he is doing his duty and if he is not, then see that he does it. Among the points made by this, the bad bargain made by the board in the Hunter contract would be included. If the clerk had collected those change of venue fees, Hunter would not have had that item to collect, and one great point against the Board would never have existed. Judge Zollars argued that if the Board is to be impeached, so is the Judge, as far as the Hunter case goes. It would appear that few judges obey this law. We presume all in this district have neglected it from the beginning.

TUESDAY MORNING.

Before the Hague—Bateman case came up. Judge Watkins who came last evening, took the bench and heard a brief statement in the case of Borst, Auditor vs Fair. This is the case against Fair's boudsmen to compel them to make up the amount Fair was short at his settlement with his successor. A judgment was taken against the bondsmen of $9,820.35. The only set-off allowed is the amount of a part of his last quarter's salary, that he never got an order for. This was $471.16.

Soon after 9, Judge Marsh took the bench and said the prosecutor had amended the complaint so as to show that all charges made, by them against the two commissioners had been done before March 8. After some amendments by counsel the Judge went on to make a statement of the points in the case as he understands it. Alluded to the date of the new law. He read part of the act. Gave a history of this case, and that the grand jury as individuals had signed the statement. Thought the prosecutor had done his duty and the court also had done its duty, in bringing the case into court. On its face, it is not an ex post facto law. But the contention is, that the court should so construe this law, as to make it apply to things done before March 8, and thereby make it ex post facto. All authorities agree that a statute need not necessarily be a criminal, but one which increases the penalty for any offense or that disturbs any right, is within the objection that it is ex post facto. He thought this law was one of that kind, and though a sound law, could only apply to acts done since March 8. He thought the law a good one and would make all officers careful hereafter. The ruling be made dismissed the case against the two commissioners. He complimented the prosecutors on their zeal in what they had done.

BORST IMPEACHMENT

This case was at once called up, but dismissed, as the same objections were against turning him out as against turning out the commissioners. The law could not act back farther than March 8.

The case of the county against Fairs' bondsmen was called, and a judgment rendered against them of $9,820.35 So that is the sum they will have to make good.

The case of Fair vs Coffinberry was called up and set for Friday of next week, April 23. This extends the term of the court that far. The term proper ends this Saturday.

Wednesday's Daily.

At the close of work on the county cases Tuesday forenoon, came up the old Humbarger case. Some time ago Humbarger was adjudged to be of unsound mind, and J. E. Dermott was appointed guardian. But there has arisen objections to Humbarger's selling same land to Patterson, claiming he had sold it too cheap. The whole matter was settled late in the afternoon, and will be taken out of court. Patterson is to take care of Mr. Humbarger while he lives, assume the costs of this long litigation, and is to have all the land except 80 acres, which is deeded to the guardian, J. E. Dermott, to keep as a reserve fund, in case it should be needed. After Mr. H's. death, any part left in the guardian's hands, will go to heirs. At one time Mrs. Humbarger was a good business man, and had gathered up property estimated at $30,300 to $40,000. But a severe sickness injured his mind.

Among those present Tuesday was Judge C. A. Bowersox, of Bryan, who was here to take a part in the Humbarger case. Mr. Frazier of Fowler, Ind., was here to help in the case of Fair vs Coffinberry he and Mr. Rose being the latter's attorneys.

In regard to the judgment of $9820,35 against Coffinberry's bondsmen, it should be said that this is the amount of the shortage after taking out the money Mr. McIntosh had advanced him, $471.16. At the time this money was advanced, no order had been drawn for it. It was the balance due to Mr. Fair on his salary and he was to give McIntosh the order when he got it. We have not learned whether Mr. McIntosh will lose this, but suppose that now, he will.

Two foreign judges did work in the trials on Monday and Tuesday, Judge Watkins and Judge Marsh.

It should be noted as very important, what Judge Marsh said, as a sort of "obiter" in giving his opinion in the Hague-Bateman case. He alluded to the law that was spoken of by Judge Zollars the evening before, to the effect that a judge must audit the books of the county clerk. While admitting that there is such a law, he said it was not binding, as it had repeatedly been decided that a judge could not be made to do any except judicial work. He for one believed it the duty of judges to defend themselves against such encroachments on their rights. He cited Judge Elliott, late at the head of the supeme bench of the state, to the same effect. This, if he is correct, relieves judges of this duty. Still, there are some judges who have felt it their duty to do this, and Judge Watkins is one of them.

Prosecutor Davis, when the impeachment case against Borst came up, said it was exactly the same as those against the commissioners, except that it was brought by the grand jury, as a grand jury, while that against the commissioners was brought by the members of the grand jury and by the prosecutors, as individuals.

In the forenoon the Garrett case was on in 'Squire Walborn's court. Editor Minor, of the Garrett Herald, had a difficulty with the Baptist Minister, Mr. Pearce, about the price of some printing. This trouble resulted in a fine on the editor. He came out in a fiery article about the minister and the latter sued him for libel. Myers, Mountz and Stoner were Pearce's attorneys, while Gengler, Hartman and Sharpless were for Minor. They asked that the complaint be dismissed, as they only gave a little piece of the article, when all should have been given. The article called the minister "A little English Jew," and used other offensive terms After exhaustive arguments by both sides the case was dropped. We cannot say whether it will come up again or not. Both parties are good fellows, but a little hasty in temper. We hope to hear of their settling it in good nature.

To-day, Wednesday, the case of Lieberenz vs Smithfield township is going on. It is a dispute as to the value of the work he did on some school houses.

OBITUARY.

She was married to Joshua Kelley in Wayne county, Ohio, in May 1843. Both had been wedowed, and each was the parent of one child. This union made a home for the two little girls. Both of them have since died. By the marriage with Mr. Kelley she became the mother of six children who survive her. Charles, Mrs. Florinda Marvin of Iowa, Mrs. Samantha Beard, Alfred, Cyrus, who resides in California and Mrs. Emma Fee.

Mother Kelley was widowed the second time June 7, 1863. Thus for thirty-three years and ten months she has pursued her lonely way full of strong life force to the end.

They moved from Wayne county, Ohio, to DeKalb county Ind., arriving in Smithfield Nov. 1, 1855. Some six months after which they took up their residence on their own farm subsequently moving to a farm in Franklin township. Here she has resided almost continously ever since. Mother Kelley was of a thrifty order of womanhood and had great pleasure joining her husband in every enterprise and means for financial success.

Her early religious training was of the Lutheran faith which of course in her struggles attending of pioneer life in DeKalb county were neglected. However she clung to her faith. The obsequies were largely attended which were held at Hamilton and the body was laid beside her husband. The children were all present except Mrs. Marvin and Cyrus.

Important to Reason Your Future Interest!

EVERY Breeder and Stock Raiser seems slow to consider his best interests. When market values are low they imagine, because prices are below the ordinary range of past markets, that the future can not change the present condition of affairs.

Experience in the past teaches us that a man who engages in the Breeding of Stock, when everybody else disposes of his surplus, is sure to reach the best market for what he produces. The man who engages when every body else is seeking the same investment is certain to lose upon his efforts The secret is, go into business when stock is low and sell out when stock is high.

Therefore, it is plain to be seen that our Breeders have become discouraged and abandoned the breeding for the past three years, until we seldom see a colt at its mother's side, and our horse buyers are searching for good horses. The time has come when only the best horses will be in demand.

Why not wake up and continue to breed the best, and reap the harvest of a future market?

How shall we do this?

There is but one way. The BLACK PERCHERON is the superior horse for draft, and the CLEVELAND BAY for general use. Solid bred colors, smooth in conformation, docile and kind in disposition, and the only true bred horses that will cross satisfactorily on all grades of mares.

—June 20, Queen Victoria will have reigned sixty years. The event will be celebrated all over the word, where Englishmen are found. She was born May 24, 1819, and became queen by the death of her Uncle, William IV., June 20, 1837, but her coronation or public crowing, did not take place till June 28, 1838, after she had reigned over a year.

—John E. Lung, of Butler township has been having hard luck. The times have been going against him, from bad to worse for several years, and this week he had to give up. His little family of four children will be cared for by friendly neighbors, and the wife, we are told will be taken to the County Home, leaving John alone in the world. It is a sad case, whether his poor management is the cause or not. It ought to remind our charitably inclined citizens that the little heathens in Africa are not the only ones to be looked after.

—The Press objects to having the Kendallville News say that DeKalb papers are fighting to defend their party friends in our county troubles. Well Dr. Parker is a little off. No democratic or republican paper has offered a word of defense for a democratic officer who has gone wrong. —The Record is in doubt as to whether the grand jury or the prosecutor, or the people, are to blame for not asking Stroh by what authority he used as his, fees that belonged to the county. For our part we are also in doubt, as to why this plain and undisputed matter was not investigated. It begins to look now, as if there would be others to be whitewashed before the summer is over. And still the Record does not dare to say the COURIER has published anything but facts.

—All the services at the M. E. church Sunday were attended by an unusually large attendance. The Sunday School was large, there being 239 in attendance and the collection amounted to $4.73. At the church services nearly every available seat in the auditorium was occupied. Rev. Guild delivered two most powerful sermons. Perhaps no abler or eloquent minister has filled that pulpit. In his introductory remarks he stated that he was a Methodist and came here to work for the Methodist church, but he did not want it understood that he would not be friendly to the other churches. He said he would not seek from any other minister's flock, members to his church, and he did not want any other minister to come into his flock and try to get his members, and if they do, and he found it out, it won't be good for them. He believes it a minister's duty to be friendly to all whether in the church or on the streets. We have heard many speak in very flattering terms concerning the "new minister," and were pleased with his sermons.

THAT CYCLONE.

Brief Mention of Which Was Made in Yesterday's Daily.

The heavy rain storm which passed over Auburn about ten o'clock Tuesday, developed into a small cyclone east of town. It struck the residence of John Bunge about three miles east, and blew the chimney off, blew the windows in and bursted the locks off of the doors, and spread the walls of the building so that a man can pass his arm between the walls and ceiling at the north and south side of the building. The building was a cottage residence built two years ago, at a cost of about $800.00. The wind also moved his wagon shed from its foundation. Brush heaps tree tops, and heavy planks were whirled through the air like straws and blew down many fences The storm only lasted a few minutes.

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Topics of Times

The longest word in the English language is disproportionableness.

Philadelphia has a greater mileage of electric railways than the whole of Germany.

Fully one-third of the land in Great Britian is owned by members of the House of Lords.

Onyx in large quantity, and, it is said, of good quality, has been found in Hart County, Kentucky.

Europe has four times as many cities as it had in 1831, and the United States fourteen times as many.

A London millionaire offered $5,000 for the use on jubilee day of three small windows in the office of a small weekly newspaper, which was not considered a first-class position. The offer was refused.

Owing to many unreasonable complaints a postoffice official has found it necessary to gravely announce that the United States mail is indifferent to lovers and that delayed letters are not withheld out of malice.

Thousands of head of antelope are to be seen along the Short Line track back of Beckwith, Idaho. They have been in that section all winter and are little hunted. One band is believed to contain fully 5,000 head.

A Mount Vernon woman was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in the Kings County, New York, penitentiary because she did not keep her children clean. She was the first woman to be convicted on such a charge.

A St. Louis jury which acquitted a man charged with murder on the regulation ground of insanity were somewhat surprised when he arose to his feet and said: "Gentlemen of the jury, I want to thank you for your verdict."

French billiard tables have six legs instead of four, as in America. There are no strings for marking; scores kept by chalking the figures on a slate set in the side of the table, or on a mechanical reckoner inserted in the same place.

It is now discovered that at least a dozen valuable articles of commerce, including cellulose, celluloid, smokeless gunpowder, lacquer, roofing material glucose and papier-mache can be made from cornstalks, and that they will soon be worth $25 per acre.

An eminent English physician, lately deceased, said of the achievements of medical science in his day: "When I graduated I had a dozen remedies for every disease; when, however, I retired from practice, I had at least a dozen diseases for every remedy."

The author of "The Fall of the Congo Arabs" declares that, in spite of the Belgian successes, civilization on the Congo has scarcely made the faintest beginning. In the Congo territories cannibalism is prevalent to an extent unimagined in the West.

The Carnegie Steel Company has opened branch offices in London and Liverpool. It is stated that it is the intention of the company to compete with the British for control in all colonial countries, Japan, China, Russia and wherever else the British have a market.

A Salvation Army woodyard has been opened in San Francisco, where thousands of men can receive work with which to get accommodations at the Salvation Army Poor Men's Institute. In connection with this Poor Men's Institute there is a night school and a library.

Germany's main Gretna Green is the little island of Helgoland, where early English laws of marriage prevail and where there is no need of banns or other preliminary ceremonies before the knot is tied. Several hundred runaway couples from the continent were married there last year.

In some of the Nevada canyons in severe weather the jack rabbits freeze to death, huddled together in clusters, vainly trying to get a little warmth out of one another. Then the Washoe and Piute Indian hunters break them off in bunches and flood the market with them. They have been doing this during the late cold snap.

The cotton mill which it was proposed to build at Concord, N. C., to be operated exclusively by negro labor is to be a reality. Subscriptions of $75,000 have been secured, largely from thirty members of the negro race, and the work of construction will begin at once. The manager, William Coleman, and all the officers of the company except one are negroes.

A recent addition to spectacular effects is a perfect stage rainbow. The apparatus consists of a box with a semicircular opening, behind which are two revolving candelabra prisms. These are worked by a handle, and the light from the prisms is still further divided by wires. The London stage is now reveling in rainbows of the most vivid and beautiful description.

The production of aluminum in the United States last year is placed at 1,300,000 pounds, against an output of 900,000 pounds in the previous year, 817,600 in 1894, 312,000 in 1893 and 168,000 in 1891. The uses of this new and valuable metal are extending the demand quite fast. A dozen years ago the price of aluminum was nearly $8 a pound. Last year the price averaged 40 cents a pound and is still falling.

A curious case has just come to light in South Carolina. It seems absurd to state that a man who burns down his own house is not guilty of arson, yet such is the case in South Carolina common law, and a recent Supreme Court decision has disclosed that according to law a man can wilfully destroy his own property by fire. The paradox is easily explained. Fire insurance is a thing of later years, while the old common law has stood for centuries before insurance companies were thought of. There was no incentive to make a man burn his own house when he could hope for nothing in return, and so the only definition given for arson was "the burning of a house of another." The common law has, in the confusion of other legislation, never been amended.

Larceny of the Fashions.

"One of the peculiarities of men's dress in America is the rapidity with which styles are taken up by the cheaper manufacturers," said a traveling agent for a London firm, who is now in New York City, to a Sun reporter, "and in that way put within the reach of everybody. The latest fashions designed by expensive bootmakers, tailors, or hatters are soon copied so closely that a person with very slight outlay is able to buy a very good imitation of a much more expensive article. Two years ago the tan-leather shoes with very heavy soles had just begun to be fashionable, and they were made by only the most expensive shoemakers. They cost from fourteen to sixteen dollars, and they were not to be had at any but the most expensive shops. But after a while the manufacturers were turning them out with the same heavy soles and nearly as good in shape. Of course the shape of a last is the principal thing that a man pays for when he buys expensive shoes. But the general public is not so particular, and the effect is lost on them. The same thing is true of all other articles. They are now mad at prices within the means of the majority, and a fashion here spreads much more rapidly than it does in other countries. It lasts a shorter time, too, for it is used up here more quickly than in any other place. Sometimes it has a revival and is a new style again, while men over in London have never ceased wearing it. One striking instance of this was the case of the double-breasted waistcoats. They were sent over here from England, and became the style. They got into very general use, and after a while the men who had their clothes made in this country stopped wearing double-breasted waistcoats. Then the stores stopped making them. All this time, however, the English tailors kept sending over these waistcoats, and never changed the style of them, because they had continued the fashion in London. Now the style has started in again, and double-breasted waistcoats are revived. The fashion which the New-Yorkers took up twice kept right on in London, and probably will be the style long enough for it to be given up and revived here several times more."

Crushing Criticism.

It was the good fortune of the poet Longfellow to succeed early in his chosen career. He had never to encounter the bitter struggle with poverty, an unappreciative public, and reluctant publishers of which many of the great in literature have had to complain. Nevertheless, the first criticism he was fated to hear upon the first poem he ever published, was not exactly encouraging. Mrs. Fields relates the incident in a recently published volume.

The poem dealt with an episode of American history, and was called "The Battle of Lovell's Pond." It appeared one morning in the poet's corner of a Portland newspaper, and the author that same evening was invited to the house of the chief justice to meet his son, a Harvard youth then regarded at least by his family and friends, as a rising genius. During the evening the stately old judge, turning with a complacent air toward the young man, inquired:

"Did you see a poem in to-day's paper upon the 'Battle of Lovell's Pond?'"

"No, sir," was the reply.

"Well, sir," said the old gentleman with conviction, "it was a very stiff production. Get your own poem on the same subject, and I will read it to the company."

The poem was brought, and was read aloud with proud, paternal emphasis to the admiring guests, while the unknown and cruelly snubbed author of the "stiff production" was obliged to listen, sitting, as he himself said, "very still in a corner." The author of the production which presumably was not stiff, did not, strange to say, ever become known to the great American public as a poet.—Youth's Companion.

Cool.

In one of Nansen's first mighty snow-shoeing expeditions, he entered the Naeroedal, where avalanches come crashing down as thunder and lightning do in other places. In the bottom of the valley, says tradition, the force of the air-current has been known to carry people from one side of the fiord to the other. Here, at Gudvangen, lies a great stone which came leaping from the very crest of the mountain, and went like a cannon-ball through both walls of the first house in its path, and then through roof and wall of the next, carrying death in its path.

The evil reputation of the place did not make Nansen nervous or even cautious. In the heart of Laerdal he sat down and ate his breakfast. The debris of a great avalanche lay all around. He sat listening to the roar of the cataract, when suddenly he was roused by a voice:

"You are sitting in the track of the avalanche! And you've picked out the worst possible place, too!"

"Oh, I should hear it coming!" said Nansen.

"It comes like a rifle-shot, that's how it comes!" and the man hurried by.

Nansen went on with his breakfast. Then another snow-shoer appeared, driving at top speed.

"This is no place for any one who values his life!" he called, and was gone like a flash.

But the explorer carried on his picknicking unmoved. When his hunger was quite assuaged, he moved on, but not before.

Wealth.

Wealth is a blessing when properly used, and the mere fact of any man possessing it can by no possibility be held against him unless he came by it through dishonest or fraudulent means. One might ask with some show of reason, where would the hospitals, the infirmaries, the charitable institutions, the halls of learning and the thousand and one great interests of this country be had they not been endowed and assisted by people of means? There are many people in this country to-day who owe their education and training largely to the benevolence of those who gave of their substance to keep up the schools and colleges.

A Bad Mistake.

"What did papa say when you asked him for me?"

"He abruptly told me to call again next month."

"Stupid! What did you say to him?"

"I said I had a little matter I'd like to have him settle, and then he cut me short."

"Dear, dear! He took you for a bill collector."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Politics of the Day

GRUMBLING AT DINGLEYISM.

The Dingley tariff tax bill has been "jammed through" the House of Representatives, but that was the least of its trials and tribulations. The scrutiny of the Senate has yet to come, and the weather will be pretty warm at Washington before the debates in the upper house are likely to terminate.

In the meantime, the New York Chamber of Commerce, in which the importing interest is strong and keen-sighted, has opened "a fire in the rear" upon President McKinley's favorite measure, and, incidentally, upon the policy of the McKinley administration.

This is important, as the Chamber of Commerce has now a quasi representative in the Presidential Cabinet in the person of Secretary Bliss. It indicates serious trouble in the Republican ranks. The men who have met in the Chamber of Commerce and resolved against the Dingley bill are those who always furnish "the sinews of war" to the Republican managers, and whose contributions turned the scale last November for the Ohio candidate. They have not acted without a purpose, and their purpose will have weight in embarrassing the administration and perpetuating the schism in the party in that State. The following are the resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce and aimed at President McKinley:

Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York express its earnest conviction that the tariff bill now before the House of Representatives in many of its provisions is excessive and likely to invite reaction harmful to business and to the best interests of the country, and that it should be carefully revised in the direction of a reduction of the rates of duty proposed, to the end that a system of tariff taxation may be adopted that shall be reasonably permanent, and that shall insure to the business interests of the country a certain measure of immunity from early change.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing report and resolution be transmitted to each member of Congress.

Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York invite the co-operation of the commercial and trade organizations of other cities and throughout the country in urging these views upon Congress.

Bargains in High Places.

Associate Judge Stephen J. Field, of the United States Supreme Court, announces his purpose to soon place his resignation of his high office in the hands of President McKinley, and to retire from official duties which the infirmities of age have rendered irksome. The Judge is the senior member of the court, having been appointed to it as a war Democrat in partisan designation by President Lincoln. He is a brother of the late Cyrus W. Field, and was a member of the rather prominent New England family of the Fields, who, a generation or two ago, were all more or less active in public life. It is understood that Judge Field will be succeeded in office as judge by Mr. McKenna, at present Attorney General of the United States by President McKinley's selection, so that there will still be one Pacific Coast judge on that high bench, out of nine members, and the understanding and compact by which the present Cabinet was made up will not be broken. It was the purpose of Mr. McKinley to gratify the sugar trust, which had so largely contributed to Boss Hanna's campaign fund, by the appointment of Mr. John J. McCook as Attorney General, but the clamor which was raised against it deterred him from hasty action. It was then proposed to take McKenna from his life office as District Judge and put him into the Cabinet till Judge Field should, as he soon must, resign. Then McKenna can have Field's place and McCook (perhaps) have McKenna's, and Bliss may come back to New York again, and all will be satisfactory and happy.

Judge Field decided to leave the bench years ago, but waited for President Cleveland to precede him in leaving office.—New York News.

Vigorous Republican Protest.

The Boston Transcript is a Republican paper, but it is plain spoken in denouncing the proposed tariff on lumber. It is simply a measure to pick the pockets and crush the industry of a large, useful and influential class of American citizens. It is uneconomic, unscientific, suicidal. The statements upon which this schedule was made up are shown to have been insidious and misleading. The result will be to strip the country not of an annually recurring income, but of its white pine principal, which at present rates is within ten years of exhaustion, and also to ruin a large class of business men in the country who deserve better things. It does not seem possible that men claiming to represent the people will permit such a measure to have the force of law. If they do it will cease to be folly and became iniquity.—Boston Transcript.

Housewives Will Again Be Heard.

History will certainly repeat itself in the matter of tariff-stimulated prices. What came to pass in 1890 was the precursor of the events of 1897. There was no more potent factor in enforcing the sound and wholesome doctrine of the tariff reformer seven years ago than the marking up of prices announced by tradesmen in their newspaper advertisements, and the unwelcome discovery which the housewives made when they went to trade that their dollar would not go as far as formerly.—Detroit Free Press.

The Barbarians in Washington.

The proposed duty on books almost justifies the declaration of a contemporary that the legislative branch of the national government is in the hands of barbarians. Civilized people regard knowledge as of importance and do everything in their power to promote it. They found institutions of learning. They levy taxes to support them. They pass laws to compel children to go to school. But the Republicans in Congress take a different view.—Rochester Herald.

Dingleyism Made Ridiculous.

Even stanch protection journals are finding independent voice sufficient to make an audible whimper over Dingley's tax on art and learning. They looked with approval on schedules that will send gloom into every humble household in the land the first Saturday night after the Dingley bill is a law. But they are quite upset by the fact that Dingley has been completely logical and has laid his brutal taxes on the things of the mind as well as on the things of the body. The other schedules are melancholy. This anti-education schedule is ridiculous.—New York World.

Showing Unusually Indecent Haste.

The retroactive clause in the Dingley tariff bill as passed by the House is simply another defiance of fate by extremists who are intoxicated with a wholly fortuitous grasp of power. If it were possible to believe that the Senate would adopt this monstrous provision the effect upon trade and upon customs receipts would be simply paralyzing. The adoption of such an unheard-of provision simply betrays the eagerness of the tariff framers to give the trusts and monopolies an immediate control of our markets. They cannot wait even to pass the new schedules of extortion in the usual way.—New York World.

The Retroactive Tariff Law.

The retroactive clause of the Dingley bill may or may not be unconstitutional. It is certainly absurd, unjust and destructive. If enacted it would be about the most troublesome statute that officials were ever called upon to administer. It proposes to put a law into effect before it is enacted and even before it is at all certain that it ever will be enacted. It proposes to nullify existing law in advance of its repeal. It proposes to subject business to burdens that existing law does not impose and to collect taxes again upon goods that have once paid all the taxes imposed by law.—New York World.

Laws Needed to Keep Senators Honest

The people of the country will not be very enthusiastic over the resolution introduced in the Senate by one of the Senators from Nebraska, which is designed to forbid Congressmen to speculate in stocks and other properties whose market value is susceptible to the influence of legislation. The idea of asking the Senate to enact a law compelling itself to be honest would be a good deal more grotesque if the history of the past thirty years had not been made.—Sioux City Tribune.

The Insane Republican Policy.

The political insanity of the Republican leaders in proceeding at once to impose additional tariff burdens upon the people and subordinating every other governmental concern to this single line of policy is becoming more and more apparent. The best men in the Republican party realize the danger that lies in the Dingley policy, but their warnings are unheeded. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."—Manchester, N. H., Union.

Not Imperious in His Demands.

The political ambition of Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin is of the sliding scale sort. First he wanted to be a member of the Cabinet, but there were others, and he was satisfied. Then he wanted a foreign embassy, but concluded that he "couldn't afford to spend $50,000 of his own money every year" simply for the honor of living in Germany. And now he wants to be a plain every-day Senator from Wisconsin.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

A Dingley Monstrosity.

Under the Dingley bill the President is authorized to impose duties on articles that we not only do not produce at all, but which are now and long have been on the free list. These include coffee, tea and hides. In putting a retaliatory duty on these things the President says that something shall pay a duty which the bill itself declares is free of duty. Here is evidently an obvious and ridiculous contradiction.—Boston Globe.

The House Out of a Job.

We are told that the House of Representatives at Washington expects to have nothing practically to do while the Senate is considering the tariff, and that its intention is to adjourn over three days regularly during that time. It has begun in this way, and, if the policy is continued, the members will have ample leisure to engage in their "errand boy" duties for their constituents.—Boston Herald.

Canada Ready to Kick Back.

Two bills have been introduced in the Dominion Parliament to bar American laborers from entering Canada in search of work. Thus the work of retaliation has begun and the proscriptive statesmen who run the Congress of the United States are reminded that there are others who can play at the same game.—Kansas City Star.

Explaining Mr. Dingley's Action.

There are people who fail to understand why Mr. Dingley should seek to provide for $100,000,000 of revenue when the deficit amounts to but $25,000,000. It is quite likely that Mr Dingley is trying to make plain sailing for the pork-hunting Congressmen.—New York Journal.

Red in Favor.

All the world over there is a regard for things red. This color was once sacred to Thor, and it has been suggested by Grimm that it was on this account that the robin redbreast acquired its sacred character. In the Highlands the women tie a piece of red worsted thread round their cows' tails, previous to turning them out to grass for the first time in spring; for, in accordance with an old adage, "Rowan ash and red thread keeps Satan from their speed." Russian maidens hang red ribbons round the stem of the birch tree to protect them from the evil eye. Even in China something red is tied round children's wrists to protect them from evil spirits. The gipsy will tell you that there is luck in a red string or ribbon, and advise you if you find one to keep it, for it foretells happy love.

SILAS W. LAMOREAUX.

Career of the Land Commissioner Who Was Overruled by Secretary Bliss.

Silas W. Lamoreaux, late Commissioner of the Land Office, whose decision in the Chicago lake front case was overruled by Secretary Bliss, is a Wisconsin man. Until he made the ruling in the long debated McKee "scrip" contest his course in public life had been a smooth one, but his decision, involving as it did some 162 acres in the city of Chicago, land that is estimated to be worth $60,000,000, caused considerable of a sensation, and when the Secretary of the Interior reversed it and hinted at a possible scandal in the General Land Office the interest in the case was augmented. The plot of land in question was at one time counted so worthless that the Government Surveyor did not take it into account at all. It was only a thirty acre strip on the lake shore then, but Chicago has since grown out into the lake and increased it to its present size.

Judge Lameroux, as he is known in Wisconsin, has made his home in Dodge County ever since he was 13 years old. As a youth he was given the advantages of an academic and college education and was admitted to the bar when he reached his majority. In 1864 the young lawyer dropped his briefs and enlisted in the Fifth Wisconsin Infantry, serving until the close of the war.

On returning home he resumed his practice and became interested in politics. In 1872 he was elected a member of the State Legislature, and later he served one term as district attorney. In 1877 he was elected judge of Dodge County and continued to fill that office until 1893, when he resigned to accept the appointment of Commissioner of the General Land Office tendered by President Cleveland upon recommendation of Senator Vilas, whose friendship for Judge Lamoreaux is of long standing.

For many years Mr. Lamoreaux was a resident of Mayville, Wis., where he owned a bank and did an extensive and profitable business, but in 1892 he removed to Horicon. He is married and has four children.

comes from a seafaring line of ancestors. In 1847, just fifty years ago he arrived in America and sailed hence all over the world on board the fine American ships of that period. In 1856 Anderson joined the American navy, serving on board the frigates Falmouth and Congress. He came up to New York on the frigate Congress just before Christmas, 1861, and hearing that the Monitor was ready to go to sea, but lacked some of her crew, went at once to the rendezvous in Cherry street, offered himself as one of the volunteer crew, and was accepted.

The Spanish Censor.

They have a curious way of suppressing papers here. Instead of submitting their proof-sheets to the censor, as is usual where such a protector of public opinion exists, they get at the matter backward. The publisher goes ahead on his own judgment, prints what he pleases and takes his chances of going to jail or paying a fine. The censor reads the paper at the breakfast table the next morning, and if he finds anything mildly objectionable, he writes a polite note to the editor, calling attention to the article. The latter prints a paragraph next day explaining that he was mistaken or that the public had misinterpreted his remarks. But when any high official of the Government is attacked, or the proprieties are violated, the editor is fined or imprisoned, and policemen take the subscription list and call at every house at which copies have been delivered to recover them.—Havana correspondence of the Chicago Times-Herald.

Spring Humors

Those unsightly eruptions, painful boils, annoying pimples and other affections, which appear so generally at this season, make the use of that grand Spring Medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, a necessity. The accumulated impurities in the blood cause very different symptoms with some people. The kidneys, liver and bowels are overmatched in their efforts to relieve the clogged system. Dizzy headaches, bilious attacks, failure of appetite, coated tongue, lame back, indigestion and that tired feeling are some results.

From the same cause may also come scrofula, neuralgia, sciatica or rheumatism.

All these troubles and more may properly be called "Spring Humors," and just as there is one cause, a cure is found in just one remedy, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the impure blood, enriches blood which is weak and thin, vitalizes blood which lacks vitality. Thus it reaches every part of the human system.

SORE EYES Dr. ISAAC THOMPSON'S EYE WATER

It Runs 24 Hours and Works by the Law of Gravity.

A mysterious clock was found in a private collection by Director Davy, of the observatory of Montsouris, France. It dates from the time of Henry III, and is described in a treatise on clocks published in the seventeenth century by Father Alexander, a Benedictine monk. The clock on the outside looks like a little wooden cabinet; on the right side figures are carved along the edge in a vertical line, representing the hours from 5 a. m. to 12 midnight. A small metal cylinder with a rod through its axis is supported by two pieces of string, and by turning the cylinder up the two pieces of string will roll up on the rod. The interior of the cylinder is divided into eight compartments of even size. These compartments communicate by very small apertures—I, I1, I2, etc.—with those next to them, and by canals—R—with those on the opposite side of the cylinder. The working power is simple. A specially prepared fluid is filled into the cylinder up to the line M—N. When the cylinder is rolled up and the fluid allowed to settle, the cylinder will not fall down, but work its way down with a slow and steady movement. Each of the compartments in turn is slowly filled and emptied in that slow-running motion, and the rod on the outside shows the time as the downward motion of the cylinder proceeds.

Oysters for Nothing.

Not long ago, at a Parisian restaurant, two customers were served with a dozen each of oysters. Just as the last oyster was about to disappear, one of the companions put his hand to his mouth with a cry of pain.

"Ah, I nearly broke my tooth," he cried. "See, it is a pearl from the shell, and a very fine one, too."

The other convive took it, admired it, but did not return it.

"It is mine," he said; "the oysters were ordered at my expense."

"Oh, pardon me, but a treasure belongs to the finder."

The dispute went on civilly but obstinately, and at last M. Potage, the proprietor, who was hovering near, and had seen the whole occurrence, was called up to determine the matter. He examined the pearl, admired it, and thought how it would please his wife, if handsomely mounted.

"Gentlemen, it shall be valued by my neighbor, the jeweler, and I will purchase it for the price he fixes."

"Oh, as for that," cried the finder, liberally, "take it if it pleases you. You shall serve us with another two dozen of oysters, and we are quits."

His companion agreed; the restaurateur was content; the oysters were eaten, and the customer departed. But when M. Potage took the jewel to be set, his neighbor, the jeweler, smiled. It was an imitation pearl that had never been in the shell of an oyster and was not worth a sou.

Oldest Craft Afloat.

An accident on the English coast, near Gravesend, between the coal barge True Love and the schooner Gravesend, brought to light the fact that the former vessel was built in Philadelphia in 1764, and is probably the oldest vessel afloat. She was formerly the bark True Love and was built in Kensington 133 years ago. Her timbers are of live oak and she is believed to have been sound and stanch until she was run down by the Gravesend. No vessel has been afloat so many years as the True Love and probably none ever will be.

Will Succeed Lord Aberdeen as Governor General of Canada.

The Duke of Leeds, who will succeed Lord Aberdeen as Governor General of Canada, assumed the title and the estate of the family about a year ago on the death of his father, the ninth duke. The present duke's name is George Godolphin Osborne, and he is a second son. His elder brother died in 1861. The future Governor General is only 34 years old, but has already won a prominent name for himself in politics. He has been in parliament, where he sat for Lambeth. He was formally honored with the post of treasurer of the household, which he gave up, according to custom, when he retired from parliament. In 1884 he married Lady Katherine Francis Lambeth, a daughter of the second earl of Durham, and they have four pretty little girls. The duke, when he was in parliament as the Marquis of Carmarthen, was the youngest member in the commons and the youngest looking until he grew a beard. It is told of him that on the day of his election some one asked him: "Say, boy, does your mother know you're out?" "Yes," promptly replied the youthful politician, "and when the votes are counted to-night she will know I am in." The family of the duke—the Osbornes—is one of the oldest and most aristocratic in all the peerage. They were seated centuries ago in Kent and were distinguished lords in ancient times. The late duke had several brothers, two of whom were famous churchmen. Rev. Lord Sidney Godolphin Osborne earned a reputation as a working philanthropist, while Rev. Lord Francis Godolphin-Osborne was noted for his extreme leaning toward ritualism. He afterward formally joined the Roman Catholic church. The duke is a popular member of the House of Lords, and his elevation to the distinguished position of Governor General of Canada is not much of a surprise to those who know the inside workings of the government. His wife is a charming woman, if not beautiful in person.

into contact with the center of the tire; the wheel operates a hand on a dial, which shows the rate of hour. If, for instance, it is 20 miles to his destination, and he pedals fast enough to hold the handle at the 20-mile mark, he will reach his destination in exactly one hour. It is both a pleasure and aid to the rider to see the various changes in speed, and is the best time-keeper going. It costs little, and weighs about 2½ ounces.

Advantage of Sleep.

In reply to the question, Is it wise for a man to deny himself and get along with a few hours' sleep a day, to do more work? Tesla, the great electrician, is said to have replied: "That is a great mistake, I am convinced. A man has just so many hours to be awake, and the fewer of these he uses up each day, the more days they will last; that is, the longer he will live. I believe that a man might live two hundred years if he would sleep most of the time. That is why negroes often live to advanced old age, because they sleep so much. It is said that Gladstone sleeps seventeen hours every day; that is why his faculties are still unimpaired in spite of his great age. The proper way to economize life is to sleep every moment that is not necessary or desirable that you should be awake."

The Best. The Rest. The Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root,—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.

Our readers will be glad to know that the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, from the wonderful Kava-Kava shrub has proved an assured cure for all diseases caused by Uric acid in the blood, or by disordered action of the Kidneys or urinary organs. The Kava Kava Shrub, or as botanists call it, Piper Methysticum, grows on the banks of the Ganges river, East India, and probably was used for centuries by the natives before its extraordinary properties became known to civilization through Christian missionaries. In this respect it resembles the discovery of quinine from the peruvian bark, made known by the Indians to the early Jesuit missionaries in South America, and by them brought to civilized man. It is a wonderful discovery, with a record of 1000 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly upon the blood and kidneys, and is a true specific, just as quinine is in malaria. We have the strongest testimony of many ministers of the gospel, well-known doctors and business men cured by Alkavis, when all other remedies had failed.

THE KAVA-KAVA SHRUB (Piper Methysticum.)

In the New York Weekly World of Sept. 10th, the testimony of Rev. W. B. Moore, D. D., of Washington, D. C. was given, describing his years of suffering from Kidney disease and Rheumatism, and his rapid cure by Alkavis. Rev. Thomas Smith, the Methodist minister at Cobden, Illinois, passed nearly one hundred gravel stones after two weeks' use of Alkavis. Rev. John H. Watson, of Sunset, Texas, a minister of the gospel of thirty years' service, was struck down at his post of duty by Kidney disease. After hovering between life and death for two months, and all his doctors having failed, he took Alkavis, and was completely restored to health and strength, and is fulfilling his duties as minister of the gospel. Mr. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorney of Lowell, Indiana, was cured of Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder disease of ten years standing, by Alkavis. Mr. Wood describes himself as being in constant misery, often compelled to rise ten times during the night on account of weakness of the bladder. He was treated by all his home physicians without the least benefit and finally completely cured in a few weeks by Alkavis. The testimony is undoubted and really wonderful. Mrs. James Young, of Kent, Ohio, writes that she had tried six doctors in vain, that she was about to give up in despair, when she found Alkavis and was promptly cured of kidney disease and restored to health. Many other ladies also testify to the wonderful curative powers of Alkavis in the various disorders peculiar to womanhood.

So far the Church Kidney Cure Company, No. 410 Fourth Avenue, New York, are the only importers of this new remedy, and they are so anxious to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of this paper who is a Sufferer from any form of Kidney or Bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affliction due to improper action of the Kidneys or Urinary Organs. We advise all Sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

Woman's Nerves.

Mrs. Platt Talks About Hysteria.

When a nerve or a set of nerves supplying any organ in the body with its due nutriment grows weak, that organ languishes.

When the nerves become exhausted and die, so to speak, the organ falls into decay. What is to be done? The answer is, do not allow the weakness to progress; stop the deteriorating process at once!

Do you experience fits of depression, alternating with restlessness? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one moment you laugh and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Again, do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you, all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in ovary, and pain especially between the shoulders, sometimes loss of voice and nervous dyspepsia? If so, you are hysterical, your uterine nerves are at fault. You must do something to restore their tone.

Nothing is better for the purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it will work a cure. If you do not understand your symptoms, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will give you honest, expert advice, free of charge.

MRS. LEVI F. PLATT, Womleysburg, Pa., had a terrible experience with the illness we have just described. Here is her own description of her sufferings:

"I thought I could not be so benefited by anything and keep it to myself. I had hysteria (caused by womb trouble) in its worst form. I was awfully nervous, low-spirited and melancholy, and everything imaginable.

"The moment I was alone I would cry from hour to hour; I did not care whether I lived or died. I told my husband I believed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do me good. I took it and am now well and strong, and getting stouter. I have more color in my face than I have had for a year and a half. Please accept my thanks. I hope all who read this and who suffer from nervousness of this kind will do as I have done and be cured."

LIVELY RUNAWAY

In Which Gus Helmuth and Daughter and Ficsa Fausler were Participants.

Tuesday's Daily.

Yesterday afternoon as Jim Sheffer was coming into town leading a beef he met Mrs. Gus Helmuth and daughter, and Miss Ficsa Fausler who were returning to their home near DeKalb. Mr. Sheffer was followed by some man with a load of hay, and as they saw Mrs. Helmuth's carriage approaching they noticed the horse was considerably frightened and commenced rearing up. The buggy was upset and all occupants spilt out. One wheel of the buggy and thills were broken and the horse broke loose. None of the ladies were hurt though terribly frightened Jim Sheffer took his buggy and drove the ladies to their home. The COURIER man interviewed Mr. Helmuth today and learned the above facts.

The Koons-West Row.

There was quite an excitement in town yesterday afternoon, about four o'clock. It had become known that Henry West and his brother, John, the marshal, were out hunting to find Jim Koons and a young companion of his, another cigar maker named Pearl Butz, who they claimed had insulted their sister. Henry found the boys in Bishop's cigar store and told them to come out on the side walk. He took them by the arm, and they came out. On reaching the street he asked Koons what made him insult his sister. Koons denied having done so, when West struck him on the head and knocked him out into the street. Butz ran and West followed a short distance but seeing that he could not catch Butz. West ran back to Koons, picked him up and threw him back onto the sidewalk, jumped astride of him and holding him down, struck him several times on each side of the head, right and left. Just at this time, Marshal, John West, who had been standing in front of Shull's shoe store, came across and separated them. He took young Koons in charge and took him over home, to see if his sister could identify him as the one who had insulted her. She said he was the man. But Koons denied it, and kept insisting he had done nothing of the kind. But the marshal did not believe him, and claims that Koons used some rough language to girl, when he struck him in the mouth knocking him back on the sidewalk, and loosening his teeth. Koons went out into the street, but West made him come back onto the sidewalk, and they came back up town. Later on, the boy's father, John Koons had both Wests arrested and brought before 'Squire Walter. They plead guilty to a charge of assault and battery and each was fined $1 and costs, the total for the two making it amount to $15.25.

COURT.

On Saturday after hearing the Sparling vs Nusbaum case, the Smithfield matter was brought up briefly. This case is to see if the township is obliged to pay Mr. Lieberenz of Ashley, his full bill for repairing certain school houses. The trustee considered the bill too big and refused to pay the orders. It was called up only briefly, and as time soon came for finishing the McIntyre case, it was postponed

The McIntyre case was taken up soon after three p. m. and Mr Lackey put on the stand again. They asked about the rebates, or allowances made by the Electric Light Co., for losses by poor or interrupted service. He gave the monthly averages, which showed from $6.50 the lowest, to $18,00 the highest. He admitted that these losses had somewhat increased. They had got the contract to furnish the B. & O. with lights in 1892, at a price of $280 a month. He did not know Brandt had tapped the wire till awhile after it was done, when Brandt told him of it and claimed he found the connection already made. He said Brandt was succeeded by Eby, and believed the service was improved.

The case against Commissioners Hague and Bateman began this afternoon with Judge Marsh of the 25th circuit on the bench. The law under which the case is brought is new to all and so it takes a good deal to get fairly started. McClellan and Garwood, Rose and Rose, and Judge Zollars are for the defence; Davis, Roby and Link, are for the prosecution. Zollars argues that the charges are too indefinite. Case will fairly get agoing this afternoon.

COUNTY MATTERS.

A great many are asking how the county treasurer can pay any orders, just now, when it is known that some of those outstanding, are bad. We are informed that Mr. Boland and the commissioners have made a list of orders, and marked them in two lots, '1' "good," the other "doubtful." The treasurer can safely pay those marked "good," but if an order presented for payment is found in the list marked "doubtful," he must refuse payment on that. Of course an order in the "doubtful" list, may prove good, after a careful investigation. The holder of it may be able to bring proofs that are not now in the possession of the Board. If he can, we suppose the order will be cashed.

Another difficult lot of questions are coming up as to the orders used in paying Auditor Borst and Treasurer Fair. All these orders are held by innocent parties, and if they are declared worthless, then these parties will have to lose their money. And even if they are not declared worthless, if payment is refused for the reason, in Fair's case at least, that he owes the county, then the orders will be valueless.

A Flag of Warning.

Beware of the dry, tickling, hacking, morning cough, for it warns you that consumption lurks near. The famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it. "I had a very bad cough. One doctor pronounced it consumption. I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and was completely cured; the cough left me and has never come back. Simon Smasal, 375 31st Street, Chicago, Ills." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup costs but 25 cents. Ask for Bull's, take only Bull's.

TOO MANY PAPERS.

The Hamilton Advocate has ceased publication and its subscription list has been purchased by the Butler Record. Newspapers at the present time, require so much more capital and outlay than formerly, that it is almost impossible to make them live in a small town. They generally soon die out, or have to consolidate with some newspaper plant already established. We have often called attention to the slim prospects of the ten papers in DeKalb county, besides the one at Ashley. Then we are giving a practical support to the Ft. Wayne, Hicksville, Kendallville, Avilla, Churubusco, Edgerton and Hamilton papers. Besides, we take numberless daily and weekly papers from Ft. Wayne, Indianapolis, Chicago, Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland and New York. Our people should as far as possible drop all outside papers, and patronize only those in the county. This would save them a good deal of money, and they would get all the news just the same, and all the reading matter they can use to advantage. DeKalb county is sending to distant parties, too much of its money, for high-priced dogs, cattle, horses, etc. etc. blanket newspapers, etc. etc. to various cities, companies and associations. A majority of these items of expense are of no benefit.

THE SAVAGE DISPATCH.

The Dispatch seems to feel rather savage because we put up a notice in the postoffice. It endeavors from this to carry the idea that we rejoiced in "ghoulish glee," whatever that may mean, over the impeachment of Hague and Bateman. This latter view is wrong. The COURIER is not in favor of the attempt to impeach the commissioners and thinks the move uncalled for. It believes both men honest. But the Dispatch was the first to assail them, by putting out with big head-lines, that Hunter matter which after all, has little in it. And if the county clerk had done his duty, and collected those change-of-venue fees, the Hunter bargain would have been all right. No, the COURIER has no "glee" over that impeachment business. But we have not thought best to discuss several of those matters, as they must go into court and be decided there, anyway.

PREACHER vs EDITOR.

Saturday's Daily.

This afternoon Rev. Pearce of the Baptist church swore out a warrant against E. W. Minor, of the Garrett Herald for criminal libel, and at three o'clock Mr. Minor is in the hands of the constable. The case will not be tried in Garret, but a change of venue will be asked for. It was granted, and the case will come up before Squire Walborn Tuesday forenoon.

Tuesday's Daily.

The libel case of Pearce vs Minor came up before 'Squire Walborn today and resulted in Minor's acquittal. Particulars to-morrow.

FOUND A BIYCLE.

Saturday's Daily.

Two little lads, Don Husselman and Victor Applegate found a bicycle this morning, lying in the creek where the Wabash road crosses it east of the Main street station. It was minus the handle bar when the lads got it out of the water, and they brought it up town in triumph, where it attracted a good deal of attention. The boys are feeling good just now and if the wheel is never called for, will be so much ahead. They at once set out to get new handle bars. It is probable that the wheel was standing near the open door in the baggage car and fell out just as the train went over the bridge. If so, it may be called for, but in the meantime, we predict the lads will keep it warm.

NOT IDLE

Court Continues at a Lively rate at the Old Stand,

Thursday's Daily.

We omitted to say yesterday, that a couple of young men from Fairfield had got into trouble. It appears that a good deal of small thieving and wheat stealing has been going on lately and on several occasions the thieves came near being caught. Twice a buggy was found hitched near some barn at a late hour at night, and once it was followed. Once they came so near getting the fellow, that they found a sack of wheat in the barn, ready to be carried off. At last they were exposed and confessed. They were Al Reincehl and Frank McClish, young men of respectable parents. It was supposed the matter had been settled, but Tuesday evening the sheriff arrested them and brought them to Auburn. They staid in jail over night and the next morning were released on bail. The trial will be next term of court.

After we went to press yesterday, Wednesday, the case beteen Lieberenz and Smithfield township was decided. Lieberenz had claimed $129 for the repairs on those school houses, and the decision reached was that he was entitled to $100 and the interest on it for about two years. This was probably fair. But it begins to look as if Smithfield township will have to pay more court expenses than is wise or business like.

William Click, the fellow who broke into John Groscop's and stole some cloths was sentenced this morning. He goes to Jeffersonville instead of Michigan City, as the new law directs. He is 27 and under the new law, the sentence is indefinite as to length. For instance, if the law says "from 2 to 7 years," he would have to serve till the Board says he has served long enough.

The Fair matter came up again today, and Mr. Fair came in and gave additional bond as required for his appearance at next term of court.

The case between Brandt and the McIntyre Electric Light Co. of Garrett was brought and argued by the counsel.

Saturday's Daily.

Thursday evening, the arguments of counsel closed in the case of Brandt vs Garrett Electric Light Co., for the appointment of a receiver to manage it in place of the present president, W H. McIntyre. Judge Brown took a few days to study in over before making a decision. Court adjourned for the term.

The Fair vs Coffinberry case comes up next Friday before Judge Watkins and promiseds to throw some light onto that part of Coffinberry's matters.

L. W. Welker, of Albion, was here Thursday to get an order to restrain Sheriff Stroh from selling a piece of land that had been ordered sold. The case originated in Whitley county, we believe. The matter was adjusted as Mr. Welker wanted it.

Monday's Daily.

The most exciting term of court ever held in this county, came to a close Saturday, after a session of seven weeks. There were as many important ordinary cases as usual, and to these were added the cases involving the misconduct of the several county officers. Readers of the COURIER are already familiar with the results in these trials. But only a part have been completed. In fact there has been only one trial that has resulted in a legal struggle in open court, and that is the case of commissioners. Coffinberry died before his trial could come on. Sawvel, Moody, Borst and Dills all pleaded guilty, and had no more of a trial than being called into court and sentenced. As to the cases yet to come, there are three or four against Hook. These will be held at Columbia City. The trustee cases are not done. Blake's was to go to Ft. Wayne, but we are told he has not had the matter attended to in time. The Surveyor case at Angola, is dead, as it went out of court when the one here was settled. So there will be no more fight over that. The commissioners have paid Mr. Krontz the wages he has earned so far. As noted elsewhere, the case brought by Fair, against the Coffinberry estate comes up here Friday of this week before Judge Watkins. It appears that before his death, Coffinberry turned his fine house and lot in Garrett over to his wife. Fair's case is to see if this deed can be set aside so as to secure to Fair some, at least, of the money the Fairs claim that Coffinberry got of them and gave them no credit. It will likely call up some fine legal points, and we hope may unearth some of the steps that constitute the beginning of this trouble.

OBITUARY.

Nancy Weirick Hoverter was born in Lebanon Co. Pa., Feb. 17, 1814, died in DeKalb Co., Ind., April 1, 1897, aged 83 years, 1 month and 14 days.

At the early age of thirteen she exercised saving faith in Christ and joined the United Brethren church, to which she belonged until her removal to Indiana. When sixteen years of age she accompanied her parents to Wayne county, Ohio, where on Dec. 4, 1834, she married John Hovarter, a native of Lebanon Co., Pa. In 1850, in company with her husband and family she removed to DeKalb Co., Ind., where she resided until called to a better country. On coming to this state she changed her church relationship, becoming a member of the Evangelical Association. Amid the trials of pioneer life and in subsequent years she was a patient, kind and loyal wife, mother and friend. Her husband, who died June 24, 1889, three children, seven grandchildren, and three, great-grandchildren, have preceded her to the land beyond. She leaves ten children, fifty-three grandchildren, and fifty-two great grandchildren and a host of neighbors and friends to mourn her departure. The funeral service was held at Fairfield Center. April 4, by Rev. Burkett, of Kendallville, and interment made in Fairfield cemetery.

There is no grief in heaven;
For life is one glad day,
And tears are of those former things,
Which all have passed away.
There is no death in heaven.
For they who gain that shore
Have won their immortality,
And they can die no more.

Laws In Force.

The new laws passed by the last legislature went into force this morning, April 15 by the governor's proclamation. The last county was heard from yesterday, April 14. One new law extends the time for taxpaying till May 3. There are also changes in the way of making assessments. The election law is also changed. There is to be a new device at the head of the ballot, and the voting is done with a blue pencil instead of a stamp.

CHECKED UP.

The Property of the Auburn Rifles--A Long Job

Friday's Daily.

Sargent-Major Lewis, of Indianapolis was in the city last night and checked up the state property which the Auburn Rifles are in possession of. The job was a long and tedious one, and Major Kuhlman, Lieuts. Lahnum and Clark, Sargent Lobmiller and others worked late in the night to complete the work. Mr. Lewis carries with him apparatus to letter and number every haversack, blanket bag, canteen, and all this work had to be done in his presence. Then all had to be counted. also all uniforms, caps, hats, tin cups, knives and forks, spoons, etc. etc. Mr. Lewis also left instructions that every uniform be kept in the armory, and now the boys are in a stew as to what to do with them. They cannot make a requisition for new uniforms unless all uniforms are kept in lockers and to provide those would mean an expense of nearly $50 to the company which they cannot afford to bear, and then another thing they dislike will be to change their clothes in the Armory each night when they come up to drill. It is our opinion if Gov. Mount compels the militia of the state to live up to the law as above stated, that it will only be a short time till the membership of some of the companies could be counted on your fingers. There will be no recruit, for few boys like to be bound down to such strict discipline when not in actual service. The chief attraction for the militimen is the annual camp of instruction, and this year that will be dispensed with.

Sergeant-Major Lewis will find few companies in the service whose property checked up better than Co. K. Major Kuhlman has been careful and painstaking and generally knew where every article belonging to the state and which he had receipted for, was. Mr. Lewis left on the 10:10 train for Fort Wayne where he will check up the two campanies and artillery.

QUEER LAWS.

The recent attempt to impeach the commissioners, called attention to some queer things in our state laws. One point in regard to the services and pay of commissioners is in point. One of the charges in the impeachment was the commissioners had taken fees for services not provided for by law. This meant their pay for services outside of the board meetings and more particularly, their work in superintending the building of bridges etc. It appears that the law will allow them to hire and pay a man to superintend the building of a bridge, but they have no right to superintend the work themselves unless they go into session as a board and then go out to the work in a body. In this case, they could all draw pay legally. But if one was assigned to the work alone, as a superintendent, he could not legally draw pay. But the commissioners have been assigning to each man on the Board, the duty to superintend the work in his district. This costs only a third as much to have the whole Board attend to it, but is illegal, and it came near costing the two members their office and $500 each, besides costs. Again any member of the Board can do more good superintending, than can any other person, for they hold the contract and the purse strings, and the contractor is sure to obey their directions. But it has several times proved that a contractor will pay little or no attention to a mere superintendent though he is hired by the Board to watch their work. The county has lost large sums in this way, and now when the Board has got the matter in control and is saving the county a good of bit money the law steps in and forbids it. For a few years now, the Board has been making good bargains on bridges and seeing to it, that the work is done according to contract. Now if they continue to save the people's money in this way, they are liable to be called into court and punished, fined $500 and be turned out of office. Verily, we are governed more than we need.

A similar state of things may be found in the law regarding the treasurer. He could save the people money and accommodate them besides, if allowed to go to the different towns to meet people and receive taxes. But the law says he shall not it. And if he does, may be punished.

FLOOD HORRORS.

Fifteen Dead Bodies Found in the Water.

Vicksburg (Miss.) special: The refugees who came from Davis Island on the government steamer, John R. Meigs, and the steamer Atlanta, report the drowning of eleven persons, all colored, on Davis island. Homer Moore, Pete Clements and wife and Henry Garland were drowned on the Hurricane plantation. The other seven, who are reported drowned on other parts of the island, are women and children from the Palmyra place. The loss of stock on the island has been very great. The steamer Florence remains at the island to rescue people and ferry stock over to the Louisiana mainland. A special from Natchez, Miss., says it was thought that all on Davis Island had escaped after the crevasse, but fifteen bodies have been found floating around the old Brierfield plantation, which was the homestead of Jefferson Davis. The surviving inhabitants are huddled in tents on top of the levee. From appearances this overflow will be worse than ever before known.

CASHIER KILLED

While Defending the Bank Funds from Robbers.

While resisting the entry of two robbers during the heroic but futile struggle to protect $150,000 or more in money and securities in the open vault of the Great Falls National Bank of Somersworth, N. H., Cashier Joseph A. Stickney was struck down and brutally murdered near his desk. After killing Stickney the murderers ransacked the vault and fled with all the cash it contained, estimated at $6,000. It is possible the loss will considerably exceed this sum after examination.

The robbers, after knocking Stickney down with a blackjack, cut his throat. The most remarkable feature of the robbery is that $100,000 United States bonds which the robbers evidently examined hastily, were not taken. Neither was any negotiable paper or securities of the bank, in fact, nothing is missing except cash. The men made their visit to the bank at the busiest time of the day. So completely and thoroughly did they accomplish the robbery that only an uncertain clue and very meagre description of them was obtainable.

Negotiations for Peace.

Athens special: In the Chamber of Deputies, Premier Delyannis said that semi-official negotiations had been commenced between Turkey and Greece on the subject of Crete. He denied that any power attempted to prevent a direct agreement being reached between the two countries. The bill granting to the government credit of $4,600,000 for the ministries of war and marine passed the first reading.

England Buying Artillery Horses.

A carload of horses from Grant County, Ind., has been purchased for the British artillery service. Noah Wilhelm, a stock-buyer from Upland, has been securing horses for Al Hiatt of Hartford City, Ind., who has a contract with the British Government to furnish 6,000 horses. The order says that the horses are to be shipped as soon as possible.

Glass Factories Will Not Close Down

At the preliminary scale conference of the American Flint Glass Workers Association and the manufacturers association held at Pittsburgh, the bottle blowers agreed to waive the summer shut-down clause. Bottle factories can now be operated the entire year without the usual six weeks suspension in July and August.

Dauntless Goes Free.

The case against the steamer Dauntless, seized by Collector of Customs Baltzell at Fernandina, Fla., Oct. 31, 1896, for violation of the navigation laws, came up for trial in the United States District Court at Jacksonville. After hearing the evidence Judge Locke promptly rendered a decision dismissing the case.

A Suicide.

I. Cameron of Albany, N. Y., committed suicide at the Imperial Hotel, Chicago, by shooting himself. He was well known and it is supposed that grief over the downfall of his pretty wife caused the act.

Killed Himself.

Wells Finch, a flour broker, and member of the Produce Exchange, accidentally shot and killed himself while apparently cleaning a revolver in his office in the Produce Exchange Building, New York.

Revolution in Honduras.

Washington special: U. S. Consul Little telegraphs from Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, that a revolution has broken out and that the Republic is now under martial law.

Victory for the Cubans.

News has reached Havana of a bold attack by insurgents on the Spanish gunboats, Satellette and Sandoval, off the north coast of Cuba. Solid shot was exchanged for hours, and the Sandoval was badly damaged, some of her plates being displaced. A big battle was fought near Sancti Spiritus, in which the Spanish were routed, leaving 200 dead on the field. The fighting lasted the entire day. Gen. Banderos, the insurgent, has crossed Jucarp Moron trocha, which Weyler said was impregnable. He destroyed several forts and took many prisoners.

Pistol Duel at St. Louis.

As the result of a duel fought with pistols in a St. Louis saloon, John Swering, ex-central Republican committeeman of the Second ward, died at the city hospital. Henry Erb, ex-deputy city marshal, fired the fatal shot. A quarrel over politics caused the killing.

Cyclone Over Georgia.

Telegrams from Ozark, Ala., and Valdosta, Ga., show that that section was visited Friday by another gulf cyclone, ascending the Apalachicola valley and sweeping northward with terrific force to the confluence of the Chattahoochee and the Flint rivers.

WORK HARD ON THE LEVEES.

People in the Vicinity of New Orleans Aroused to Action.

Each day adds a few inches to the Mississippi river's height and the long-expected crest of the flood wave will reach New Orleans in a few days. Meantime anxiety is increasing all along the line, for more weak spots are developing. From north Louisiana comes the news that the Biggs levee, below Vicksburg, sustained a terrific attack and nearly succumbed, but relief was prompt. Just below New Orleans three weak spots are reported almost in a row—one in St. Charles Parish and the other two at Hanson City and Camp Parapet. A break at either of the latter two points would involve considerable Illinois Central property and send the water knocking at the door of New Orleans. However, there is a protection levee just above the city, reaching clear across from the river to the lake, so that the water would run into the latter body. The city is protected in the lake by a costly system of levees. Another weak spot is on the opposite bank of the river, just below the city, but large forces have been at work there for three days and nights. A section of the levee at the old Ames crevasse, just above the Gretna, is also showing weakness, but the Texas and Pacific helps to hold the line, while Gretna, by a volunteer citizens' movement, is building a wall around the town. The danger is increasing daily, but that is only an incentive for harder work, and the Louisiana line is still intact.

FORTY DIE IN FLOODS.

Fatalities in South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska Reach the Two Score Mark.

Forty lives at least have been lost in the floods in South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska. Two persons are known to have been lost on the Floyd, three have been reported drowned on the Big Sioux, two on the Missouri and two on the Coon, all in the immediate vicinity of Sioux City. Cases of a similar character are being reported every day from points farther away, and a sharp watch is being kept by authorities in river towns for floaters in the Missouri. Many people are missing, of whose death their friends have no positive information. Most of them have probably been carried down the Missouri, and their bodies probably will never be recovered. The bodies of two more victims were brought into Sioux City Friday—Danford Magee of Whiting and Harry N. Favill—who were drowned while attempting to ford the Elkhorn river in Nebraska. There has been a general fall in all streams in the locality.

DARING DAYLIGHT BANK ROBBERY.

Savings Institution in Yonkers, N. Y., Relieved of $4,420.45 by Two Armed Men.

The Yonkers, N. Y., Savings Bank was entered at noon Monday by robbers, one of whom held up the aged cashier with a revolver, and after taking $4,420.45 out of the cash drawer escaped. Lyman Cobb Jr. is the cashier of the bank. He is a man of about 70, and has held the position for thirty years. He was in charge of the bank, and had been engaged in conversation by a plausible stranger who "wanted to open an account," when the second robber entered and presented a revolver to his head. The first stranger grabbed a roll of bills, and the two quickly fled. The cashier, ignoring the command to throw up his hands, rushed across the room and sprung the electric police alarm. The response was not made quickly enough to secure the capture of the thieves. The loss will in no way injure the standing of the bank.

GREATER THAN MAMMOTH CAVE.

Many Visitors to Subterranean Opening at Castalia, Ohio.

Many visitors have inspected the vast subterranean passageway discovered at Castalia, Ohio. The cave is situated at the source of Castalia creek and extends underneath the town. The entrance is as yet made with difficulty, but the splendor of the interior is marvelous when shown by the illumination of torches. The State geologist will inspect the cave, after which the opening will be enlarged. It is believed that the cave is connected with Perry's Cave at Put-in-Bay and also with Flat Rock Cave, which would make it extend over an area greater than that of Mammoth Cave.

Vagrant of the Skies.

Recently there came from Kansas a report that an airship was navigating the heavens above that State at night. People in other sections smiled incredulously. Then from various Iowa points the same tidings came. Kansas folk said, "I told you so." Those who had not yet caught a glimpse of the mystery still scoffed, while Iowans insisted that the airship was a reality; that it moved with incredible speed, having been seen within an hour at points 400 miles apart; that the craft showed searchlights as many-hued as a drug store window; and some observers described with minuteness the style of construction. But the mystery surrounding this vagrant of the sky was dispelled Friday night when it came within range of the astronomer's telescope at Evanston, Ill., and was promptly identified as the star Alpha Orionis, of the constellation of Orion. The peculiar hues noted in the shifting colors of the heavenly visitant are explained by the well-known characteristics of this member of the Orion family, which changes its colors with chameleon-like facility and which is really stationary, although appearing to be in rapid flight, this optical illusion being caused by the star lying low on the horizon of the earth and changing its point of view as the terrestrial planet revolves on its axis.

Had a Perilous Journey.

Another of the survivors of the ill-fated French line steamer Ville de St. Nazaire, which was foundered off Cape Hatteras on March 7, arrived in New York from Havre, after he had traveled 7,000 miles out of his way to reach that port. He is Col. Nicholas Sauvenel, of the Cuban army, who sailed from Cuba in February last, bearing letters to the Cuban junta in New York City. When he had completed his mission he took passage on the St. Nazaire for Porto Rico, intending to reach Cuba from there as best he could. The day after she sailed, on March 6, the steamer was wrecked and Col. Sauvenel put off from her in a boat with fifteen of her crew. After five days of terrible suffering, to which several of his companions succumbed, he, with the survivors, was picked up by the steamer Yanariva, two days out from Newport News, bound for Glasgow. There he was landed, and proceeded immediately to Havre to take ship for New York.

Found a Palace of the Pharaohs

Rev. Alfred P. Putnam, D. D., president of Danvers, Mass., Historical Society, has received a letter from F. Petrie, honorary secretary of the Victoria Institute, England, in which Mr. Petrie says: "It will interest you to hear that one of the institute members writes home from upper Egypt to announce his discovery of a palace of a Pharaoh of the sixth dynasty, with numerous valuable inscriptions. The wine jars of the Pharaoh were found intact in a long cellar. All were hermetically sealed, but on breaking the seal of one the wine seemed petrified."

Work of Fiends.

Tuesday night, as a Philadelphia and Erie Railroad train was passing out from Johnsonburg, Pa., the trainmen were horrified to see the body of a man lying on a pile of burning ties near the railroad track. The train was stopped and a brakeman succeeded in pulling the man from his awful position. His clothing was in flames and almost the entire body was badly burned. The man is reticent concerning the affair, but says that a number of men with whom he was tramping bound him hand and foot and threw him upon the fire to get rid of him. The injured man will not divulge the names of his enemies.

FLOOD'S WORST IS PASSED.

Secretary Alger Fears Farm Hands Will Gather in the Cities.

A Washington dispatch says that Secretary Alger thinks the worst of the flood dangers have passed in the Mississippi Valley, and that with the force the War Department has in the field, co-operating as it is with the local relief committees, there is small danger that great suffering will be permitted to go unchecked and unrelieved. One danger to be avoided from now on, in Secretary Alger's opinion, is the possible concentration of the destitute laborers in the cities and towns in order to secure the relief which the Government holds out. Accordingly Secretary Alger has sent the following telegraphic order: "The Secretary of War directs you to use every possible effort to prevent people who are receiving aid from the Government from gathering in the cities, for, as soon as the water subsides, their services will doubtless be required to move upon the levee, and till the fields, and, besides, it would be a great expense to transport them back to their former homes when needed, even if they should desire to do so."

CLAIM A SLICE OF ENGLAND.

Descendants of Sir Francis Drake Want to Recover an Estate.

Two hundred descendants of Sir Francis Drake, the famous English navigator, have formed an association in the western part of Pennsylvania to put forward a claim for what was once his estate. The property, they say, is situated in Devon and Somerset Counties in England, and it consists of about 6,000 acres of land and over $200,000,000 in money, which is the accumulation of rentals for about 150 years. The story they tell is that the famous mariner left his property to two sons, John and Francis Drake, in which line the estate was held until 1749, when the heirs of Francis Drake became extinct, and the estate reverted to the heirs of John Drake. The members of the association say they are the direct descendants of John. The Drakes, who are distributed all over the western part of Pennsylvania, held a meeting at New Castle on Saturday to formulate plans for claiming the property.

SEVEN NEGROES ARE DROWNED.

Family Thrown from a Flatboat Near Helena, Ark.

A distressing accident took place ten miles west of Helena, Ark., resulting in the drowning of a family of seven negroes. Sylvester Sanders, a tenant on the Joel Higgins farm, where the current has been so swift as to threaten the destruction of the houses, left with his family, wife and five children, for high ground. Unfortunately he took into his flat boat a large bull, which he valued highly. When near the Calicott place and within a mile of the hills, the bull, which was almost famished, attempted to eat the small limbs of the willow trees through which the boat was being laboriously pushed. The animal's action tipped the boat and frightened the inmates, who made frantic efforts to right it. In the excitement the animal kicked the side of the boat to pieces and the entire family was drowned. Some negroes saw them, but were unable to render assistance.

OFFERS HIS BODY FOR SALE.

Last Resort of Henry Beish, a Destitute Man of Camden, N. J.

There appeared in a Camden, N. J., newspaper Friday an advertisement offering for sale to the highest bidder among the medical colleges the body of Henry Beish. The advertisement was inserted by Beish himself, and he wants someone to buy his body, the goods to be delivered upon his death. Beish was found living in the utmost destitution. With him were his wife and four children. Father, mother and children were in advanced stages of starvation. There was hardly anything in the house that could be called furniture. Everything had been sold.

Blondin Was a Poor Man.

The probate of the will of the late Jean Francois Gravelet, known to the world as "Blondin," the famous rope-walker, develops the fact that, notwithstanding the thousands of times he risked his life and the princely income that for years rewarded his daring, he died a poor man. His personal estate has been appraised at $7,500, while his holdings of real estate were confined to the house at Ealing in which he passed the closing years of his life.

Fair Play After the Fact.

The President has decided to recommend to Congress an appropriation as indemnity for the killing by a mob of lynchers of three Italian citizens at Hahnville, La., Aug. 8 last.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION

AGRICULTURE COMMERCE

NASHVILLE.

ON the first day of May will commence the centennial exposition of the admission of Tennessee as a State. The preparations which have been made for this exhibition are on a scale much larger than was expected when the first proposition of such a means of celebration was made two years ago.

The exposition, which, as before stated, will open May 1, will continue until Oct. 30. Its main object is, of course, to show the wealth and resources of Tennessee, but there will be exhibits from the other States in the Union and from other countries. Fifteen exposition buildings, with several others, have been erected and are nearly completed. They will be in readiness in ample time for the placing of the exhibits.

As at the World's Fair in Chicago these buildings are of staff. They are built after plans by most skillful architects, and exhibit great beauty. The central building on the exposition ground is the Parthenon, which is an exact copy of the Parthenon at Athens. Here will be the exhibit of fine arts. There are no windows in the building, the entire roof being of glass and admitting light and air.

The commerce building, in which will be the liberal arts exposition, is the largest on the grounds. Its dimensions are 500x315 feet. It has a central dome 175 feet high. The agricultural building is nearly as large. It has a great central dome and six smaller ones surrounding it. Next in size and importance come the machinery building, the transportation building, the forestry building and the woman's building. The latter is on the edge of a beautiful grove and is a close copy of the famous Hermitage, the home of Gen. Andrew Jackson. It was designed by a woman and its appointments are most complete. One of the most attractive buildings on the grounds, and one of the most interesting, is the negro building. Here will be exhibits showing the progress of the negro in America since plantation days. The children's building will be another interesting structure.

One of the most handsome structures on the grounds is the auditorium, in which the various congresses and conventions of the exposition will be held. The seating capacity is 6,000. The United States exhibit will be quite complete, in a building of its own. Other structures are the history building, administration building, horticultural hall, the live stock arena, and fourteen State buildings. That of Illinois is an exact copy, one-sixth the size, of the administration building at the World's Fair.

MAY LOSE ITS RIVER.

Evansville, Ind., Confronted with a Grave Danger.

The city of Evansville, Ind., is threatened with a grave danger and perhaps when the present high floods in the Ohio river subside its prosperity may be forever crushed. The Ohio river, which has been one of the great sources of the city's commercial and industrial activity, has scooped out for itself a new channel, and Evansville may soon stand six miles from water.

Three miles up the river from Henderson is what is known as the "cutoff." At this point the Ohio river makes a sharp curve, forming almost a perfect horseshoe. The bend derives its name from this peculiarity, for it is known as Horseshoe Bend. Evansville is in the big end of the horseshoe and Henderson is on the southwestern point. The peninsula formed by the bend is of that rich river bottom land that produces the finest corn in the world, but little else.

Six miles up the river from Evansville is the entrance to Mound Slough. Here is the beginning of the "cutoff." In high water the river runs through the slough, emptying into the Ohio again at the point three miles from Henderson already named.

For years with each succeeding flood Mound Slough has been gradually widening. The water has eaten away ton after ton of the soft river bottom land, until to-day there is hardly a place where the passage is not 200 feet wide. It ranges from this width to nearly half a mile. As the slough grew in width it also grew in depth. Last year for the first time the people of Evansville realized the danger to their city. They noticed that in high water the current in front of their town was more sluggish than it should have been, and one day an actual movement of the water as though the Ohio was "running upstream," was noticed. Petitions were hastily drawn up asking Congress for an appropriation to build a levee along Horseshoe Bend, but nothing came of them.

A few days ago a river captain ran a passenger steamer through the "cutoff," and the trip was made securely. It is now probable that the new channel will widen sufficiently this season to change the course of the river and leave Evansville high and dry six miles inland.

That Henderson will be benefited as much as Evansville is damaged goes without saying. The change means that all the boat supply houses in the latter city would be moved at once within the gates of the former. It would mean a larger volume of business for Evansville's rival, because many shoppers who have gone to Evansville by river will not go by rail. The Evansville water works would be ruined and the saw mill industries could not survive. These saw mills are located on the river bank. They secure their raw material from log rafts which are floated down Green river in Kentucky and thence into the Ohio and to Evansville.

AN INTERESTING MAP.

It is an interesting story of how the "cutoff" was started. Living in Henderson County, Ky., before the war was a wealthy farmer named George Atkinson. One morning Mr. Atkinson had occasion to drive to Evansville, crossing on the ferry. When Mr. Atkinson reached Evansville he was halted by a Union soldier in the outer edge of the city and told he could not enter without a pass. He protested against such treatment and proclaimed his loyalty to the Union.

Nevertheless he was compelled to return to Henderson and secure a pass. Armed with this he returned and was allowed to proceed unmolested. When Mr. Atkinson started on his return journey he was again halted and told he could not leave without a pass. This second offense rendered the Hendersonian furious. He went to military headquarters, secured the paper and drove home in a towering rage.

Early next morning Mr. Atkinson summoned every able-bodied negro he could find. Then he went to his farm in the bend, hitched his mules to plows and scrapers, armed his laborers with shovels, and began work. A grove of trees on the bank of the cutoff inlet had been felled when a Union soldier rode by. He asked Mr. Atkinson what he was doing.

"I am going to cut a channel through here," Mr. Atkinson said, "and leave that blamed town of Evansville so high and dry that she'll be destroyed by spontaneous combustion."

The soldier reported to his superior officer and Mr. Atkinson was prevented from carrying out his purpose. Now, however, it seems that time and nature are about to finish the work he began.

DIDN'T DINE WITH M'KINLEY.

All Because Congressman Bailey Doesn't Like Dress Suits.

All Washington has been talking about Congressman Bailey's awful breach of etiquette in sending regrets to the President, who had invited him to attend a White House dinner. When Congressman Bailey gave his excuse for not attending that he did not like to wear a dress suit, people were more than shocked.

After he had sent his regrets Mr. Bailey went to see the President to explain his reason for not attending. Mr. McKinley told him not to mind about the dress suit, but to come in any old thing, or words to that effect. To have done that wouldn't have been so terribly out of place. When A. H. Garland was Attorney General under the first Cleveland administration he refused to put on a dress suit, but he did not stay away from the White House on that account. Jerry Simpson of Kansas has also avoided the dress suit habit, but he has not missed anything that came his way on account.

Mr. Bailey says he has no grounded prejudice to a "claw hammer" coat, but he is afraid to put on his first dress suit because it might be taking a very dangerous step. He says he has not the time to be a society man or a regular diner out, and resisted the temptation to order a suit of evening clothes when he received his invitation to the White House, fearing that if he should once get into the dangerous things the temptation to do so again would be too strong to be resisted, and he would in time become an habitual diner out, thereby frittering away much valuable time, which could better be devoted to study and to answering the letters of his constituents.

Joseph W. Bailey, representative to Congress from Texas, may be considered beyond a doubt as the leader of the Democratic minority in the House. His home is in Gainesville. There he went in 1885. He had boundless political ambition, and selected that locality as a good one to grow up with. Mr. Bailey made rapid progress in his political career. Within two years he became known as the "young Demosthenes of the Texas Democracy," and in 1890 he was sent to Congress by a plurality of nearly 23,000 votes.

A FARMER POLITICIAN.

"Jack" Gowdy, the New Consul General to Paris.

John K. Gowdy—"Gom Jack" some of the papers call him—who has been appointed consul general to Paris, is one of the leading Republicans in Indiana. He was chairman of the Republican State Central Committee. He is rather old to take up the study of the French language, but says he will manage it. The Indiana leader is a native of his State, and lives on a farm in the fertile bottoms of Rush County. He is now in the neighborhood of 60 years of age, and his youthful face and clear eye are tokens of the method and the care he has practiced during his entire life. Mr. Gowdy's career has not been eventful. He entered the war as a private, and was captain before it was over. He never talks of the war, and believes it should not be recalled. When he goes abroad he will take with him his wife and his charming daughter.

REVIEW OF THEIR WORK AT WASHINGTON.

Detailed Proceedings of Senate and House—Bills Passed or Introduced in Either Branch—Questions of Moment to the Country at Large.

The Legislative Grind.

The Senate met at noon Monday for the first time since the death of ex-Senator Voorhees, who, until a recent day, was a conspicuous member of the body. The opening prayer of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain, made eloquent reference to Mr. Voorhees' brilliant talents, impassioned ardor, kindling eloquence, genuine patriotism and the unselfish dedication of his great powers to every cause, human and divine, which enlisted his career. Divine consolation was invoked for the family of the man who had inscribed his name on the tablets which perpetuate the great orators and statesmen of his generation. Immediately following the prayer Mr. Gorman of Maryland moved that as a mark of respect to their late associate the Senate adjourn, adding that many Senators desired to attend the funeral. The motion prevailed. The House did nothing.

Mr. Morgan completed his Cuban speech in the Senate Tuesday, and consideration of the bankruptcy bill was resumed. Senator Chandler introduced his bills empowering the Secretary of the Navy to take possession of the armor plants of the Bethlehem and the Carnegie companies. The House did nothing.

In the Senate Wednesday Mr. Vest offered a resolution in the nature of a criticism of Secretary Gage and declared illegal his recent order relative to goods imported after April 1, when, according to the retroactive clause of the pending bill, the new tariff rates are to apply. Mr. Morrill moved to refer the resolution, and the debate and vote following was the first indication of the strength of the tariff supporters. The motion prevailed, 24 to 23. Two Senators were absent, both Populists, whose positions upon the question are in doubt. The affirmative vote was given by Republicans, including one silver Republican, Mr. Mantle of Montana. The negative vote was made up of Democrats, Populists and two silver Republicans, Pettigrew of South Dakota and Cannon of Utah. The President sent a message to Congress urging it to make suitable provision for adequate representation of the United States at the Paris exposition. The House was in session but ten minutes, and then adjourned until Saturday without transacting any business.

The Senate spent Thursday considering the Indian appropriation bill, but did not complete it. Early in the session the proceedings were made executive, and when the doors were again opened to the public the Indian bill came up. The pending question was on the committee amendment opening the Uncompahgre Indian reservation in Utah to public entry. Mr. Jones of Arkansas withdrew the point of order he had made and on a yea and nay vote the amendment was agreed to—33 to 13. A number of recent appointments were confirmed, and the Senate adjourned until Monday at 5 o'clock. The House did nothing.

Two car loads of Italians were brought to Seymour by the B. & O. S. W. Railroad recently, and a report was started that they were to receive but 65 cents a day and board themselves. An indignation meeting of 100 was held and some hot words were said against the company. A grievance committee was appointed to wait on the officials of the road and protest.

The grand jury at Terre Haute declined to return indictments against the suit clubs. They found that such a step would not only implicate some 700 people in Terre Haute, but would also necessitate similar proceedings against all guessing contests, all church raffles, and in short, all gift contributions of any character. The prospect was a trifle too much for the jury to consider seriously, so they passed.

Thomas Hoffmier, aged 17, residing with his widowed mother near Alamo, was working with a 32-caliber rifle when his mother asked him to desist and go split some wood. The lad did not respond promptly, whereupon Mrs. Hoffmier seized the weapon by the butt end, attempted to take it, not knowing that it was loaded. In the scuffle the gun was discharged and the ball passed through the son's body, inflicting fatal wounds.

Mrs. John Miller, living north of Bremen, died after a week's illness. She was not attended by physicians, and trusted entirely to the efficacy of prayer for recovery. Her sufferings were intense, but she remained firm in her belief that Divine supplication would work a miracle, and a Chicago faith doctor was appealed to. He appointed an hour for prayer, during which Mrs. Miller declared she experienced relief, but a few hours later her agony was ended by death.

TALKING IN THEIR SLEEP.

"You think I am dead,"
The apple tree said,
"Because I have never a leaf to show,
Because I stoop
And my branches droop,
And the dull-gray mosses over me grow!
But I'm alive in trunk and shoot;
The buds of next May
I fold away,
But I pity the withered grass at my root."

"You think I am dead,"
The quick grass said,
"Because I have parted with stem and blade
But under the ground
I am safe and sound,
With the snow's thick blanket over me laid.
I'm alive and ready to shoot,
Should the Spring of the year
Come dancing here;
But I pity the flower without branch or root."

"You think I am dead,"
A soft voice said,
"Because not a branch or root I own?
I never have died,
But close I hide
In a plumy seed that the wind has sown,
Patient I wait through the long winter hours,
You will see me again—
I shall laugh at you then,
Out of the eyes of a hundred flowers."

The Town Clock.

BY ANNIE WESTON WHITNEY.

The heat was terrible; but Barbay did not seem to mind it as she hurried along the close, dusty street, her clean calico gown giving her a bright, fresh look that it did one good to see on such a day. In her arm she carried a queer-looking bundle. She smiled happily as she hurried on, her thoughts all of Father, dear Father, to whom she was going.

Stopping as she reached the City Hall, she looked up, half expectantly and hopefully, up at the tall tower reaching so far, far above her. A brighter smile came into her face as loud, clear and distinct came from above the clang—clang—clang—clang—clang—clang that told the hour of day.

She looked a moment longer, but Father was not to be seen; dear Father who was so good and kind and whom everybody loved. And why shouldn't they? How could they help it, and how could they do without him? Why, Father was the old Town Clock, or one-half of it, as Mother used to say, Mr. Harper being the other half. Poor Mr. Harper! she was so sorry for him, because his little baby boy was dead.

She was at the foot of the long flight of steps now; the steps leading to Father, dear Father, the Town Clock; for strange as it may seem, there is in one of our Southern cities a town clock whose only face is a human face; whose only hands are human hands, and whose machinery is the muscle of a strong man's arm.

Any one else might have thought the long flight of steps leading to the tower a tedious climb in the heat; but Barbay only stopped a moment to look up. She loved the long climb, because it took her always nearer dear Father; and then it seemed so odd to be going up, up over the tops of the houses and stores, and to look down every little while through the funny little windows and see the people growing smaller and smaller until they looked like fairies then to look up at the beautiful sky and wonder about the dear Heavenly Father who loved every one so dearly and who watched over them always. Up higher and still higher the little feet climbed, until there was only a wooden door between her and Father. Softly she opened it and peeped in.

"Bless my soul and body!" said a pleasant voice; and the next moment Barbay was in her father's arms.

"What brought you here this hot day, Sweetheart, and what's in the bundle?" he asked, after she had almost smothered him with kisses.

"The dressmaker next door let me do an errand and gave me this," said Barbay, taking up the bundle she had laid aside and proudly displaying a big cantaloupe.

"And you brought it for Father to look at?" he said, with a twinkle in his eye.

"For Father to eat," she said, sweetly.

"You always remember your old father, Sweetheart," he said, lovingly. "Well, I will try to manage one-half if you'll attend to the other. I could not possibly eat more than that while you are here. It would be so impolite, you know."

"If I go away will you eat it all?" she asked, again putting her arms round his neck, but looking into his face as though she loved every curve and impress on it.

"I could not touch it, I would be so disappointed," he said taking off her hat and kissing her forehead. He always called her his little sweetheart; but every one else called her Barbay, a name she had given herself when she was very little.

It was in a queer corner of a still queerer room in this tall tower that they sat down by a narrow table pushed close to the wall to enjoy their feast.

A hanging supboard, from which a couple of spoons, some salt and a knife were taken, suggested certain housekeeping arrangements, while on the table were pen, ink and paper, with a book or two, evidently taken from the hanging shelves in another corner. Indeed, there were only corners in which to hang things, for the sides of the room were great windows looking over the city in all directions. But the most curious thing in this curious room was the great bell, reaching almost from the ceiling to the floor; a tongueless, clapperless bell, that had made no motion of any kind since the day it had been placed in position, many, many years ago. Hanging in another corner was the iron hammer that, guided by the hand of him who watched in the tower, struck on the rim of the great bell those clear, loud notes that kept record of the passing of time over the alternately waking and sleeping city. The fourth corner held the tall, old-fashioned clock, as old as the bell itself, that had served in all that time, to tell the exact moment when the town clock must strike. To Barbay it was a matter of great interest; for its face was always changing as it told of the moon and the tides and the seasons.

"Barbay," said her father when their feast over, he saw a rapidly approaching storm; "much as I love to have you here, I must send you home now as fast as you can go. You would not like to be way up here in such a storm as those angry looking clouds are bringing us."

"Oh, Father," said Barbay, "I should not mind anything where you are. Let me stay, please. I love to watch the clouds play hide and seek from here."

He looked at her hesitatingly a moment, and as he did so a sudden flash of lightning almost blinded them, while great drops of rain splashed on the windowsills. There was hardly time to close the windows before the flashing and booming of the heavenly artillery began; for it was one of those storms that come suddenly, only to leave a sad story behind.

To Barbay it was grand and beautiful. It seemed as though she could look right into Heaven if the flashes would only last longer, she seemed so close to it. She could not talk, but looked occasionally at her father, who smiled on her from his seat in the great easy chair for which Mother had made soft, comfortable cushions.

Suddenly she wondered what made her feel so queer, and why she was on the floor. She must have been asleep. She picked herself up and wondered what made her go to sleep all in a moment. And Father, why he had fallen asleep in his chair too. Dear Father, he looked so white and tired; but then he had been the Town Clock all day and all night, so that Mr. Harper could be at home with his little baby boy.

Would he sleep long and get rested, she wondered. Before Father came the Town Clock had fallen asleep and failing to strike the hour on time, had been discharged. It gave her such a happy, helpful feeling to think she was here now to wake Father in time. She was so glad she had stayed. She would let him rest a few moments longer, but it would soon be time for the town clock to strike.

She stood at one of the windows and looked down, down on the busy city, then up at the rapidly moving clouds, already being kissed by the Sun, as he bade them a loving good-night. She loved to watch him from here as, his day's work done, he slowly disappeared from view leaving such beautiful and hopeful promises behind. But better still she loved to be here with her Father when he watched over the sleeping city. Once she and Mother had stayed till they could hear him call out, so loud and clear, "Twelve o'clock, and all's well!"

Sometimes he was forced to rouse the sleepers when a fire broke out, lest their beautiful city should be damaged or destroyed. No wonder every one loved the Town Clock who warned them of danger and watched over them sleeping or waking.

It was time to wake him now.

"Father," she said, softly, going to his side. "Father," she repeated louder, as he did not reply.

How soundly he slept. She called, called again and again, even shook him; but he would not wake. What must she do? If she could not wake him, the clock would not strike and they would discharge him as they did the other man; and then what would become of Mother and the children?

With the tears rolling down her cheeks, she made one more agonizing effort to waken him, and then looked in helpless despair at the clock and at the motionless bell. Suddenly a thought came to her that made her start and tremble. Could she? Dare she. She must try for dear Father and the Mother and children.

Climbing on a chair, she took down the hammer that felt so heavy, and then, pushing the chair close to the great bell, she climbed into it again, this time on her knees so she would be where she could strike well. Her little eyes went up to the clock, that still marked one second of the time. She was not too late.

Clang — cla-ng — cla-ng — cla-ng — cla-ng — cla-ng — clang.

The hammer dropped to the floor, and burying her face in her hands on the rim of the bell, Barbay caught her breath and gave a terrified sob.

Had she counted right. It had never sounded so before. It seemed as though the first sound had deafened all the others and would never stop. Did it sound so to those who were listening? Did everybody know it was not Father, dear Father? How dreadful it all was! Would they do anything to Father—or to her—if it was all wrong?

She looked up. How soundly Father still slept! Mr. Harper would soon come now and let him go home. He would not mind his going to sleep, for he had been kind to him.

There were footsteps on the stairs. Mr. Harper was coming. No, there were voices. In an instant Barbay was at her father's side and, putting her arms round his neck, kissed the white, tired face and called him by every endearing name she could think of. As the door opened, she drew her arms more tightly round him, as though she would protect him from threatened harm.

"Hulloa! What's this?" said the Mayor, as he and the janitor entered.

"Don't, please don't let them discharge him," said Barbay, her big, sad eyes looking anxiously at the two men. "He couldn't help it, indeed he could not; for he's been the Town Clock all day and night. Oh, don't—please don't!" she pleaded, the tears beginning to roll down her cheeks.

"This is more serious than I thought," said the Mayor, gently drawing the child away, and putting his ear down to her father's heart.

"How long has he been this way?" he asked quickly.

"I don't know. I went to sleep all of a sudden, and when I waked up I was on the floor, and Father was asleep too."

"Get a doctor here as quick as possible," said the Mayor to the janitor. "He is stunned and may be so for hours; but I think he'll come out of it all right. I confess I do not know what to do myself."

"Now," he said, turning to Barbay, who was again leaning protectingly over her father, "tell me who made the clock strike just now?"

With a terrified look Barbay crept closer to her father as she said:

"Oh, please, I couldn't wake him; and I was afraid they would discharge him."

"Well," said the Mayor, "who made the clock strike?"

"I did," said Barbay, trembling all over.

"You," said the Mayor, looking her over carefully—"you made the big town clock strike?"

"Please, please, don't let them do anything to Father!" said Barbay. "I tried so hard to do it right."

She half sobbed out the last words, as her head went down on her father's shoulder.

The Mayor's eyes threatened to give him trouble, as he said kindly:

"Come here, little woman. Do not be afraid. No one shall do anything to your father that you do not like. Come and tell me how you made the big clock strike."

Encouraged by his words and by the tone of his voice, she loosened her hold of her father and had soon given an account of how she had tried to be the Town Clock.

"Did I count all wrong?" she asked, wistfully. "Oh, it was so dreadful!"

The Mayor put his arm round her gently and drew her to him, his eyes glistening and a lump rising in his throat, as he thought of all she had gone through.

"You are a dear, brave little woman," he said, earnestly, brushing her hair back from her eyes. "Yes, you counted all right and everybody knew what as though it was almost too weak and time it was; but the old clock sounded too tired to strike; that was all."

"And they won't discharge Father?"

"No, he shall not be discharged; but I think we must see that he has a few days rest before he goes to work again."

"Oh," gasped Barbay—oh, how beautiful! Then I don't mind—no, I don't mind anything"—and putting her head on the Mayor's shoulder, she burst into tears.

The next day the story was told all over the city of how the tall tower had been struck by lightning and the Town Clock had been stunned and unconscious for hours; and of how Barbay, who had been stunned too for a few moments, had tried to be the Town Clock herself, so that Father, dear Father, might not be discharged.—Independent.

An Eye for an Eye.

In Abyssinia it is the law that the murderer be turned over to the relatives of the dead person, they, if they please, to put him to death in the same manner in which the murdered person was removed. A traveler, recently returned from that country, tells of a case, wherein a boy, playing with his companions, fell from a tree upon one of them, killing him instantly. The occurrence was brought to the notice of the district chief, whose council, after deliberation, decided that the dead boy's relatives might take the offender, stand him under the tree, and then, if they could, put him to death by falling on him from the same tree.

GROWING IN POPULARITY.

The Game of Basket-Ball Is Rapidly Gaining Ground.

The rapidity with which basket-ball has grown in popularity since its inception only a few years ago has been most remarkable. It did not grow, like other games, base-ball for instance, from simpler ones, but was invented in a library by James Naismith, an instructor of physiology in Springfield, Mass., in 1890. It is played to-day under practically the same rules as left Mr. Naismith's desk. He invented it for the Young Men's Christian Association of Springfield. Now there are at least 1,000 basket-ball teams playing in this country, and a considerable number in Canada. In Montreal one of the social affairs of the season is the annual basket-ball game between the ministers and doctors of the city. The game is popular in colleges for men, and the "college girl" takes most kindly to it. The sport has many disciplinary features besides its value as an athletic exercise. It teaches the player to subordinate his own individual play to team work, to keep his head in the most exciting moments and to cultivate accuracy, self-control and strict observance of the rules.

The feminine temper cannot at all times stand the strain of basket-ball. An expert who has refereed many games says that the "maddest woman he ever saw" was a public school teacher, a member of a basket-ball team, who questioned one of his decisions.

The Amateur Athletic Union has recognized the game, adopted rules for its government and assumed jurisdiction over its conduct. The game can be played on any floor or ground free of obstruction where there is less than 3,500 square feet of actual playing space. More space than that would be impractical. It is a sort of foot-ball, but if played according to the rules it lacks the roughness of that game. A hall or gymnasium is the best place to play basket-ball. The players line up five on a side. Back of each line is hung on the wall a network basket. The object of the game is to get the ball into your opponent's basket. On each side are five players—a center, two forwards and two guards.

GAME OF BASKET BALL AT YALE.

The ball is put in play by the referee throwing it up in the center of the open space between the teams. After the play begins there are no rules as to the player's positions, but the theory is that the center and forwards are the aggressive players and the guards shall keep near the basket to defend the goals.

Snobbery of Education.

Editorially, in the Ladies' Home Journal, Edward W. Bok expresses himself vigorously in deprecation of the tendency to introduce a dangerous element of snobbery into education. He notes the pervading "I know so much" air that is encountered on all sides, and the feeling that a line is being drawn on a so-called educational basis. Mr. Bok contends that "an educational process which sharpens and polishes only a girl's intellect, and either deadens or neglects her heart or soul, is a sorry imitation of what an education really stands for and is. * * * The practice followed by some girls who have been at college of holding their heads above those who have not is a foolish proceeding, and smacks of the most repulsive kind of snobbery. It is never safe for us to assume that we know more than the people around us, whether we are college-trained or not. The longer we live in this world the more we become convinced how little we know. The people most humble in their opinions are generally the best educated. It is an art which only a few of us learn; to be reticent of our own opinion when every one around us is expressing his. Yet this is one of the attributes of the well educated. Silence often speaks louder than speech. But the girl fresh from her books and college does not always perceive this. She is apt to assume, for example, that people are uneducated if now and again they speak ungrammatically. But she does not know that the most vital truths ever spoken or written, the truths which have done mankind the greatest good, have not always been those which would have borne grammatical dissection. Their good lay in what was said, rather than in the way in which the sentences were constructed. It is when we are young that we believe that all that is worth knowing is printed in books. When he are older we find that the deepest truths are never written. It is well enough for a girl to hold up for herself a standard in grammar or anything else. But she is unwise when she believes that her standard is the one by which she must judge and measure others. She has no right to do so in the first place. And in the second, she is far more apt to be wrong in her deductions than she is to be correct."

QUANTRELL'S RENDEZVOUS.

Where the Noted Guerrilla Was Wont to Retire with His Men.

Nelson County, Kentucky, was the favorite resort of Quantrell and some of his associates during and immediately after the civil war. The man who stood closer to Quantrell than any other man in this part of Kentucky was the late Captain A. D. Pence, for many years sheriff of Nelson County. He possessed many relics and mementos of his old commander, the most notable among which was the sash worn during the war by the famous guerrilla chief. Quantrell captured the sash from the Federal general, Blount, near Lexington, Mo., in 1862. He prized it highly and wore it until he was fatally shot in 1865. It was a custom with the guerrillas, when one of their number was killed, to divide his possessions, each of the guerrillas receiving something as a memento. When Quantrell was shot his effects were divided, and his sash fell to the lot of Frank James, who afterward gave it to Captain Pence. It was made of fine, heavy silk, and the ends were richly ornamented with beautiful tassels. Quantrell was wearing the sash when mortally wounded, and the silk was stained in several places with his life blood.

Another interesting memento of Quantrell was long in the possession of a lady living near Bloomfield, only a short distance from Lawrenceburg. It was a poem written in an autograph album by the noted outlaw shortly before he received his death wounds.

The closing chapter of Quantrell's life was full of interest. He was still in his prime when he was taken unawares and attacked by Terrell's men while quartered on the Wakefield farm, where he was mortally wounded, after which he was conveyed to the house of James Wakefield, near the line of Spencer and Mercer Counties. From there he was removed to a military hospital in Louisville, where he died after a month of intense suffering. His remains now lie in an unmarked and weed-grown grave, in a little cemetery in the suburbs of Louisville. It is said that while Quantrell lay dying of his wounds in the hospital he purchased the plot of ground where his remains now rest.

MRS. J. ADDISON PORTER.

The Wife of the Secretary to the President and Her Official Duties.

The wife of the recently appointed official whose card reads "J. Addison Porter, Secretary to the President," naturally takes a central place in the life of the most interesting of American families. The delicate health of Mrs. McKinley will not prevent her from undertaking the social duties devolving upon the mistress of the White House, yet every possible additional social duty will be performed by those nearest to the wife of the President, and much, therefore, will devolve upon Mrs. Porter, who is well fitted to meet these requirements.

The first social function at which Mrs. Porter appeared was the reception at the White House given by Mrs. McKinley in honor of the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps, and the manner in which the wife of the President's secretary assisted in the pleasant task of according a gracious and cordial welcome to callers won for her the regard of all present. Mrs. Porter is the daughter of Col. Betts, of New York, who is a son of Judge Betts, the famous lawyer. She was sent at an early age to Miss Porter's school at Farmington, Conn., where she remained until she went to France to attend a finishing school. After her marriage in 1884 to J. Addison Porter her home was for some time in Washington. She speaks French fluently and is fond of the study of languages. Mr. and Mrs. Porter have two children. Their names are Agnes and Josephine and they are just about to enter kindergarten. The Porters reside in a pretty, attractive house, formerly occupied by ex-Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith and his family.

The Water Bicycle.

Ball bearings and scientific gear are creating a revolution in motors of all sorts. A new and promising invention is the hydrocycle, which is built on the catamaran principle, with cylinders of galvanized steel filled with air. A slight framework connects these two cylinders, and a bicycle gear is attached which drives light paddle-wheels of eight blades. The sprocket-wheel is set between the pedals in the same way as the sprocket-wheel and chain of the bicycle. The steering gear consists of two small steel rudders, operated by rudder-chains connected with the steering gear, somewhat after the fashion of the ordinary bicycle.

The hydrocycle is capable of a speed of ten miles an hour without hard work, and as the craft is so built that it can neither sink nor upset, the pleasure and safety of it are at once apparent. The cylinders are made with compartments so arranged that the fracture of one will not affect the others. The machine sits lightly on the water, can be turned in almost its own length, and, like the ordinary catamaran, will live in a sea which would upset a boat of a much larger size. It draws but a few inches of water, is light, manageable and novel, a combination of qualities that makes it extremely attractive to those who are fond of water sports. Those already built will carry five or six hundred pounds, and are about ten feet in length of cylinder. Only a few have been built, but the experiments already made are sufficient to satisfy experts that the hydrocycle is one of the coming fads, and promises to furnish a great deal of pleasurable amusement.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..... APRIL 22, 1897

TO TAXPAYERS.

Treasurer Hines will not be able to accommodate the taxpayers this year by coming to meet them a day or so at Corunna. Waterloo, Butler and Garrett as has been done heretofore. A treasurer has no right by law, to do this, and the new laws now in effect, make the danger that much greater for him. The people are all demanding that every officer obey the law to the very letter or be punished. The two commissioners have just stood a suit that cost them $500 and had they been convicted they would have had to pay $500 each to the prosecutor, besides. It is now a good time for all to come down to a strict obedience of the law, and though it may prove a hardship, this first year, in the end it may be for the best. But no one should complain of the officer. Mr. Hines has already advertised his visits to Waterloo and Butler, and now has to take it all back. He has sent out the following circular letter to explain this change of action so all may see what compelled him to it.

Treasurer's Notice!

Owing to the recent stringent laws governing the conduct of county officers, I will not be able to meet the taxpayers of Butler, Waterloo, Garrett and Corunna as has been done heretofore by county treasurers, and as I had expected to do, and had advertised. The law has always been that no treasurer should take his books out of his office, and if he did so, he was liable to a fine of $100. But as long as no one complained of him he was safe. Now, however, there is an additional danger, as the impeachment law of March 8, makes it easy for any citizen to impeach an officer and compel him to pay a fine of $500 to the prosecutor and to vacate his office. So he may be punished under both laws, and in the present temper of the people, the only way for a treasurer to be safe is to obey the law to the letter. I have had good counsel on this, and though I regret that I cannot accommodate the taxpayers as has been the custom heretofore, I trust that all will see I am trying to live up to the law and do my sworn duty. This will make it necessary for all taxpayers to come to my office.

HENRY HINES,
Treasurer DeKalb County.
Auburn, Indiana, April 15, 1897.

WENT EGGAINST HIM.

He made a bet that he could eat
A score of Easter eggs,
But the eggsertion proved a feat
That knocked him off his pegs.
Eggsasperated, he eggsclaimed,
With an eggspressive smirk,
"This Easter lay, which me has lamed,
Is most eggs-hoisting work!"

AN INNOCENT BABE

Hurled Into the St. Mary's River At Ft. Wayne.

Through the accidental operations of a fisherman the corpse of an infant has been dragged from the depths of the St. Mary's river at Fort Wayne to bear silent testimony that the cruel crime of infanticide, or child murder, has been only recently committed.

On Sunday afternoon as John Hartman, of Marion street, was casting a "throw-line" from a boat in the middle of the stream just below the jail flats, his hooks caught on something which refused to move without considerable effort. He pulled in the object with difficulty. Upon drawing it up close to the side of the boat the fisherman found it to be a bundle, the outside wrapper of which was heavy brown paper. A strong cord kept the contents from falling out. He hauled in his find to make an examination, and upon removing the wrapper was horrified to see the corpse of a babe, which he took to be a few days old. Tied to the body of the child was a stone, weighing about twelve pounds, and around its little form clung a checked gingham garment that looked like a woman's apron.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Ceremony Performed By Rev. Guild of the M. E. Church.

For several weeks it has been known that Easter Sunday two of Auburn's popular young people were to appear as a bridal couple and just who that would be, has been the perplexing question. But to the great surprise of their many young friends, it was learned early Sunday morning that the beautiful home of Mrs. Snell on south Main street, was the scene Saturday evening of a quiet wedding, the contracting parties being her daughter, Miss Emma, and Frank Draggoo. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. Guild of the M. E. church, in the presence of only a very few invited relatives. The ceremony was brief, but very impressive and performed in Rev. Guild's usual pleasing manner. The bride's mother had prepared an elegant supper to which all sat down and enjoyed most heartily.

Mr. and Mrs. Draggoo are well known to the young people of our city and are held in highest esteem by their many friends. Mrs. Draggoo is a worthy member of the M. E. church and a teacher in the Sabbath School. Mr. Draggoo is in the employ of the Brown, Culbertson & Boland, hardware store as clerk and is held in high esteem by his employers for his straight forward and honest manner of doing business. The firm presented Mr. and Mrs. Draggoo a gasolene stove and sewing machine, which is further evidence that they appreciated the service of Mr. Draggoo. They were also the recipients of other valuable presents, among which were a handsome rocker, shining gold, etc. They will not commence house-keeping at present as it is thewish of the bride's mother that they remain with her for the summer at least. The COURIER joins with their manny young friends in congratulations, and wishes them much prosperity.

BATTLE OF LEXINGTON.

To-day, Monday, April 19, is the 122nd anniversary of the first fights of the Revolutionary War, those at Lexington and Concord. The Americans were preparing for war, and had collected military stores at Concord, which was thought a safe place, it being sixteen miles from Boston. Here were gathered 18 tons of rice, 8 tons of fish, several hundred barrels of flour 1,100 tents, 1,000 iron kettles, 15,000 canteens, wooden plates, spoons, etc., in abundance, a large amount of cartridges, powder, grape, round and canister shot, etc. etc. The British troops left Boston early, and on reaching Lexington were attacked, but soon drove the 70 militiamen away, went on to Concord and destroyed such stores as they could find. Here they had a brisk fight with a larger body of militia and finding themselves likely to get the worst of it, retreated towards Boston, but were followed and fired on most of the way. By night the got to Boston, but had lost nearly 300 men killed, wounded or missing. The militia had lost about 70.

COURT

We were in error in stating that the case of Fair vs Coffinberry would be tried on Friday of this week. We should have said that was the day on which the preliminary steps are to be concluded. The trial proper, will not come up till next term of court.

D. W. Fair, on a charge of embezzlement is under bonds of $1000 to appear at next term of court and stand trial, Perry Fair on a charge of raising a county order, is under $500 bonds to appear next term; James O Blake has a charge of perjury against him, to be tried next term. Altogether the May term of court promises to be a very busy one.

J. M. Hook is now over at Columbia City waiting to have his trial on the cases taken there on change of venue. He and his attorneys say they are ready for the trial at any date the state is ready, and are anxious to have it brought on soon.

HOW TO VOTE.

There were made several changes in the election law last winter, some of which should be studied up carefully, as they will apply to the election of May 3. The ballots are printed as heretofore. The democratic ticket is at the left, as usual, and the republican ticket to the right of that. The device for democrats is the rooster and for the republicans, the eagle. But instead of having these birds enclosed in a square as heretofore, they are now in a circle. The stamp is not used in voting, but a blue pencil given the voter by poll clerk. Instead of stamping, the voter takes the pencil and marks a cross (X) anywhere within the big circle at the top of the ticket he wishes to support. This votes a straight ticket, provided he does not mark anywhere else. The voter must not make any other mark with the pencil, in or out of circle, except he wishes to vote a mixed ticket. There are a number of other changes, but as they do not come into use where the tickets are full, as in Auburn, we do not give them. The safe way is to vote the straight ticket as shown above.

Extremely Literal.

It is related of a certain very matter-of-fact man that he was waked one night by a burglar at the foot of his bed, who pointed a revolver at his head.

"If you move," said the burglar, "you are a dead man!"

"I beg your pardon," answered the other; "if I move, it will be good proof that I am alive. You should be more careful as to the meaning of your words."

The fault of this story is that it does not tell what the burglar did then. Properly he should have fainted, and remained in the faint until the police came and took him away.

One of the Two.

It was in front of a theater that a number of people observed a showily dressed man.

"I tell you," remarked one of the group, "a man is lucky to have a big fur-trimmed overcoat this kind of weather."

"Perhaps," was the rejoinder, in a tone of chronic discontent; "he's either lucky or else he's an actor."—Washington Star.

G. M. W., T. D. NEAL.

Was an Unexpected Guest at the D. of H. Anniversary Last Night.

Three years ago April 20th '94, the Degree of Honor, ladies auxiliary to the A. O. U. W. was organized in Auburn. On March 20, '94, the A. O. U. W. was reorganized here and since then these two organizations have had a wonderful growth, and in a social way have held many interesting open meetings. The occasion on last evening was the joint anniversary celebration of these orders, and the members and invited friends filled their hall to overflowing. The ladies had prepared an excellent program which was being rendered when to their surprise, it was discovered that Grand Master Workman T. D. Neal was in the large audience. His trip here was to surprise the two organizations and he successfully accomplished the end. Although Mrs. Neal arrived in the city 3:10 in the afternoon; none of the members saw him. He was escorted to the home of R. C. Baxter and had it not been for the secrecy of the COURIER man his surprise would have been made public.

The program as rendered in the hall was very interesting, including music by Calkin's Mandolin Club and Prof. Sturgis. Welcome address by Mrs. Chas. Bolton, and address on good of the order by T. D. Neal, and closed with a comical farce play entitled, "The Sweet Family." Those who took part in this were: Mesdames Chas. Bolton, Elmer Miller, John Baughman, Mertie Bahlke, Chas. Picker, Isaac Jones, Eli Cochran and Miss Libbie Hosler, with Mrs. Jerry Bolender as organist.

The guests were then invited to the Armory where refreshments were served, consisting of sandwiches, eggs, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cake. After the large company were served the room was darkened and Mr. Beadle gave an exhibition of the screen work used in the iniatory services by aid of the magic lantern. It was after midnight before the audience had left the room but all went away pleased, and felt that the joint anniversary exercises were a grand success.

ENFORCE THE CIGARETTE LAW

The new cigarette law, now in force ought to be well understood by parents who wish to save their children from the nasty health and mind destroying habit of smoking the vile things. It makes it unlawful for any corporation firm or person to sell, barter, furnish or give away, directly or indirectly, to any minor any cigarette, cigarette wrapper or substitute for either, or procure for or to persuade, advise counsel or compel any child under the age of 21 years to smoke a cigarette. A violation of this act is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $50 and for a second offense may be fined not more than $500, to which may be added imprisonment in the county jail for not more than 60 days. It is made the duty of the prosecuting attorney to summon any minor known to have any cigarettes in his posession and compel him to testify before a justice of the peace as to where he obtained the cigarettes.

Important to Reason Your Future Interest!

EVERY Breeder and Stock Raiser seems slow to consider his best interests. When market values are low they imagine, because prices are below the ordinary range of past markets, that the future can not change the present condition of affairs.

Experience in the past teaches us that a man who engages in the Breeding of Stock, when everybody else disposes of his surplus, is sure to reach the best market for what he produces. The man who engages when every body else is seeking the same investment is certain to lose upon his efforts The secret is, go into business when stock is low and sell out when stock is high.

Therefore, it is plain to be seen that our Breeders have become discouraged and abandoned the breeding for the past three years, until we seldom see a colt at its mother's side, and our horse, buyers are searching for good horses. The time has come when only the best horses will be in demand.

Why not wake up and continue to breed the best, and reap the harvest of a future market?

How shall we do this?

There is but one way. The BLACK PERCHERON is the superior horse for draft, and the CLEVELAND BAY for general use. Solid bred colors smooth in conformation, docile and kind in disposition, and the only true bred horses that will cross satisfactorily on all grades of mares.

Therefore, the only way is to breed your mares to the Black Percheron or Cleveland Bay, Which will make the Spring and Fall Season of 1897 at D. N. Myers' Livery and Sale Stable, and Farmers Feed Barn in Auburn, Ind.

—L. J. Miller has received a letter from Mr. Borst, in which he says he found many changes in the prisoners had taken place the few days he was at home and besides, the time he was absent, put his work that many days behind. We also learn that those of the prisoners who have nothing to do, since the new laws went into effect, have to spend a good deal of time locked in their cells. Then the guards take them out daily and put them through a sort of drill, for exercise. This looks like a very unwise law.

—The Newspaper Union,, a monthly Journal published by the Fort Wayne Newspaper Union has the following to say concerning this paper:

"The DAILY COURIER, at Auburn is in the third year of its existence, and is one of the very few papers of this kind that have been prosperous in a town of the size of Auburn. The business men give it a liberal patronage and Mr. Barns in return gives them a first-class daily service, making the local department a specialty. It is neatly printed and by prompt service they have been able to get a nice list of readers. They have also in connection with the DAILY a WEEKLY paper that is second to none in the State of Indiana. It is an old established paper, and has subscribers on its list that have read the paper for more than a quarter of a century."

—Every newspaper treasures up in its memory the names of its friends and likewise its enemies. It seldom, if ever, overlooks an opportunity to assist the former, but never goes out of its way to boost the later. Human nature is pretty much the same everywhere. People who show the news paper man kindness never make a better investment, or one that more surely pays them a hundred fold sooner or later.

Hickmann, of Monticello, Ga., did. He writes, "For six years I have kept Simmons Liver Regulator in my house and used it in my family and have had no need for a doctor. I have five as healthy children as you can find."

—That advertising in the COURIER pays is evidenced by a letter received by Dr. Nusbaum this morning from J. H. Hornberger. now at Pentz, Pa., inclosing $4 for the doctor's catarhal treatment. Mr. Hornberger is a reader of the COURIER and in his letter says he saw our notice of Dr. Nusbaum fitting up his new suite of offices, and at once forwarded him the amount. It pays everybody to advertise in the DAILY and WEEKLY COURIER.

—The COURIER holds to its undisputed claims as to the Stroh matter. The last issues of the Press and Record seem to feel like keeping up the controversy, however. But the fact remains that Moody, Fair and Stroh used money in their possession that they had no right to use. Of course Stroh's books are all right since he put the money back. And if Moody and Fair could have put the money back, their books would have been all right, too, we suppose. If anyone can show any other difference in the three cases, we would like to hear it.

—Tuesday evening about 8 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Cal Martin of Kendallville, heard a knock at their door, and upon investigation found a bright boy babe about three months old on the doorstep. Pinned to the child's clothing was a note asking them to keep the child, as its mother was a poor, friendless woman with a worthless husband, and unable to care for it. With the aid of Marshal Berhalter the mother of the babe was found yesterday. She proves to be Maggie Bowman, wife of Frank Bowman, and lives in the east part of the city. The Sun says her husband has deserted her, and the mother perhaps thought she was doing the best thing she could for the child. When confronted by the marshal with the charge of having deserted her child she at first denied it, but finally admitted it. The woman is about 25 or 30 years of age, and without means. Mr. and Mrs. Martin may keep the babe.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

PURELY VEGETABLE.

The cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world! An effectual specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen. Regulate the Liver and prevent Chills and Fever, Malarious Fevers, Bowel Complaints, Restlessness, Jaundice and Nausea.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common, as a bad breath; and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite, complexion and general health.

CONSTIPATION

should not be regarded as a trifling affliction—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Two caves of a size to make them important discoveries have just been found in Kentucky. One was in the Chaplain river bottoms, a few miles southwest of Lawrenceburg, and the other on the old Ellis place, near Milldale. The first contains many stone relics, and some distance from the entrance has a nicely furnished room of ordinary dimensions. It is walled with stone that has been dressed and the floor is composed of solid rock. As the Indian never reached a degree of civilization during his existence in the dark and bloody ground that would lead him to construct such a subterranean retreat the work is doubtless that of the prehistoric mound builders. The Webb farm cave also has a huge room and it is said has an iron door at the entrance, indicating its use as a habitation at some time.

Acting on the advice of several high officials who have known the delights of hunting big game in Africa, and who, with reason, apprehended the speedy termination of the larger animals if the reckless slaughter of recent years should not be forbidden, the English government has determined to set apart the coast region of Somaliland as a sort of "elephant sanctuary." Hereafter sportsmen will not be allowed to enter that country except on the understanding that the elephants there must be allowed to live in peace and safety, and that any infraction of the regulation will be severely punished.

LIGHTHOUSE IMPROVEMENTS.

Changes that Have Been Made in Lights and Lenses.

An article about lighthouses, entitled "The Lights that Guide in the Night," is contributed by Lieut. John M. Ellicott to St. Nicholas. After telling of the growth in the number of lighthouses, Lieut. Ellicott says:

"Meantime the means of lighting was being steadily improved. The open fire gave place to the oil lamp; then a curved mirror, called a parabolic mirror, was placed behind the lamp to bring the rays together; next, many lamps with mirrors were grouped about a central spindle and some such lights are still in operation. The greatest stride came when an arrangement of lenses, known as the Fresnel lens, in front of a lamp replaced the mirror behind it. This lens was rapidly improved for lighthouse purposes, until now a cylindrical glass house surrounds the lamp-flame. This house has lens-shaped walls which bend all the rays to form a horizontal zone of strong light which pierces the darkness to a great distance.

The rapid increase in the number of lighthouses has made it necessary to have some means of telling one from another, or, as it is termed, of giving to each light its "characteristic." Coloring the glass made the light dimmer, but as red comes most nearly to white light in brightness, some lights have red lenses. The latest and best plan, however, is to set upright prisms at intervals in a circular framework around the lens, and to revolve this frame by clockwork. Thus the light is made to flash every time a prism passes between it and an observer. By changnumber and places of the prisms, or the speed of the clockwork, the flashes for any one light can be made to occur at intervals of so many seconds for that light. Putting in red prisms gives still other changes. The searchlight has its "characteristic," and this is written down in signs on the charts, and fully stated in the light-lists carried by vessels. Thus, on a chart you may note that the light you want to sight is marked "F. W., v. W., Fl., 10-sec.," which means that it is "fixed white varied by white flashes every ten seconds." When a light is sighted you see if those are its characteristics; and if so, you have found the right one.

The Greatest Problem for Women.

Discussing the solution of "Women's Most Vexing Problem"—domestic service—in the Ladies' Home Journal, Edward W. Bok insists that, "first of all, women must drop a lot of outside problems with which they are at present grappling, but which, after all, only indirectly concern them. Important they may be, in a general sense, but not one-hundredth part as important as is this problem which is exclusively theirs. Foreign missions, the ballot, the higher education of women, good government, the amelioration of the poor—it will be well enough for women to labor for all these causes when their own more immediate problems are settled. The servant-girl problem is far more important at present than any of these. Other problems are general in their effects; this one strikes at the very heart of the American home. We do not begin to realize how intimately associated is this problem with our happiness. It concerns every man, woman and child. The heathens in African lands ought to be civilized. No one will dispute that. But true charity begins at home, and we have heathens in a few of our kitchens who need civilizing and educational influences just as much as do the natives of India's coral strand. I have nothing to say against woman's work in foreign missionary societies, good government clubs, or charity organizations of whatever sort. But I do say this, that scores of women are employing efforts in those directions which ought to be employed in the solution of matters nearer home. Women can solve this domestic problem if they will. But they must get together and work unitedly. If they do I venture to say that in a year or two there will be no such thing as the servant-girl problem, for it will have been solved."

The Food that Man Needs.

"As in the daily wear and tear of life a great deal of the substance of a man's body is used up, it is absolutely necessary that the repair to the body be carefully and systematically looked after," writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Then, too, man must create heat and force, according to the climate in which he lives and the occupation he follows. A wise combination of food is, therefore, necessary to keep the body in working order. In cold weather we need a larger amount of carbonaceous foods—fats, sugars and starches—than we do in summer. In the hot climates and during the hot months fruit and green vegetables, containing the salts necessary to keep the blood in good condition, should be used freely. According to our method of living in this country we should take about two parts of repair food, such as meat, eggs, milk, cheese, or, in the vegetable kingdom, the old peas, beans and lentils, to three parts of carbonaceous food, such as white bread, potatoes, rice, butter, cream and fats of all kinds. Then we must have a certain amount of bulky or watery vegetables, such as lettuce, spinach, cabbage, onions, and also the fruits. In making out a daily ration we should have at the beginning of the meal some light dish that may be taken slowly, to prepare the stomach for the food that is to follow, then a meat or its equivalent. With beef we should serve potatoes; with mutton, rice. With chickens, either rice or potatoes."

Guess Who!

There is an old woman, pray, can you guess who?—
With such a bad temper men name her a shrew.
She frets and she scolds, and she storms and she shrieks,
And never old woman had so many freaks.
She'll smile and caress you, perchance for a day,
Then blow you up roundly—for that is her way—
And many good people had rather leave home
Than stay when this surly old woman will come!
Her children behold her with terror and dread,
And hardly dare peep from their warm, cozy bed,
Though brave little Golden-Locks, hardy and bright,
Sometimes ventures out for a taste of sunlight!

Yet such a rare housekeeper never was known;
She sweep the wide earth, every corner and zone;
And this queer old woman, so hated and feared,
Most beautiful children has nurtured and reared.
She carefully hides them away out of sight,
And keeps them by daytime, and guards them by night;
She cradles them gently on earth's tender breast,
And lulls them with breezes from south and from west,
Until their sweet beauty is ripe for display,
When two charming maidens, young April and May,
Call out the dear children to play in the sun,
And then claim the work the old woman has done!

Diary of a Busy Kitten.

A little girl is responsible for the following story:

7 a. m.—Got up and took a little exercise before breakfast. Mistress' work-basket was on the mantelpiece. Didn't think it was in proper order, so tried to set it to rights, but didn't succeed somehow. The whole thing tumbled to the floor and the thread got all tangled around the chair legs. Gave it up as a bad job.

9 a. m.—Got hungry. Tired waiting for the folks to come down, so helped myself to cream, which was not so thick as usual.

10 a. m.—Found my claws needed sharpening. Tried to do it on lace curtains, but the flimsy stuff came to pieces the moment I touched it.

11 a. m.—Time for my nap. Found a comfortable place on top of a large clock. Moved the big vase that stood on top of it out of my way. It fell to the floor and made a terrible racket. Had a fine nap.

2 p. m.—Slept till way past dinner time. They would not give me a bite, so had to find a mouse.

3 p. m.—Succeeded; a fine, fat fellow made me feel good.

4 p. m.—Saw my mother asleep in the sun. Climbed up in a tree and jumped down on her just for fun. She didn't take it that way. Had to run and stay hidden for a long time.

6 p. m.—Saw a bird in the cherry tree that looked as if it had been made on purpose for my supper. Got him.

8 p. m.—Happy at last on this delightful roof. Shall sit here and sing all night long. M-i-a-ow!—San Francisco Call.

Timid as a Rabbit.

It isn't always safe to count on the timidity of a creature that is proverbially timit. Jack, a big, white, lop-eared rabbit, with pink eyes, was one of these exceptions.

Jack was one of the biggest members of his family, and when he didn't want to be picked up by his long ears he would scold and kick and jerk until it took a firm hold to keep him from getting away. At other times he was as gentle as a kitten.

Above everything, Jack hated dogs, and he had a way of charging down upon the biggest of them which often sent them away howling.

When a strange cur came nosing about the place Jack would crouch down in a sulk, with his pink eyes snapping. He would begin to grunt out disapproval, stamping his hind feet hard on the ground.

"Hu-u-u-uh! Hu-u-u-uh!" he would say, spitefully, thumping with his feet. Then, when his anger was worked up, he would lay back his long ears and run in a white streak straight at the prowler. Just before he reached the dog he would spring off the ground and land all four feet into the dog's side.

No dog ever stood that charge. Doubtless they thought that a rabbit wouldn't do such a courageous thing, and when the rabbit did do it they must have thought it some strange animal which they didn't know how to fight.

Jack couldn't have hurt them, of course, but he wasn't afraid to try, and it was just that which won him all his battles. Some dogs in the neighborhood grew so afraid of him that they could not be coaxed to come near him.

But Jack got into bad habits and had to be killed. He had all the apples, potatoes, turnips and carrots that he could possibly want to eat, but he wasn't satisfied. So he began to gnaw the bark from trees and shrubs in the front lawn. He was whipped for it time and again, but after he had ruined a valuable pear tree in the garden he was shot for his disobedience.

When the Blind See.

Supposing you had been born blind, and after living many years shut out from the beautiful things of the world, some skilled surgeon should give back to you your sight, wouldn't you have some marvelous experiences? An old man who had been born blind had his sight thus restored to him. At first he started violently and was afraid of the strange things around him, the hugeness of his room and its contents. One of the first things he saw at the window was a flock of sparrows. "What are they?" asked the physician.

"I think they are teacups," was the reply.

A watch was then shown to him, and he knew what it was, probably because he heard it tick. Later, on seeing the flame of a lamp, he tried to pick it up, not having the slightest idea of its nature.

A Hint Too Late for Mary.

Whenever little Johnny, who is naughty sometimes, is afraid he is going to get a whipping he hides under the bed. He has great confidence in this trick of his.

One day he went to visit his auntie, and in looking around came to the picture of Mary Queen of Scots being beheaded.

"Oh, what's this, Auntie?" he asked.

"That," said auntie, "is Mary, Queen of Scots, and they're going to chop her head off."

"Oh, why does she let them do that?" said Johnny. "Why doesn't she hide under the bed?"—Evening World.

Why We Are Right-Handed.

Primitive man, being naturally an aggressive animal, defended himself against wild beasts with his fists and nails; he fought for his food and his womankind, which his enemies were always trying to take from him. The first movement on being attacked is to endeavor to protect the most exposed and vulnerable part of the body. For the boxer and the fighter the heart is undoubtedly the most vulnerable place. A hard blow in that region may easily kill a man, and consequently primitive man used the right hand to fight with, and the left to protect the heart and to ward off the blows directed to that region. When, therefore, arms of offense and defense were introduced, and replaced teeth and fists, it was the right hand that wielded the sword and lance, while the left held the shield and buckler before the region of the heart. The enormous difference between the use of the right and the left hand in our present civilization has this very simple origin. In the first place the superiority of the right over the left hand was only brought into evidence during a combat, but it soon spread and became universal. Since the introduction of lethal weapons, the right hand became naturally accustomed to the manipulation of the lance, the sword and the knife, and the nerves of the right side soon became more flexible and more under the control of the will than the muscles of the left side.

Sermons of the Week

Labor.—The labor problem is the supreme and irrespressible problem of the world to-day.—Rev. E. R. Dille, Methodist, San Francisco, Cal.

Opportunity.—Life is opportunity. Its worth for us depends largely on our own volition. What the world is for us depends largely on what we are ourselves.—Rabbi Joseph Silverman, Hebrew, New York City.

Sickness and Death.—If sickness and death are according to the will of God, then every physician is a law-breaker and is trying to outwit the will of God.—Rev. R. A. George, Congregationalist, Cleveland.

Liberty.—The despotism and dungeon of yesterday have been succeeded by the school house of to-day. Where was the clank of chains is now heard the shout of liberty.—Rev. Dr. Hillis, Independent, Chicago.

A Precious Relic.—The Bible, neither English nor original, is infallible, but it is divine—human development of infinite value, the most precious relic of the ancient world.—Rev. S. G. Smith, Independent, St. Paul.

Poverty.—We must have security for the home and the family. It is hard for the workingman to think of heaven and the Father when the little one is crying for bread.—Rev. W. D. P. Bliss, Episcopalian, San Francisco.

Motive.—This matter of motives and reasons is a very complicated one in every heart. Often men think they are acting from one motive when really they are influenced by another.—Father Thomas N. Ayeres, Catholic, New Orleans.

Mammon.—There are more men in New York to-day worshiping gold than worshiping God. It has come to pass that men are judged not by their characters, but by the amount of money they are worth.—Rev. D. L. Moody, evangelist, New York City.

Home Life.—Behind the happy domestic life is the happy home. The home is the foundation of pure society and good government. If the home is not what it ought to be, all other society will be injured.—Rev. Dr. Pickard, Baptist, Louisville.

Science.—In the past religion persecuted science, to-day science tries to persecute religion. Theosophy unites these two, and teaches that true science is religion and true religion must be scientific.—E. T. Hargrave, Theosophist, New York City.

Knowledge. — A little knowledge makes us dogmatic, but how humble is the man who really does know something. Knowledge puffs out when it is searched out for itself. The man of the future is not to be one great mass of brain.—Rev. W. P. Faunce, Baptist, New York City.

Power of Love.—The power of love is proverbial. It never fails. It laughs at difficulties. It dares to die. It lives to do. It is the church's greatest strength. Truly, it is the greatest thing in the world.—Rev. J. K. Montgomery, Presbyterian, Cincinnati, O.

God and Nature.—God in the sunrise and in the flower is to us greater than he could be in withering a fig tree at the word of Jesus. And greater in the birth of a babe and in the solemn and beautiful death of an old man than in the resurrection of a child or man.—Rev. W. R. Lord, Unitarian, St. Paul, Minn.

Pessimism Is Death.—Pessimism means death. Believe with Voltaire, the world is a mistake and man's life in it a curse, and you must either destroy yourself, or, lacking the physical courage to do that, linger on a lazy, snarling cynic. It is inevitable.—Rev. T. B. Gregory, Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, Ill.

The Moravian View of Death.

Clifford Howard contributes to the Ladies' Home Journal an interesting article upon the Moravians of Bethlehem, Pa., and their religious customs:

"Upon the death of one of the congregation," he writes, "the event is announced, not by the monotonous, mournful tolling of the bell, but by the deep-breathing, melodious music of trombones, played in the open-belfry steeple of the church by the trombone choir; and as the deep, sweet notes of the familiar hymn are borne to the people below they reverently drop their work to listen. 'Hark!' they whisper, 'the horns are blowing; some one has gone home!' 'Gone home!'—perhaps nothing more beautifully exemplifies the perfect, unquestioning faith of these devout people than that expressive utterance, the sincerity of which is ever demonstrated by the lack of mourning at the passing away of a member of the household, however dearly beloved; so true and heartfelt is the Moravian belief that death is but the entrance to a brighter, happier home. The trombones are also used at the touching funeral services held at the grave; and amid their sad, yet inspiring, strains the departed one is laid to his eternal rest. On all occasions, whether of death or joy, the trombones lend their sweet solemnity in fitting breath. From the steeple they herald the festival day of each of the choirs, and in all open-air services their mellifluous tones are ever present."

"My mither sent me to see if you wad gie her a calendar like the ane you gied to Mrs. Mackay," said a boy to a grocer in the village. "But, my little boy," replied the grocer, "your mother does not get her groceries here." Didn't Know When to Stop.

"Darling," said she, "do you love me as much as ever?"

"Yes, dearie," said he, with his nose buried in his newspaper.

That ought to have satisfied her, but she had to ask "Why?"

Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla the Great Spring Medicine

Scrofulous Sore Leg for 25 Years.

All Spring Humors, sores, eruptions, boils, pimples, etc., are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the "king of medicines." Read these letters:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sirs—After suffering from a sore leg for 25 years, four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla have made a complete cure. My leg would inflame as soon as dog days would come and continue to be sore until spring. Then the sores would heal a little and break out again. I tried doctors and every remedy I could hear of, but all failed. I then heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla and bought one bottle, and it helped me so much that I kept on until I took four bottles; am cured, in good health and weigh 160 lbs." MRS. M. J. FATAL FIFTY-SIX.

Renowned Characters Who Have Passed Away at that Age.

Among the men and women of genius there seems to be a strange fatality connected with the age of 56, says the Atlanta Constitution. Some of the most renowned characters of the world have died on reaching that limit, including Dante, the Italian poet; Hugh Capet, King of France; Henry VIII., King of England; Henry IX., Emperor of Germany; Paganini, Italian violinist; Alexander Pope, English poet; George Sala, English orientalist; Marcus Aurelius, Emperor of Rome; Frederick I., King of Prussia; John Hancock, American statesman; Maria Louisa, Empress of France; Philip Massenger, English dramatist; Saladin, the Great Sultan of Egypt; Robert Stephenson, English engineer; Scipio Africanus, Roman general; Helvetius, French philosopher and author; Henry II., the first of the Plantagenet line; the elder Pliny, Roman naturalist and author; Julius Caesar; Charles Kingsley, English author; Juan Prim, Spanish general and statesman; Henry Knox, American revolutionary general; Thomas Mifflin, American patriot; Von Tromp, Dutch admiral; Abraham Lincoln; Marryat, the novelist; George Whitefield, English founder of Calvinistic Methodism; Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, favorite of Queen Elizabeth; Johann Gasper Spurzheim, German physician and phrenologist, and Frederick II., Emperor of Germany.

Giving Impressively.

There are diversities of giving as well as of gifts. To give a little with a grand air sometimes seems to make more of an impression than to give much modestly. The world has not changed in this respect. Samuel Pepys wrote in his "Diary," in 1660:

There was a great number of merchants and others of good quality (at a dinner) on purpose...to make an offering (to two newly married servants), which, when dinner was done, we did, and I did give ten shillings and no more, though I believe most of the rest did give more, and did believe that I did so, too.

Man, if you are anything, walk alone and talk to others. Do not hide yourself in the chorus.—Epictetus.

A New Point in Insurance.

The ingenuity of some insurance companies in devising ways and means for evading responsibility is equaled by nothing on earth. A claim was recently made against an accident insurance company for indemnity by a physician who had met with an injury in a very peculiar fashion. He had been ill as the result of an accident received some time previous, but was partly recovered. While driving he was seized with a spasm and great exhaustion overcame him. He stepped his horse and proceeded to administer a hypodermic injection of some powerful stimulant to which he resorted in such emergencies. Just as he was about to insert the needle his horse started. The needle was driven deep into the flesh, inflicting a severe and painful injury. He sued for indemnity, he being disabled for twenty-two weeks. The judge dismissed the complaint on the ground that the injury was not caused through external violent and accidental means in the intent and purpose of the policy. This decision will strike the average thinking individual as somewhat peculiar. If a mishap due to the sudden starting of a horse is not an accident, it might be interesting to know how the word could be defined.

Tennyson and His Pipes.

During the past season much has been written about Li Hung Chang's method of smoking. The peculiarity in this habit of one nearer and dearer to us—Tennyson—is decidedly unique. A writer says of the great poet:

"The common clay pipe was his choice. His den was at the top of the house. When he sat down to work in the morning a huge tobacco-jar, big enough for an ancestral urn, was at his feet, together with a box full of white clay pipes. Filling one of these he smoked until it was empty, broke it in twain, and threw the fragments into another box prepared for their reception. Then he pulled out a fresh pipe, filled it, smoked it, and destroyed it as before. He would not smoke a pipe the second time."

Horrid Torture.

This is often felt in every joint and muscle of the body by turns, by people who, experiencing the earliest twinges of rheumatism, neglect to arrest the malady, as they may easily do, with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a professionally authenticated remedy for the agonizing complaint. Recollect that rheumatism unchecked often lasts a lifetime, or abruptly terminates it when the malady attacks the heart. The Bitters also remedies chills and fever, dyspepsia and liver complaint.

Oft Repeated.

One of the most remarkable echoes in the world is that produced by the suspension bridge across the Menai Strait. The sound of a blow with a hammer on one of the main piers is returned in succession from each of the cross beams which support the roadway, in addition to which the sound is many times repeated between the water and the roadway, at the rate of twenty-eight times in five seconds.

WISE ADVICE TO HUSBANDS.

Those Who Have Ailing Wives Will do Well to Accept It.

Do not wrangle and quarrel, and finally rush into the courts and try to get a separation from your faithful wife; but just stop a moment and think! Your wife, who was even-tempered and amiable, and all that was lovely when you married her, has changed. Now she is peevish, irritable, jealous, discontented and miserable—in a word, she has uterine disorder of some kind.

Law is not the remedy for this condition, she needs medical treatment, her uterine system is at fault.

My advice to you is, sit down and write a letter to that friend of women, Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., state fully and freely the whole case to her and she will honestly advise you what to do. Give your wife that chance, good man!

If you do not wish to write about your wife, bring her a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, watch its effects, you will soon see the beginning of the improvement; then get her another and keep it up until she is restored to you, the same lovely woman you married years ago.

Following we relate the circumstances of a case of this nature. Mrs. MELVA ROUTON, of Camby, Ind., says.

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be of great benefit to me. The doctors said I had womb trouble. I had the headache all the time, also a terrible backache, was nervous, cross and irritable. I looked so pale that people would ask me what was the matter. I suffered in this way for about four years, until one day about in despair my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I commenced its use, and much to every one's surprise, it cured me. It has completely changed my disposition for the better also. Several of my neighbors, knowing what the Pinkham medicine has done for me, are taking it, and are much pleased with the result."

CHARLES W. SPALDING.

recover the collateral placed with them by Spalding. Ex-Treasurer Spalding declared in a star-chamber meeting that he was obliged to hypothecate the university bonds in order to meet the drafts of the university for current expenses. Spalding brands as false and malicious the charges that have been made against him, declaring that the Globe savings depositors will be paid in full.

Unless a loan is negotiated by the trustees of the University of Illinois, an appropriation is made by the State Legislature or money is given to the institution it will be compelled to close its doors. It develops that Bank Examiner Hayden advised State Auditor Gore as early as Jan. 9, 1897, to close the Globe Savings Bank.

The above, briefly stated, comprise the chief developments in one of the most gigantic financial scandals in the history of Illinois. In connection with the matter has been a great deal of gossip concerning Spalding's relations with Miss S. Louise Ervin, a stenographer in the bank. This alliance broke up Spalding's home and caused the retirement two years ago of two officials from the Globe Savings Bank. A feeling of dread for the inevitable outcome led Vice-President Cilley and Cashier Jackson to resign their respective positions within three days of each other in the spring of 1895. Horatio N. Cilley said: "The chief motive impelling me was a conviction on my part that Mr. Spalding's relations with Miss Ervin would end disastrously both for his business interests and his reputation socially. I always found him honest and capable in every business transaction, but his conduct as regarded Miss Ervin, leading to his estrangement from his wife and family, was being unfavorably commented on and undermined the confidence and regard of even his lifelong friends. Those matters reacted on his business relations." Charles Jackson resigned the cashier's desk of the Globe a few days after Mr. Cilley quit the vice-presidency. Mr. Jackson very frankly admitted that he resigned his place in the Globe Bank solely because he knew that Spalding's relations with Miss Ervin would ultimately ruin the bank president.

CHILDREN GET MARRIED.

Youthful Couple Who Eloped Receive the Parental Blessing.

Perhaps the youngest couple united in marriage in this country are Ada Bird, the 14-year-old daughter of a wealthy publisher in Atlanta, and John P. Atkinson, the 16-year-old son of Gov. W. Y. Atkinson of Georgia. The youthful bridegroom is private secretary to his father and draws a salary of $1,200. When the amorous relations between him and Miss Bird were discovered an effort was made to break them off and the young lady was sent to relatives at Aylmer. Here young Atkinson followed her and the couple eloped and were married at Kingston by a justice of the peace. After their elopement and before their marriage the families of the couple made every effort to prevent the performance of the ceremony, but in vain. The situation was then accepted by the parents of the youthful groom and bride and a second ceremony—a religious one—was performed.

MR. AND MRS. J. P. ATKINSON.

FIRST BLOOD FOR THE PEOPLE.

Indianapolis Street Car Company Comes to Time.

A new Indiana law provided a 3-cent street car fare for Indianapolis, and prescribed severe penalties for its violation by the company. The first day of the new law's effect hundreds of passengers tried to ride for three cents, but were ejected from the cars. Riots and tie-ups were the order of the day, but the second day the company announced that it would accept three cents as fare until the courts could decide upon the legality of the new law.

The proclamation of Gov. Mount was issued declaring the laws of the last session of the Legislature in force, and the people who patronize the street car lines supposed that the company would at least obey the 3-cent fare law until an injunction could be secured from the courts. The more cautious, however, were careful to secure the exact three cents in change before boarding the cars, and at all the uptown drug stores and groceries nickels were rapidly exchanged for pennies, and thus equipped the wound-be beneficiaries entered the cars.

At every tender of a 3-cent fare the conductors resolutely refused to accept it, and when told that the 3-cent fare law was in force they stolidly declared that they knew no law except that issued by the company, and it demanded a 5-cent fare. Many of the passengers became indignant, denouncing the company and declared that it was an outrage, but the conductor stood with hand extended for his fare and another grasping the bell rope ready to stop the car and put the passenger off if his demand was not complied with.

One of the parties, consisting of twenty young men, which was organized to take an excursion over the city, boarded a North Illinois car, and when the illegal fare was demanded refused either to pay or leave the car. A squad of road police was called and presented such a formidable array that the excursionists left the car.

Judge Cox of the police court was one of the victims of a futile attempt to get a ride for three cents. He refused to get off the car and was caught by the conductor and motorman and ejected after a struggle in which his fingers were badly smashed. The company was no respecter of persons, and men, women and children alike were ejected from the cars upon refusal to pay the illegal fare.

Friday morning the city administration was getting ready to arrest every conductor who ejected a passenger for not paying five cents, and strong hints at receivership and cancellation of charter had been made by the Mayor, when the company backed down.

There were riotous scenes in some of the streets downtown, however, preceding the surrender. The company had repeated verbal instructions to conductors to pay no attention to the law fixing fares at three cents, and had posted in the barns a glaring notice that 5-cent fares should be collected.

Street car employes were more savage in their efforts to enforce this order than they were the day before, and frequently came in contact with men who were determined not to pay more than the legal fare. In some instances citizens went to the help of passengers. In one case this led to a hand-to-hand and foot-to-foot fight. Windows were broken from the car and one citizen was kicked. Police Superintendent Colbert arrested one conductor for putting a blind man off a car, but otherwise there was no police interference. The county grand jury was called together and instructed to investigate the violations of law by the company and its employes.

SIGNS OF AN AIRSHIP EXPLOSION

Citizens of Pavilion, Mich., Hear a Mysterious Noise.

Since the airship was seen by residents of Chicago reports from a large number of other points indicating that it has been seen by great numbers of persons have been received. The most startling report comes from Pavilion, Mich., where it is claimed that an airship, while passing over the town, exploded. Not only was the flash of an explosion seen, but the noise resulting was heard by a large number of reputable citizens.

The airship was traveling at a rapid rate, when there was a loud report, and the lights that had been visible at each end were extinguished. The machine disappeared, and, it is expected, was blown into atoms. Carpenters engaged in shingling a house beneath the point at which the ship was seen to explode assert that when they resumed work the following morning the roof was covered with innumerable particles that looked as though they had fallen from above during the night.

Telegrams from Madison, Wis., assert that several railroad men who have been at Baraboo recently are sure the airship was simply a circus advertising scheme. They believe it was controlled by cables and that it was in reality nothing more than something on the order of the stationary balloon that was seen at the World's Fair.

Reports from Macoupin County, Ill., however, say an airship has been seen at several points in the county, alighting at two places and resuming its journey when delegations started in the direction of the point where it alighted in order to inspect it. These reports say the ship traveled at the rate of thirty miles an hour at least, and that it seemed to be under complete control of those in charge of it. Other points at which an airship has been seen are Emporia, Kan., Wabash and Muncie, Ind., Perry, Okla., and Palmyra and Ripon, Wis.

PLEURISY.

A Case of Several Years' Duration Yields Promptly to Treatment.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

Miss Bertha Evans is a resident of Greensburg, Ind. She has the ruddy glow of health in her plump cheeks, and does not look like one who had ever experienced a day of sickness. But the facts are she has seen and experienced sickness for several years. The news has reached this paper that Miss Evans had been cured, and to verify the rumor a reporter called on Miss Evans. "Why, yes, sir," said she, as a timid blush arose to her cheeks, "it is quite true that I have been cured of my awful sickness, and my life saver was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My trouble was pleurisy, and I feel that it was only a miracle that I was cured. In my early childhood I was as strong as any of the girls. When I reached the age of 12, as I was developing into womanhood, the disease was contracted, owing to a cold and exposure.

"It was in the winter that I first began ailing," said she, "and after the disease set in it was more than three years before I passed through a day in which I felt really well. I began growing worse and had to quit school. I immediately began receiving treatment from our family physician. Living was only perpetual misery to me. My appetite failed me, and I dwindled away to a skeleton. Several of the best physicians were consulted, and took charge of my case, but all said I was incurable. I began trying some patent medicines recommended to me by neighbors, but with no avail. I had about given up in despair when an interested friend brought me a copy of the New Era, containing a testimonial of a girl who had been cured of a case very similar to mine by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to try them. The first box helped me greatly, and I continued taking them according to directions. I kept on taking them till I used about eleven boxes, when I was in as good health as ever, and although that was nearly two years ago I have not been sick a day since. Too much praise cannot be given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

Her mother indorsed every word, saying that she cheerfully recommends the medicine to all her suffering friends.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Work the Best Charity.

Charity, that which is comprehended in the bestowing of money, food and the other necessaries of life, may be well enough in cases of the sick, aged and infirm, and in emergencies where men are hungry and cold, but a stalwart man accepting alms day after day is a pitiful spectacle, and one to be deplored by angels and men. Surely there is in this great country work enough to do and money enough with which to pay for it. Surely there are interested persons enough to see that such money and work are judiciously bestowed.

Ripans·Tabules

"I used to feel at about 11 o'clock that something had gone wrong with my breakfast. Especially was this true if I had had a restless night, as you know is not an uncommon thing with head-workers. My stomach," continued he, "is under the standard as to strength and it used to seem at those times to act only indifferently and sometimes to even stop work. Clouds would come before my vision and then a slight nausea would be felt. Years of that sort of thing had made me know the symptoms as well as I know my name, but since I learned about Ripans Tabules I have practically overcome the difficulty and it is not often that any one gets as enthusiastic over anything as I do over them. Nowadays, whenever I recognize the old familiar symptom,

DOWN GOES ONE OF THE BLESSED LITTLE CONCENTRATED BOONS,

And in a few minutes the visual clouds lift, discomfort passes away, my stomach apparently resumes its operations and at half past six o'clock I go out for my usual rather hearty luncheon—all in delightful contrast with my former practically ruined afternoons which I used vainly to seek to escape by fasting and various doses."

A COMMUNICATION.

Auburn, Ind., April 4 1897.

MR. EDITOR:—

Last week's COURIER contained an article from some party stating that two thousand dollars per month is sent away from Auburn, to foreign life insurance companies, and as the Editor states he will be glad to receive further communications on the subject, I wish to write a short article in reply. The author of the article referred to assumes that the sum stated, actually goes out of our town each month for which nothing has been returned; therefore it is one of the chief causes of the scarcity of money. Now according to the best information abtainable in my judgement not more than half that amount leaves our town monthly for life insurance. The average sent out monthly for the past year by the Ancient Order of United Workman, on a membership of 107 was a little less than two hundred and eleven dollars, and this is perhaps the leading Fraternal Beneficiary order of the town, there may be one other its equal but all the others have a much smaller membership with correspondingly less money sent away, so that the estimate made in the article referred to, must be much too high.

Again the maximum yearly assessment of the A. O. U. W. is twenty seven dollars. (I have now been a member for ten years and the assessments have never exceeded twenty-six, and that only once in all that time, on two thousand dollars of protection.) The average for the ten years being twenty three dollars and fifty-nine cents. But suppose a man kept up his membership in the order for thirty years and paid the maximum in assessments every year he would only pay in eight hundred and ten dollars and his beneficiaries would get two thousand dollars, which would not be a bad thing to leave them, and the practical man can see no surer way of providing for his loved ones, neither any easier way, as this is met in small monthly payments at actual cost of protection, and the industrious careful man does not need to deprive himself or family of the necessary things that make life pleasant, or himself and family comfortable, besides he has the satisfaction every day, that whatever accident may befall him his loved ones are provided for.

In proof of this we have only to call to mind those who have thus been provided for in our town where the money was returned in larger sums then it was sent away. To the families of the following of our brothers who have been called hence.

Lamport, Sheehan, Grogg and Huselman, also to the family of McClellan of our sister order, the K. O. T. M. Each of the above received the sum of two thousand dollars, which came very opportune.

The article also suggests that a local organiaztion be formed here of all the orders and keep our money at home but experience has shown that this is not practical as our number would be so small that assessments would have to be larger and more difficult to meet or a reserve fund accummulated to lie idle and be a tempation to dishonest officials, while under present arrangements we only pay as the money is needed to disburse in paying death losses. But perhaps we have said enough along this line as our frend suggests there are other causes for for the scarcity of money, we will briefly notice what we think is one of the causes, namely the use of tobabco, especially cigars. The average smoker is said to use about five per day which at five cents each, costs twenty-five cents or one dollar and seventy-five cents per week, or seven dollars per month, the rent of a good house, or eighty-four dollars a year. Enough to pay for two thousand dollars protection as shown above, and all the fuel needed by any ordinary family for a year. Then beside the smoke of tobacco is offensive to many people, but the habit of smoking has become so prevalent that the pure air which a kind Creator intended for all, is so polluted with the fumes of the burning weed that one must go to the windward side of the town to get a breath of pure air, just as if one half the people had a right to puff smoke in the faces of the other half whether agreeable or not. Then at the estimate we have made of eighty-four dollars per year (and it will be conceeded by all that many exceed that sum) suppose a man continues the habit for thirty years, he would puff away in smoke the neat sum of over $2,500. Money worse than wasted, as the chances are that his health is ruined and his breath has been offensive to his loved ones for years, and likely in all that time he could not afford to carry any protection for his family because money was so scarce and when called away leaves them in needy circumstances. We have cited but a single case but when you observe the number of smokers that you meet on the street, and on every hand, and think of the twenty-five or more places in Auburn where cigars are sold, and the number sold. Is it strange why money is scarce with some men? This money is kept at home, and what is the return from it? Polluted air all around and as stated above likely poor health and bad breath when all is finished.

On the other hand the returns from money spent for life insurance is a competency for the loved ones left when we are gone. Reader which will you invest in?

Broken Chain

The family circle is never so happy after the chain is broken and a link taken. Some family chains are strong, others weak. Have you a good family history? Or is there a tendency to coughs, throat or bronchial troubles, weak lungs? Has a brother, sister, parent or near relative had consumption? Then your family chain is weak. Strengthen it. Take SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It makes rich blood, gives strength and vigor to weak lungs and run-down constitutions. With its aid the system throws off acute coughs and colds. It prevents the chain from breaking.

Shall we send you a book about this, free?

NO STATE ENCAMPMENT

Will be Held at Fairview Park, This Year.

Indianapolis Sun.

The Indiananapolis girls who enjoyed the love-making of the soldier boys at Fairview park, last summer, while the encampment of the Indiana National Guard was held, will be sorely disappointed to learn that there will be no encampment this year. This conclusion was reached, the other day, when Gen. McKee and Adjt.-Gen. Gore held a conference with the governor. The adjutant-general is going to issue a general order one of these days. He was anxious that the world should wait for this to learn the conclusion that the military conference reached, but it leaked out. Inasmuch as the fate of the state or nation is not at stake, the announcement at this time will not turn the tide of a battle.

A deficit led to the decision that no encampment shall be held. It amounts to something like $6,000. The authorities in the past did not keep the expenses within the appropriation, which was not large enough to care for the soldiers that attended the encampment each year. Instead of the encampment, this summer, the money appropriated will be devoted to mustering and equipping new companies and for re-equipping the old ones.

THE C. E. RALLY.

The county meeting of the Christian Endeavor to-day, was well attended and full of interest. There were a large number from Ashley, Waterloo, Butler, Garrett and other places, and the work done was of a high order both from a religious and a literary point of view. The program was changed a little. Mr. Brosy's work was in the afternoon, and Mr. Minnick, of Corunna was not present. Except these, all the work of the forenoon was full. Those in the forenoon's work were, Clara McClellan, Mary Teeters, Miss Troyer and Miss Schultz of Butler.

Afternoon came the devotional work, conducted by Frank Reed. This was followed by the Junior work in charge of Miss VanDoren. Pearl Sprott with her guitar and Earl Calkin with his violin, played for a few minutes, and then the little folks marched to the platform and gave their exercises, which were very nice. The three little colored Endeavors, were greatly admired for their bright ways.

Miss Yeagy of Waterloo, then took charge, and those in her division did fine work. Miss Mabel Cass of Ashley read sweetly. Aileen and Helen Garwood, two or the young "sweet singers of Israel" sang each an appropriate piece. They are always nice and never fail. We wish to commend them and Mabel Cass, Edith Trout and some others whose names have escaped us, on the correct and distinct character of reading and singing. All the exercises we heard were excellent and we hardly know whom to praise most, the little ones or their leaders. The church full was all day.

GARRETT'S NEW INDUSTRY.

The queerest industry in this part of the country is one that is about to open up at Garrett. It is the gathering and curing of moss for bedding horses. About a mile south of the town is a tamarac swamp, that has for some years been owned by Mr. Spangler, now a resident of Auburn Junction. It has been discovered that this swamp is filled with moss several feet deep, and of a peculiar quality. No other such bed of moss is known to exist in this part of the country and as it is a very desirable bedding for horses, it is much sought after. In this case, a company has been organized in which the two Moughlers whose home was originally near Butler, and some parties in Chicago, we believe, are the stockholders. It is known as the Moughler Bolton Co and they have bought ten acres of the swamp, paying for it $800 or $80 an acre. On the hard land near by they have secured a lease of an acre and a half of land, on which to put up sheds and other suitable buildings in which to dry and store the moss. After it is properly cured, it will be baled the same as hay, and shipped to Chicago and other markets. We are told it is worth $30 a ton. Its peculiar quality is that when spread over a stable floor several inches deep, it will not have to be replaced for several months, but will continue dry and nice for bedding. The company expects to go to work at once. We learn these facts from L. J. Gengler of Garrett, who Tuesday forenoon, drew up the papers by which the land for sheds etc was leased.

Several years ago, the editor of this paper, then a resident of Waterloo, called attention to the peculiar vegetable growths of this swamp. Passing by it in a warm winter day, our attention was attracted by the purple appearance given the swamp by a growth of small slender bushes greatly resembling the "heather" so much spoken of by travelers in Scotland, and by Scottish writers. The whole swamp was lovely with it. So we walked out into the swamp some distance and gathered some, which we took home, and kept for some time. In walking through the swamp among this purple heather and tamarac trees, we noticed the soft, spongy and apparently very deep moss over which we were passing. It yielded to the foot so much deeper, sinking down several inches and the pressure. It was peculiar and we remarked at the time we knew of no such singular swamp in all we ever investigated. The conversation with Mr. Gengler recalled this incident of years ago. We hope the enterprising firm may make some money out of it.

BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT.

ANGOLA, April 15, (Special):—Last evening occurred one of the most brilliant and sociable events in the history of the M. E. church of Angola. The Martha Society of the church, 165 strong, tendered a reception at the church and banquet at the Armory hall. Over 300 people sat down at the table at once, and the spread was served in three courses by the Epworth Leaguers, amid numerous toasts and music by Freygang's orchestra. The press and clergy of the town were all represented. This was the twelfth birthday anniversary of the society and the eleventh anniversary. The society has cleared $941 in cash. The Marthas of Angola are worthy the praise they receive.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN,

But For the Timely Discovery a Conflagration Prevented.

At about 6:30 this morning the alarm of fire was sounded and the department made the run to the Eckhart Carriage Factory. Here a small blaze was ignited on the east side of the factory. A broken brick in the chimney just opposite the flue, allowed the flames from a hot fire to escape and as the chimney was built against the siding, the fire was easily started. The men at the factory used the patent fire extinguishers freely and by the time three were emptied the fire was out. The fire department could be of no service out there as there was no cistern in reach of the factory. But only three members of the company got around in time to go with the ladder wagon. They were Al Umber, Clint and Alva Potter.

CLEMENS WOLF.

NEXT REUNION.

Rev. W. L. Meese will have another reunion this summer, not just like the one last year, but just as interesting. It will be a reunion of those who have been converted under his ministry, and will also include all who received their first effective impressions in that direction from him and his teachings and example. The nature of this reunion will be better understood, if we give a brief bit of history.

Twenty years ago last winter in 1877, Mr. Meese, then a licensed preacher but comparatively new in the ministry, held a protracted meeting at the Sugar Grove school house southwest of Auburn Junction. The meeting was very successful, and no doubt had much to do with turning his thoughts to what afterwards became a labor of love, the saving of his fellow men, through the assistance, of these protracted meetings, campmeetings and the like. As a result of this meeting be organized a class, or church, and it is to celebrate the organization of this church, that the coming anniversary is for. It could not well be held at the original date, in winter, as Mr. Meese's health was at that time very poor, and besides, it is best to have it as a grove meeting, one of the kind he has made so interesting and successful. So that is what it will be, and the date is fixed at June 10, and will likely continue a week or ten days. At this meeting it is hoped to reunite all the "charter members" of that early church and as many more of later converts as possible. And everybody will be welcome, just as they were at the "matrimonial reunion" of last year. The matrimonial reunion if held this year, will probably be at Auburn, August 19.

EARLY DISPATCHES.

War news sent from the northern part of Greece at 9 a. m. reaches Chicago, at about 1:30 a. m. of that morning, or as we often say, "in the night" before. Our daily papers are setting type at 1:30 in the morning, giving the result of a battle that did not end till 7 hours and 20 minutes later, or 9 a. m. in Greece. But Larissa, Greece is in about longitude 22 east of Greenwich, and Chicago is about 88 west, giving a difference of longitude of 110 degrees, and of time, of about 7 hours and 20 minutes. In other words, the day begins in Greece over seven hours before it does in Chicago. While we are in the middle of our sleep, they are up doing their forenoon's work, or as now, fighting.

A LITTLE OFF.

"A candy factory is one of the talked of new industries at Auburn. Seven hundred and fifty kinds of candy will be manufactured, to be sold at wholesale and retail. Avburn builds tots of factories on paper."—St. Joe News.

Bro Olds is a little off in insinuating that our new industries are built on paper. All the new factories any of the papers in this city have mentioned, are here and running full blast. He should take a day off and come up and visit Auburn's many manufacturing indurtries, and especially the candy factory where he could see the many different kinds of candy.

SAW THE AIRSHIP.

Between eight and nine o'clock last evening Chas. Fisher claimed to have seen the marvel of the age. It presented itself to him as having the shape of a cigar and was made visible by two green lights. At first sight it appeared to be nearing the earth, but before he could locate it again, it had vanished from his view. The sight was witnessed by a number of people from the north end.

DEDICATED.

The Oddfellows of Salem Center, Steuben county, dedicated their new hall at that place yesterday afternoon. The dedicatory address was given in the Block church by Elder C. S. Medbury, of the Christian church of Angola, which was one of the profoundest and most impressive ever given in Northern Indiana. After the address, the initiatory work was consummated in the new hall, there being nineteen candidates. The work of initiation occupied the time from 9:30 until after 12:00. Angola lodge was represented by thirty members. Wolcottville, Orland, Metz and other lodges were also represented. The Oddfellows of Salem Center may well feel proud of their new and commodious hall, as it is pronouncey by all to be one of the finest in this part of the state.

A True Remedy.

W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We wont keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you for just as good as Dr. King's new Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record for cures; besides, is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store,

HIGH WATER.

On the Mississippi as Seen by an Auburn Man.

Leaving Rock Island 4:30 p. m. April 19, the trip down the river of nearly one hundred miles on one of the big boats to Burlington, Iowa, was one of delight. The day was clear, but soon the shades of night came with charming sunset, throwing beautiful tints upon sky and vast spreading waters which resembled a sea of glass or one great mirror. But there is another side open to view which is more unpleasant to contemplate. In many places the river is 5 to 12 miles in width and all to be seen above water are the tops of trees and roofs of houses.

There are inhabitants who have been driven out the second time this spring, and in some instances people have been drowned. Great suffering among the poor. their homes and effects being carried away by the strong currents.

Stock and wild animals are often corralled on an Island of an acre, more or less, sometimes on the tops of stacks of hay which sometimes is but a foot or two above the water, cows, sheep, horses, hog, chickens. turkeys, geese, ducks, rats, ground hogs, foxes and turtle doves, all congregate in one (uncommon) family, some happy, while others are ashamed of their company and appear to disadvantage, there being more in members than in time of the flood of old when Noah made provision for but two of a kind. The railroads are under water in places but usually from one to four feet above. This hurriedly written while awaiting train for Galesburg, Ills, although most of your readers have doubtless read of these great floods elsewhere. A word from this source may come just in time to fill up that open space. This leaves me in excellent health, with kind regards.

My Baby.

CANTON, O., 2-26-'98—Hand Medicine Co.—"My baby had been having wind colic since her birth and she was two months old when I procured a bottle of Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. In less than two weeks' time she was cured of having colic and has never had it since. We had tried several other medicines, but they did no good. I can cheerfully recommend your colic cure to be the best. Mrs. F. H. Rock," Sold by Fischler & Son, 25c.

Knocked Out.

The three-cent fare law for Indianapolis city railways has been declared unconstitutional, because it is not "general" in its application. Though it says it is to apply to "all cities having over 100,000 inhabitants," it is well known that only Indianapolis has that many. So as it would apply to but one city, it is thrown out. We are sorry, for we believe the law a good one, and it would have been a benefit to the people. We also believe that it would still be profitable to the company.

—Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Campbell have been keeping a record of the number of snows that fell and the amount each time during the past winter. They find that snow has fallen on fifty-four days; the first snow falling on Oct. 17, 1896, and the last on April 16, 1897, almost six months apart, so that snow has laid on the ground at various times during one half of the year. The total amount that has fallen measures four and one-half feet, the deepest snow falling on any one day was in February, six and one-half inches.—Albion New Era.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, and Commerce, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

TURKS DISMAYED.

Greeks Hold the Invaders at Tyrnavo, and the Porte Is Alarmed.

Edhem Pasha's failure to take Tyrnavo Saturday was a defeat. Midnight came with the opposing armies occupying practically the same ground that they had in the morning.

With greatly inferior forces the Greeks had repulsed the Turkish assaults. This is regarded in Constantinople as in the highest degree disastrous to the Turkish campaign, as it is officially stated that Edhem Pasha is to be superceded by Osman Pasha, the hero of Plevna.

While Prince Constantine with the main army is holding the Turkish advance, Col. Manos, with the second Greek division, is sturdily fighting his way toward Janina, which is one of the Turkish bases of supplies, Salonica being the other.

Manos' orders are, it is believed, to reduce Janina, cut off supplies for Edhem Pasha's army, and then, returning through Milouna Pass, to attack Edhem's forces in the rear.

Several Turkish strongholds lie in Col. Manos' path, and his course will be slow at best, granting that he does not unexpectedly meet with a crushing defeat.

Predictions are not lacking here that Edhem Pasha's army of less than 40,000 men will never emerge from its present position save as a beaten and captured body.

Double Tragedy.

John H. Raap was shot and killed in his wholesale liquor house, 572 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, by his confidential clerk, G. W. Breunschweig. The murderer afterward killed himself. The murder and suicide occurred in Raap's private offices, in the presence of Philip Solomon and a Deputy Sheriff, who had a capias for Breunschweig's arrest on a charge of embezzlement. Some time ago Breunschweig was found to be about $2,500 short in his accounts. Criminal action was brought against him, but he eluded the officers and went to Raap asking a meeting for the purpose of effecting a compromise. This was arranged and a Deputy Sheriff was asked to be present ready to arrest Breunschweig.

Attorney's Sudden Call.

Hezekiah Daily, a well-known attorney of Indianapolis, Ind., while seated at his home, engaged in reading, suddenly remarked to his wife: "I feel faint."

Before she could rise he collapsed and fell to the floor a corpse. The death was due to heart failure. He was a prominent member of the Indianapolis bar for twenty-eight years.

Assassins Abroad.

An attempt was made to assassinate the King of Italy recently.

An attempt has also been made to assassinate the President of Uruguay, Senor Jidiarte Borda. He was shot at by the would-be assassin but the bullet missed its mark. The President's assailant was arrested.

Political.

It is reported on high authority that Judge W. R. Day of Canton, is to be appointed Assistant Secretary of State. This is the outcome of the fight by Foraker on Bellamy Storer. Storer is to be appointed Minister to Belgium, it is said.

Overlooked Four Thousand.

Five masked men broke into the residence of John Quinlan at Niles, Ohio, and after gagging and binding him, ransacked the house and secured $1,200 in currency, besides lots of valuable jewelry. They overlooked $4,000 more in the house.

Russia Ready to Act.

Paris special: Le Journal's correspondent at Odessa telegraphs that all the necessary measures have been taken at Sebastopol for the eventual intervention of Russia in the war between Turkey and Greece.

Bubonic Plague.

Bombay special: The total of the cases of bubonic plague here up to date is 11,706. There have been 10,020 deaths from that disease. Many of the inhabitants of Bombay are now returning to the city.

Gen. Miles Wants to See the War.

General Miles has applied for permission to go to Greece to observe the war between that country and Turkey, from a military point of view. The war may be over before the President acts.

Colonel Mosby Hurt.

Col. John S. Mosby was thrown from a buggy at the University of Virginia, Richmond, Va., and received a cut which may seriously injure one eye.

Colored Man Lynched.

Joseph McCoy, colored, was lynched at Alexandria, Va., for an outrage on his employer's two daughters.

Advance the Price of Window Glass.

At a special meeting of the national executive committee of the Western Window Glass Company and the Pittsburgh Window Glass Company, held at Chicago, an advance of 5 per cent. was declared on all window glass in all parts of the country, to take effect May 3.

The Flood Subsiding.

News from points along the Mississippi River show the situation growing easier. The water is falling everywhere and the flooded districts are being relieved on the overflow.

EASTERN.

The Pennsylvania Board of Pardons has recommended a commutation of the death sentence imposed on Actor James B. Gentry for the murder of Madge Yorke.

"Aunt" Hannah Chard, New Jersey's famous centenarian, held her usual reception at the residence of her son, Joel, in Ferrell, in honor of her one hundred and eighth birthday. Joel, a lad of 71 summers, was master of ceremonies, and William, her baby, aged 66, saw that the inner wants of the visitors were supplied. The family rounded up included three sons, thirty-three grandchildren, ninety-seven great-grandchildren and twenty great-great-grandchildren. In addition hundreds of residents of the country for miles around called to pay their respects to the venerable centenarian.

The famous hat trimmings case, which involved between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, which has been postponed from time to time for the last three years, was finally decided in favor of the Government by a jury in the United States Court at Philadelphia Tuesday afternoon. The suit was brought as a test case by Meyer & Dickinson, big importers of that city, who sought to recover from the United States a difference of 30 per cent in customs duties. The firm's contention was that the importations in question consisted solely of hat trimmings, on which the duty under the McKinley tariff act was only 20 per cent, but the Federal officials in their argument maintained that the merchandise was used chiefly for dresses and dress trimmings, and that the duty of 50 per cent levied by the Government was proper. Meyer & Dickinson were nominally the plaintiffs, but there were hundreds of big importing firms throughout the country who were interested in the outcome of the suit and who were instrumental in procuring the best obtainable counsel.

WESTERN.

The British cruiser Talbot arrived at New York Monday morning from Jamaica to represent the British Government in the naval display at the Grant monument celebration. Just before passing the Narrows the Talbot saluted Fort Wadsworth. The royal sugar commissioners were on board the Talbot.

News has reached Red Cliff, Colo., of a bad snowslide in Eagle River canyon. Frank Larsaloc and Ernest Kemp are dead and their bodies have been recovered, and it is supposed three more men are buried in the avalanche. The slide occurred at Highland Mary mine up Girard mountain, opposite Rock Creek.

George Hobson, clerk of the courts for Hamilton County, O., and for many years county recorder, was found wandering about the streets of Cincinnati. He is at the hospital and is pronounced hopelessly insane. He was the chief lieutenant of George B. Cox, the recognized Republican boss, and had for years himself been one of the most prominent politicians in the city.

The business portion of the town of Berea, O., was nearly wiped out by fire Monday morning. The high winds prevailing made it almost impossible to check the flames which threatened to encompass the entire town. The heaviest losses are on the Shumway block and the Miller block, which will aggregate $20,000 each. The total loss will reach $80,000. The other losses range from $5,000 to $12,500 each. Berea has no water works, so there was small hope of saving the town. A detachment of the Cleveland fire department with fourteen men, secured water from a branch of the river, about a quarter of a mile from the town. The contents of most of the stores were saved by the efforts of citizens. The cause of the fire was attributed to tramps, and Deputy Sheriff J. E. Asling escorted three of them out of town at the point of a revolver. To add to the excitement a dog went mad and bit several people before it was shot. The fire was got under control at noon.

The trial of the only remaining issue in the Fair case has been begun at San Francisco. Instead of a contest over the whole estate and a struggle for $20,000,000, it is a fight for $1,000,000, the case having narrowed down to a legal battle over the two pieces of real estate which Mrs. Nettie Craven says Senator Fair conveyed to her by pencil deeds a few weeks prior to his death. The administration and heirs have for the time forgotten their disagreements, and in this account have joined against Mrs. Craven, whom they regard as a common enemy. After considerable discussion by the attorneys the court announced that the question at issue was the alleged forgery of the deeds. This issue had been raised by the answer of the administrators to Mrs. Craven's cross-complaint, and in so far as the complaint of Miss Virginia Fair raised the same issue as the intervenor would be heard. Several days will probably be consumed in securing an advisory jury.

A furious gale swept across Chicago Sunday from dawn to sundown, and made the day a season of fires, accidents and wholesale distress. Plate glass windows were blown in, signs were wrenched off and hurled into streets, bill boards were flattened, and the eyes of hundreds of pedestrians were filled with what felt like pieces of paving stone and telegraph pole splinters. The wind blew with a velocity of sixty-eight miles an hour. Fires added their share to the destruction. One blaze at Stony Island avenue and 79th street, driven by the wind, burned up property to the amount of $136,000, injured five firemen, and startled the entire district. Three men were seriously injured by the falling of a great signboard from the south end of Siegel, Cooper & Co.'s building. The life saving crews were called upon once and again to rescue boats from sinking. Druggists and oculists were in demand on behalf of eyes burdened with bits of sand. Many buildings, considered substantial, rocked perceptibly in the gale. Charles Hamner, a towerman, was buried in the debris of a railroad tower house. He was found by the police with his skull fractured and unconscious from other serious injuries.

At least three Chicago men are credited with having made more than $100,000 each in wheat Monday. The closing Thursday was at 69⅝ cents. Board of Trade men, and the people for whom they do business, went home and thought the matter over. Saturday they had a great mind to believe the price would rise. Friday had been a holiday. Sunday was another season of inactivity as far as trading was concerned. Then came the reports of a battle between the Turks and the Greeks, and the blood of the traders began to boil—not with indignation, but with a belief in a rising market. Monday morning when the trading began there was an instant advance of nearly 4 cents. The scene in the wheat pit on the Board of Trade was as wild as it has been in years. The advance was fought as bitterly as bears could fight it. An advance of an eighth was the signal for the most frantic uproar. And when the opposing side succeeded in checking the advance a fraction of a cent, or in sending down the price a point, there was an even wilder demonstration. There was a time when a man could sell May wheat at 8 cents in advance upon the closing price Thursday. And cargoes of wheat were let loose all the way from the opening till that apex had been reached. Then there was a time when the tide turned. The bears began to have their way. And the price declined point by point till it had gone down to 74⅝c. Batter as they might, it would go no lower.

WASHINGTON.

The State Affairs Committee of the Wisconsin House made an adverse report on the so-called Sheridan drive bill, the object of which is to render possible the construction of a boulevard from Milwaukee to the south State line, there to connect with one to be built up to that point from Chicago.

Secretary Wilson is pushing things at the Department of Agriculture. In addition to his program for capturing the English butter market, his plan for sending out sugar beet seeds, in order to develop a home sugar industry, and his efforts to preserve the forests, he is trying to bring about co-operation between the various State agriculture experiment stations. It often happens that results attained by the experiment station of some State cannot be made available for the use of farmers outside that State because there are no funds with which to send out the reports. The agricultural societies of Great Britain, Canada, Germany and even Australia have made good use of experiments carrried on in our State stations by means of a reprint of the original documents, while American farmers, as a whole, have been left in ignorance thereof. Secretary Wilson now proposes to make the Department of Agriculture a sort of clearing house for the publication of important State reports. When a really valuable result is achieved he intends to publish an account of the process and send it out to farmers all over the country.

Senator Mason of Illinois caused a sensation Wednesday afternoon by breaking a rude lance against the wall of ancient Senate tradition and forcing a show of hands on that flat-footed proposition to amend the rules by authorizing the "previous question" and putting a limit to debate. He was defeated, as he expected to be, but there was a breezy freshness about the gentleman's way of going at the thing that was refreshing to a degree and that jolted the dignified body severely. The junior Illinois Senator called attention to the failure of a known majority to get action on the Cuban resolution and on the bankruptcy bill, and to the interminable delay that attended the passage of the last tariff bill. He made the point that the country looked with impatience on the obstructive tactics of the minority and demanded a revolution in Senate practices. The majority of the Senate, he declared, was in a state of insurrection, and would insist on having a chance to do business. The Senate listened with interest, and promptly voted to refer the closure motion to the Committee on Rules, that cemetery for motions whose burial beyond hope of resurrection is desired, and which Senator Hoar explained was not likely to meet for months on account of the absenteeism of members and for other reasons. The truth is a majority of the Senate is opposed to the limitation of debate. Occasionally a veteran takes up the fight against unlimited debate, but he does not press the matter with bitterness, and accepts defeat with equanimity. Senator Mason made a great hit with Senator Hoar by his volunteer motion to come to the assistance of the "young Senator from Massachusetts" in rescuing a motion from the inanimate Rules Committee. The dignified gentleman from the Bay State shook with merriment at the audacious demonstration of his colleague from the bounding prairies.

FOREIGN.

The Uruguayan General Munez has again been defeated by the rebels under Saralva and Lamos.

Tuesday morning's news from the Eastern war was that the Sultan's soldiers were defeated at Revenzi, the Greek forces had reached Damasi; two brigades had penetrated and were operating in the enemy's country, and that Edhem Pasha, Turkish commander-in-chief, had narrowly escaped capture. On the other hand, the Greeks had lost all the positions at Milouna. The Greek gunboats had completely destroyed the Turkish fortifications at Prevesa.

The forces of Greece and Turkey have met in relentless and bloody conflict. The boom of cannon and rattle of musketry are heard along the entire frontier. Many thousands of men engaged Saturday and Sunday in the awful contest and fought like demons. The fiercest battle occurred at Milouna Pass, where both sides lost heavily. Three Greek officers of high rank are among the killed, but a Turkish battery was taken by the Greeks. Diplomatic relations between the two nations are formally and completely severed. The Greek gunboats bombarded and reduced the forts Prevesa, and King George's troops held their own on land. Greek subjects at Constantinople will probably find safety at the American legation. Neither Greece nor Turkey actually declared war; but the Sultan officially announced that "war had broken out," thus seeking to throw the blame for actual commencement of hostilities upon the Greeks.

A special dispatch from Washington to the New York Journal says: The news that the Spanish Government had practically abandoned all hope of conquering Cuba and was preparing to withdraw her army, now finds confirmation from official sources. The movement of troops from the island, which for the last twelve months has averaged 500 a week in sick and wounded, now includes well and able-bodied soldiers and is averaging from 750 to 900 a week. The meaning of this is so plain that it is useless for Spain to attempt to disguise to the world her disastrous defeat. The ragged, poorly armed insurgents, inspired by patriotism and aided by climate and the difficult country, have overmatched and outgeneraled the 200,000 Spanish. In spite of misleading figures, Spain has to-day not over 100,000 troops under arms in Cuba, and they are being reduced at the rate of 1,000 a week. No more troops are being sent from Spain. Her capacity to send fresh levies is exhausted. No more money is forthcoming to pay the expenses of an exhaustive war. Spanish bonds have been hawked on every bourse in Europe for six months in vain. Fifty million dollars must be raised by July 1, or Spain cannot meet her interest payments.

OPENING OF THE BASE BALL SEASON.

THURSDAY afternoon twelve teams of the National League began the sixth annual season of the National League and American Association of the Professional Baseball Clubs. That the season will be a remarkable one is beyond all argument. At this time of the year the magnates begin to judge of the interest that is being shown in the game, and all of them figure on the profits of the year that is to come. The coming season is expected to be one of the best.

There is no doubt that interest will be general in the national game this season. To begin with, the race of the twelve clubs of the league promises to be as close as in any of the past seasons before the Baltimores began to be the best club in the league. The baseball public wants to see the Baltimore team beaten, and if any of the other clubs can accomplish that end there will be more enthusiasm all along the line than for several seasons. There is some talk that this club or that one will make the tail end of the league, but from all the cities of the league that are spoken of as being factors for the last place there comes the talk that the team has been more than strengthened, and that last place will be the farthest thing that can be obtained by the team. Even Louisville, relegated for a long time to last place in the bitter race, has said that it will be better this year than in past seasons, and that some other team will have the disgrace of being in last position this time. There is not a little in the claims of the Louisville team, and a strong possibility that the hopes of the rooters for the "Colonels" may be realized. Captain Anson's team is undoubtedly better than it has been for a number of years. It occupied a prominent position at the close of the league race of 1896, and if all the indications go for anything this season it is probable that the Colts will be far better off than they were at the close of last season.

While the season of 1896 was one of the most unsatisfactory from the playing standpoint of any that has been played, it was nevertheless one of the best the clubs have had since the start of the present combined league. All of the teams made a little money, some making quite a sum, enough, in fact, to recoup them for the losses of the previous seasons. The season really opened Monday with a game in Boston, the home team of that place playing the Philadelphias, but the general opening was on Thursday, when the following games were decided: Chicagos at Cincinnati, Clevelands at Louisville, Pittsburg at St. Louis, New Yorks at Philadelphia, Bostons at Baltimore, Brooklyns at Washington.

There can be little question that the three-time winners of the championship pennant will make even a stronger bid for the flag this season than they have in the past. This conclusion can be easily reached by any one who is familiar with the men and the general workings of the team itself while on the field. The team can readily stand dissecting in any of the numerous points that go to make up a championship lot of players and stand the ordeal without flinching. Not only are the players of the highest grade possible to obtain, but they have behind them a cunning and careful manager, who is ever ready to take advantage of any circumstance that will be of benefit to the team.

HOLMAN OF INDIANA DEAD.

Representative Passes Away in Washington Thursday Afternoon.

Representative Holman of Indiana died at his home in Washington at 2:05 o'clock Thursday afternoon, after an illness of several weeks. Spinal meningitis was the cause of death.

William Steele Holman's public life began the very year he became of age. Born at a pioneer homestead called Veraestau, in Dearborn County, Indiana, Sept. 6, 1822, he became a judge of the probate court in 1843, and continued as such until 1846. Previous to this he had received a common school education, followed by two years at Franklin College, Indiana, and had studied and practiced law. After leaving the bench he was elected prosecuting attorney, and filled the position from 1847 to 1849. He was a member of the convention of 1850 which framed the present constitution of the State of Indiana, then a member of the State Legislature. He was next elected judge of the court of common pleas of the district embracing his county, and occupied the bench from 1852 to 1856. His congressional career began with his election to the House of Representatives in 1858. With three exceptions, he has been elected to that body biennially ever since.

WILLIAM S. HOLMAN.

Judge Holman was one of the most efficient and trusted of the Democratic leaders. His wisdom, prudence, sagacity and fearlessness proved a power of strength to his party and to the country in many a fierce political battle. His name became synonymous with the watchwords "economy and frugality" in government expenditures. To him more than to any other individual legislator are the American people indebted for the upbuilding and perfection of the homestead system, which proved a blessing to settlers and a magic wand for the opening and quickening of the great West. Probably, also, no other member of Congress, in either branch, was so thoroughly versed in all the statutes of the United States, or so familiar with the circumstances of their enactment and the effects of their operation. He was particularly master of all questions, great and small, connected with our public domain, Indians and with the thousand ramifications of the Government service. He married Miss Abigail Knapp while he was studying law, in 1842.

MASON ON THE SENATE RULES.

Illinois Member's First Speech Is in Favor of New Regulations.

Senator Mason of Illinois made his first speech in the Senate Wednesday, and signalized it by some breezy criticism on the rules of the Senate. It was such a variation from the prosy debate of recent days that the Senator was accorded close attention, and twice received the hearty applause of crowded galleries.

The speech was in support of a resolution introduced by the Illinois Senator directing the Committee on Rules to report a rule by which debate could be closed and the previous question ordered. In this connection Mr. Mason sarcastically referred to the inaction of the Senate on all great questions before it, the long and fruitless debate on Cuba; the delay of the arbitration treaty and the inability to say whether our difficulties are to be settled by arbitration or by the methods of Corbett and Fitzsimmons. It was time, he said, to send the Senate into dry dock and rid it of accumulated barnacles.

Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts replied briefly, pointing out that the other branch of Congress was more open to criticism than the Senate. He was in accord with Mr. Mason, however, on the need of new rules. A vote was taken on Mr. Gorman's motion to refer the Mason resolution to the Rules Committee, which prevailed—yeas, 32; nays, 24.

CROP AND WEATHER BULLETIN.

Reports Received at Chicago Signal Service Bureau.

The following reports as to the condition of the crops throughout the country, and the general effect of the weather on the cultivation of the same have been made by the directors of the several climate and crop sections. The reports received at Chicago were as follows:

Illinois—Cool, cloudy week, with less rainfall than previous week; land drying slowly; plowing more general; oats and spring wheat seeding continue, also gardening and potato planting. Early sown oats are rotting in few cases; winter wheat unimproved and few fields will remain; grasses advancing; roadways gradually improving. Fruits are in blossom in southern section.

Wisconsin—Week very unfavorable for farm work. Frequent rains during early part of week and heavy storm on Thursday and Friday. Vegetation made little progress. Warm, dry weather needed. Little seeding done. No improvement in winter wheat; rye generally fair; clover badly winter killed.

Iowa—Temperature unseasonably low, but since 15th drying winds and sunshine greatly improved condition of soil and good progress made with seeding. Farm operations now rapidly pushed in all districts. No damage reported from freezing.

Indiana—Cool, cloudy weather and occasional frost delayed plowing, seeding and gardening. Wheat and grass improved little and slowly. Rye, clover and timothy in good condition. Fruit apparently still safe.

Ohio—Cool, cloudy and rainy weather retarded plowing and planting. Wheat, rye, meadows and pastures made some progress, but other vegetation is backward. Some oats rotting. Clover and timothy looking well. Gardens are slow. None of the fruit thought to have been seriously affected by the low temperature that prevailed.

Michigan—Wet weather has caused continued delay in plowing and seeding and very little such work accomplished. Few oats sown and some plowing for corn started. Winter wheat and rye and meadows continue to improve and look generally good. All fruit buds except peaches look promising.

FLOOD COVERS 4,904,466 ACRES.

Statistics Issued by the Government Show the Extent of Damage.

The bureau of statistics of the Treasury Department has made the following report on the damage caused agricultural interests by the Mississippi river flood:

Since the publication on April 12 of a statement relative to agricultural interests of the submerged districts of the Mississippi valley south of Cairo, Ill., the area under water has been considerably extended. In this newly submerged region there was in 1890 a total population of 82,356, in the proportion of four colored persons to one white. The total value of the farms submerged by the breaks in the levees that have occurred since April 10, with their farm implements, live stock and crops on hand, is close upon $14,000,000.

The total area submerged at this date is 20,000 square miles. If to the value of its farms, farm buildings and farm machinery, according to the census of 1890, there be added the value of its live stock on Jan. 1 last ($9,174,636), and of its products of last season still on hand on March 1 last ($4,595,179), the total of $90,176,177 will represent the approximate value of the agricultural property of the submerged region. Among the products of this region last year were 466,056 bales of cotton, worth $16,312,060; 12,525,645 bushels of corn, worth $3,995,278; and 9,033,878 pounds of sugar, worth $271,016, the total production, including minor crops, representing a value of $21,782,180 on the plantation.

ITALY'S KING IN PERIL.

Attempt Made to Stab Humbert with a Dagger at Rome.

An attempt was made Thursday to assassinate the King of Italy. In the afternoon, while King Humbert was on his way to the races, a man named Pietro Acciarito, an iron worker out of employment, attempted to stab his majesty with a dagger. The man was seized before he could carry out his purpose, and the king proceeded to the Campanile race course, seemingly unmoved. On arriving at the race course his majesty was greatly cheered. Acciarito appears to be a political fanatic. He says he has no accomplices.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

A Week's Proceedings in the Halls of Congress—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—An Impartial Resume of the Business.

The National Solons.

The Senate passed the Indian appropriation bill Monday. It is substantially the same as it passed the House, and can occasion little division save on the amendment opening the Uncompahgre Indian reservation. Resolutions of inquiry were agreed to asking the Secretary of State as to the operation of the reciprocity treaties made under the McKinley act. Mr. Vest introduced his resolution declaring illegal the recent order of the Secretary of the Treasury relative to imports arriving after April 1. After the executive session the Senate adjourned as a mark of respect to Representative Milliken, deceased.

Senator Morgan's resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba was discussed briefly in the Senate Tuesday and then went over for a week. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed without amendment. A resolution by Mr. Hoar was agreed to asking the Secretary of State for comprehensive information as to the machinery of government of all foreign nations with which we have diplomatic relations, the taxes or excises and methods of collection; imports and exports; method of aiding the merchant marine; discrimination against American merchant vessels; public indebtedness, etc. Another resolution by Mr. Cullom asked the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the effect of the present internal revenue tax on the honest production of distilled spirits, to what extent illicit distillation had occurred, and all further information that will aid in protecting the Government against frauds. The resolution went over after a brief discussion. The House was not in session.

Senator Mason, of Illinois, made his maiden speech in the Senate Wednesday and signalized it by some breezy criticism on the rules of the Senate. It was such a variation from the prosy debate of recent days that the Senator was accorded close attention and twice received the hearty applause of crowded galleries. Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, replied briefly, pointing out that the other branch of Congress was more open to criticism than the Senate. He was in accord with Mr. Mason, however, on the need of new rules. A vote was taken on Mr. Gorman's motion to refer the Mason resolution to the Rules Committee, which prevailed—yeas, 32; nays, 24. Most of the day was given to the bankruptcy bill. The House, after a ten-minute session, adjourned one day out of respect to the late Representative Milliken, of Maine.

The session of the Senate Thursday opened with a proposition for an official expression of sympathy to the Greeks in their struggle with Turkey. This was soon merged into a turbulent debate over the disorganized state of the Senate. Later in the day the Nelson bankruptcy bill was passed by the decisive vote of 49 to 8. The bankruptcy bill as passed is the substitute framed by Mr. Nelson of Minnesota. The "free homestead bill" was then taken up. Mr. Morgan offered an amendment providing that all public lands not taken up by public entry by Jan. 1, 1900, shall be granted to the States and Territories where the lands are located for dedication purposes. The homestead bill was made the unfinished business and then laid aside. At 4 o'clock a message from the House announced the death of Representative Holman. Mr. Turpie of Indiana presented a resolution voicing the regret with which the announcement was received and providing for a committee of five Senators to accompany the remains. The resolution was agreed to. The presiding officer named Senators Turpie, Fairbanks, Spooner, Kyle and Rawlins as the committee. The Senate adjourned to Monday. The House did nothing of importance.

President of Michigan University Is Appointed Minister.

Dr. James B. Angell, president of the University of Michigan, who has been appointed American minister to Turkey, was born in Scituate, R. I., and comes of old colonial stock. Thomas Angell, his ancestor, went from Massachusetts to Rhode Island with Roger Williams, and was one of the founders of a colony which became historical. Dr. Angell entered Brown University in 1845 and graduated five years later. He was called to the chair of modern languages in 1851, and held the position for seven years. Later he resigned to assume control of the Providence Journal, and retained it until 1866, when he accepted the position of president of the University of Vermont. In 1871 he was placed at the head of the University of Michigan. In 1879 he was appointed minister plenipotentiary to China to secure revision of the Burlingame treaty. This he accomplished in sixty days. In 1888 he was a member of the commission to Great Britain to negotiate a new treaty for the settlement of the fisheries dispute. He is a contributor to standard literature, and is distinguished as an educator, a scholar and a diplomat.

WORTH WHILE.

'Tis easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong,
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
And the smile that is worth the praise of earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.

It is easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray;
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.
But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's pathway is cumbered today;
They make up the item of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile—
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

A RACE FOR THE BORDER.

BY GEORGE F. LYON.

It was in the fall of 1893 that the western wheat crop was so unusually abundant, especially so in eastern Kansas and western Missouri, and along the fertile river valleys of this region, where perhaps the drouth of that summer was the least felt of anywhere in that section, while still further east, as far as Indiana, the wheat crop was almost a failure in comparison.

The incident which I am about to relate happened early in October of that fall, just after my twenty-first birthday. Clayton Fisk, a young man about my own age, and myself had resolved to start west, with the intention of investing our little savings in the wheat business in some way that would pay us a good interest on our investment. We were full of pluck and enthusiasm, determined to venture our last dollar in our enterprise. Kansas was just about this time developing some immense wheat sections along its border, and it was in this direction we took our course. We had a little over $800 between us, and after more or less careful consideration of the matter and the outlook ahead, we concluded to purchase a traction engine and threshing machine, and with this outfit strike off directly westward through the wheat regions. We went by rail to Jefferson City, where we stopped over and went to look at the threshing equipments manufactured there. Fisk had no knowledge whatever of engineering—in fact, I do not believe he knew the steam chest from the eccentric—but I had had a little experience and understood the points fairly well, and felt quite confident that we would have no trouble as far as operating the outfit was concerned. I remember the peculiar thrill of pleasure I felt as I looked over the big black silent masses of iron at Jefferson City, and thought that before long one of those iron monsters would be pulsing and throbbing under my hand. After some little uncertainty and a great deal of advice, we finally selected a thirty-horse-power engine as one in every way the best adapted for our purpose, but upon asking the price of the machine in view we were informed that we might have it at a bargain—only $1,200 for the whole outfit, consisting of the engine, thresher and equipments. The price was considerably more than we had calculated upon paying, and for a moment we were feeling rather discouraged, for, with only a capital of about $800 between us, the price was beyond us, and, as we stood there talking it over, and considering whether to buy a cheaper outfit or give the enterprise up, a young man, well dressed and appearing, stepped up to us and said:

"I accidentally overheard some of your conversation, from which I understand you lack $400 of the price of the outfit you want. Now, I have just about that amount by me, and I am out of work, and if you will take me as a third partner we will buy the outfit and start out. I am willing to risk what little I've got, for I think we can make a good thing out of it. Of course," he went on, "I am a stranger to you, and you are the same to me, but I'll risk it if you will."

He did not seem like a bad sort of a fellow at all, and we wanted that particular thresher pretty badly, so after Clayton and I had talked the matter over between us we decided to accept the stranger's offer at once. After breakfast the next morning we went back down to the works and closed the bargain, and we became owners of the "Gonic," as we concluded to call her. After carefully inspecting and oiling the machine, I began firing the engine, which was an immense concern, the huge six-foot drive wheels being two feet broad in order to prevent them sinking into the soft soil of the prairie wheat fields.

Clayton and Gleason (our new partner) were busy about the thresher, leaving me to my special charge of the engine. At last, about 9 o'clock, we were all ready to start; the tender was full of coal and the thresher was coupled on behind, and the "Gonic" was making steam rapidly. Already the indicator began to creep up—40, 50, 60 pounds. I waited until the needle began to tremble at 80 pounds, then, seizing the lever, I pulled the throttle slowly open. The monster shivered as the steam rushed into the cylinders; then, as the great drive wheels began to slowly revolve, I blew the whistle, and with Fisk and Gleason feeding the fire and looking after the thresher, we were off out along the country roads and across the prairie.

Probably no mechanic feels the peculiar love for his machine that the engineer does. As he works over it, watching and tending it as carefully as a mother does her child, noting the willingness and quickness, and, one might say, the intelligence with which it responds to every desire of its master, a feeling grows in his heart akin to the love one person bears for another.

I began to experience this feeling as we were rumbling along over the rolling prairie as fast as a man could run, our great iron steed answering its levers as steadily and as easily as a well-broken horse would his reins, and hauling the heavy thresher behind. We took a southwesterly course, and after crossing the Osage river, struck some extensive wheat fields just beyond. Here the wheat is bound and piled in great stacks and the thresher is run alongside them, and as fast as one stack is threshed the machine moves to the next. We had good luck, and in about a month's time we came to the Kansas line, which we struck nearly parallel with Fort Scott, and about 150 miles southwest from Jefferson City. We could have worked much longer in Missouri, but we were anxious to take only such jobs as lay in our direct course across to Kansas. After crossing the Kansas line we settled down to business, and as the wheat crop was unsually heavy this year, business was plentiful, and the high power of our machine enabled us to run the wheat through with surprising rapidity, and we began to notice with pleasure that our hitherto deplorably flat pocket books were beginning to swell to quite a respectable size. Fort Scott is situated about twelve miles from the border line between Kansas and Missouri, and while we were threshing in the vicinity of that place Clayton and I began to notice that our third partner, Gleason, apeared rather strange, and that he was over at Fort Scott almost every night, returning in the small hours of the morning.

"Where does he go?" asked Fisk, one evening after Gleason had as usual started off, leaving us to look after everything alone. "He sneaks off every night just this way, and I don't like it."

"Oh, well," I answered, "as long as he uses us square it's none of our business where he goes."

"That's just it," Fisk exclaimed. "How do we know he is not up to some game or other? Then, sinking his voice a little lower, he continued: 'We don't know anything about this chap, although he seems a good fellow enough. He never says much about himself to us, and I think we had better keep our eyes open a little anyway."

"How can he do us any harm?" I asked. "He has an interest in the thing."

"That is more than I can tell," he replied thoughtfully, "yet I think he will bear watching all right."

"All right," I repeated, starting up. "I'll go and fix the fire for the night, and we'll pull out of this the first thing in the morning. We had finished a large stack that day and all hands had gone off except Fisk and myself, and one of us generally stayed with the machine night and day. Just as I had finished banking the fire in the fire box for the night, I thought I heard a slight rustle in the straw like a step, at the other end of the engine, but it was too dark for me to see anything, and as I did not hear it again I concluded that it was only a field mouse among the straw. Gleason did not show up that night. In the morning by sunrise I had a roaring fire in the furnace, and the steam had begun to make a little, when I noticed it escaping in small white clouds from the cylinder heads. This surprised me a little, for I knew that they were all tight when we shut down the night before, and I stepped around to investigate, and upon a close examination I found that the cylinder head had been unbolted and the packing removed. The throttle had also been tampered with, and it would not close tightly, thus letting the steam escape into the cylinder, and showing us the loss before we otherwise would have noticed it. I hastened to the tender, where the spare packing was kept, but it was gone. I was by this time somewhat excited, and calling Fisk, we made amore careful examination of the entire machine, but found nothing else disturbed. It was only too evident that some person or persons had removed the rubber packing from the cylinder heads for the purpose of disabling us. Who could it have been, and what was their object, was more than we could understand, as there was no rival machine in the vicinity. While we were talking the matter over and wishing that Gleason would come, a man in a light buggy drove rapidly up and asked: "Is this the Gleason and Fisk outfit?"

Fisk quietly informed him that it was.

"Your other partner, Gleason," the man in the buggy began, "has been investing rather heavily in stocks or something of that kind, on security of property owned by the company, and as the investment has turned out badly, and Gleason can't pay, I've been instructed by the proper authorities to ask you to settle the matter at once."

"What have we got to do with his investments?" asked Fisk, with a scowl.

"One member of a firm binds the rest in Kansas," suavely remarked the stranger.

"And if we refuse to settle?" I asked inquiringly.

"Then, I'll have to serve an attachment on the outfit, that's all," said the man.

"Let me see your papers," said Fisk, stepping up to the side of the buggy. The man unbuttoned his coat and began to fumble in his pockets. As I did so I noticed a sheriff's shield pinned on his vest front.

'Confound the luck," he exclaimed angrily. "I've left them back at Fort Scott, but never mind; it's all straight enough anyway. I don't think you will doubt my authority," and he exposed his shield to us.

"Well," cried Fisk, wrathfully. "I don't think you will attach anything here without the papers—perhaps not then."

"Forewarned—forearmed," laughed the sheriff, as he glanced at the steam hissing from the crack around the cylinder head "I dont' think that you will be apt to run away with the property before I can serve the papers," and then he drove quickly away in the direction of Fort Scott.

"Say, sheriff!" I called after him. He stopped his horse and looked back. "Is this bill of Gleason's all straight, or is it a game of his to fleece us?"

The sheriff laughed a little at this, and then he said: "Well, to tell the truth, his ways are a little dark. I know him; he likes to catch a tenderfoot occasionally, but he's got the advantage of you fellows all right, because he's got the law on his side."

Fisk was about to make some warm reply, but I shook my head warningly at him and the sheriff went on.

"It won't do to make him mad," I said. "We are in a bad fix, and it will only make matters still worse to get the officials down on us.

"But," groaned Fisk, "to think what a precious pair of fools we are."

"Yes, it's pretty tough, old man," I remarked, sadly. "All our money and all our prospects gone at one sweep, and all owing to the rascality of that Gleason and our greenness.

"Clayton," I exclaimed a moment later, springing up electrified with an idea, "bring me your rubber boots, and step quick, too."

He brought them wonderingly, and I quickly slit open the legs and then drew several circles upon the rubber and began cutting them out with my knife.

"I guess this will work all right for a little while. If it does," I cried, we may give them the slip yet. Break up that old tar barrel and stick it into the fire box. If I can get the cylinder to hold its steam, I'll bet five to four that we can out-travel that apology of a horse the sheriff had."

Not a breath of air was stirring, and the dense black smoke from the burning tar barrel rose from our funnel perpendicularly in the clear morning sunshine, giving our pursuers an inkling of our intentions before they could have otherwise imagined it possible for us to escape. The smoke could be plainly seen at Fort Scott, which was about three miles away. I soon had the packing rings cut out and the cylinder heads bolted back into place again, and all we could do now was to wait for the steam to rise before we could start, and it seemed as if the indicator never moved so slowly before. If we could only get back over the line into Missouri, the laws there would protect us and we would save the Gonic. Only twelve miles lay between us and the border line—could we reach it before they overtook us?

The gauge showed 100 pounds pressure. I ran the governor belt off so that we could travel to the full capacity of our power without being automatically checked; then I pulled open the throttle, and the next moment we were rolling out across the open prairie toward Missouri, in a race with the stake $1,200.

The Gonic did nobly. With a roar like small thunder she belched up huge clouds of backk smoke and steam, and fairly quivered with the full pressure upon her, as she rolled along. Now and then we ran afoul a line of barked wire fence, but we tore through it like a network of twine.

I looked back just after we had got well started,fl and saw on a knoll about a mile back the pursuing party—three of them—the sheriff and two men with him in his buggy, and their horses at a run, and then i opened the throttle a little wider. It was now all a question of speed—if they overtook us before we reached the State line they might take us and the machine, too; if, however, we crossed first, we would be beyond their jurisdiction, and they could not serve the attachment. One, two, four miles we passed over, our engine at full speed, with an average of 90 pounds of steam on, and we could plainly see that we were holding our own against them. Eight miles we had traveled now, and I was beginning to feel pretty highly elated over the success of our scheme, when I heard Fisk utter a cry of dismay.

"The coal's all gone!" he exclaimed.

It was true, for, in the excitement, I had not noticed its rapid depletion, until now, and not more than four or five shovelfuls remained. This new calamity almost stunned us both for a moment—perhaps we might be able to make it hold out—but I doubted it greatly. Ten miles—the coal was all gone now, and I emptied one of the oil cans into the fire box to keep up the steam, and then we began to break up the woodwork about the tender.

Eleven miles—only one mile more now and we would save the Gonic, but the last stick of fuel was gone even to the last splinter, and I could see that the speed was already beginning to slacken down.

The sheriff seemed to notice that we were beginning to slacken up a little, for he now laughed and rose to his feet and stood upright in the buggy and began to urge his almost exhausted horse on with shouts and free use of the whip. The light vehicle swayed and plunged about from side to side as the horse broke into a headlong gallop, while the two men hung desperately on as the horse plunged frantically forward, still urged by the whip and the furious shouts of the sheriff. They were rapidly overtaking us now, and the Gonic was lost unless we could manage in some way to keep up the steam a few moments longer. I looked back and saw that the sheriff was still coming and was now within 100 yards of us and still gaining on us at the rate we were moving. He saw me as I glanced back, and he began to shout something at me, but the engine made so much noise that I was unable to understand what it was that he said, but I could guess almost, for I could see the look of exultant satisfaction in his face and hear him laugh as we began to slack down and almost stand still—the fire in the furnace having died down to a few smouldering embers. They were now almost within speaking distance and still coming nearer every moment. I could plainly hear the labored breathing of the sheriff's exhausted horse, and I knew that he could not go much further at that speed, and then I heard the sheriff shout tauntingly: "Hold on—you can't get away now. We've got you all right."

This was almost too much—especially with neutral ground not a mile ahead, and then with a grim determination that I would make another effort to save the Gonic in spite of them all, I pulled off my heavy woolen coat, and, pouring what oil there was left in the can on it and saturating it thoroughly, I opened the fire box and shoved it quietly into the furnace among the smoldering coals.

In another moment it blazed furiously up and we began to increase our fast diminishing speed a trifle. The sheriff was now near enough to see plainly what I was doing, and as we began to gain headway a little he began to curse and swing the whip more furiously than ever upon his plunging horse. In a moment the coat was consumed, but we had held our own while it lasted, and feeling somewhat encouraged by our momentary success I threw in my cap, while Fisk went me one better by following suit with his coat and overalls. This we did not a moment too soon, however, for as the fire died down the sheriff had begun to gain again, but as soon as the fire blazed up we began to make steam rapidly once more and the sheriff barely held his own with us now.

The coat and overalls did not last long and I saw that something more must go to keep up the fire, for we were beginning to lose ground—with Missouri half a mile away straight ahead. I took another quick look back at our pursuers; they were still coming at a headlong gallop. I opened the fire box and looked in—the fire was almost gone now—not a handful of embers remained. Then, without a moment's hesitation, I slipped off my own overalls, shoved them into the furnace and shut the door. By these heroic means we managed to keep just enough steam to keep in motion a little—just out of the sheriff's reach—until we at last crawled slowly over the line into Missouri, the sheriff and his party within 150 yards of us as we did so, our engine barely moving as we slipped out of Kansas into Missouri and came to a dead stop just beyond the border line. We never saw anything more of our third partner—Gleason—and all that autumn we continued to thresh in Missouri, and being quite satisfied with our investment, we gave up the idea of going further westward, and ran the Gonic successfully for several seasons before we finally sold out.—Washington Star.

CRUEL KING OF BENIN.

A writer in the London Standard thus describes an interview with the cruel monarch of Benin:

Being at last informed that the king was ready, we were led through a gateway into what I suppose was his house. It was of the same shape as the other Benin houses, only larger and loftier. A number of natives were assembled in the first half or court, but we were ushered into a second, into the king's presence. The scene which met our view was weird and bizarre enough to be described by Rider Haggard. The hall was of considerable size and height, and the roof was open, as usual. There was a large well or bath in the centre of the floor to catch the water from the roof. At first, in the hazy light of the smoky, palm oil cressets, we only noticed a large hall, with people crowding around it. But as we looked up the length of the hall we saw the king standing on a raised step with his arms supported by members of his court. On his right, along the hall, were arranged the personal attendants of his household. None of these were allowed to wear so much as a waist cloth, but all had necklaces of Benin coral and agate.

On his left were the nobility of his court, their costumes of silk and cotton skirts padded out to look big, and the upper part of their bodies bare, save for many necklaces of coral and agate.

Right in front of the king was a "juju" altar, composed of some white-looking compound, the top studded with nail-like protuberances. In the centre of these, and smeared with red, which we took to be blood, but found to be palm oil, was a human skull, looking ghastly in the dim light. On one side of the altar, painted on the floor, was a "juju" hieroglypic, and up to this we were led, but told not to go beyond. Behind us were ranged our Kroo-boys and the profanum vulgus, which had entered with us. Our interpreter stood beside us, but did not address the king directly. He communicated with the four messengers, who passed on his speech to one of the big men, and the latter told it to the king.

His majesty was dressed in a cloth of gold tinsel, and covered with coral necklaces. He was a man of about thirty, with an intelligent, or, rather, amiable, face. Certainly to look at him no one would suppose him capable of slaughtering some hundreds of people as a sacrifice to the shades of his father. He was very pressing for us to stay in his town, and said he had many things to show us and talk about. He wanted to know the truth of the statement that Nanna was stopping the trading and grasping everything into his own hands. We told him that we were forbidden by the big queen to carry tales, or make mischief among the natives. Finally we consented to stop over the morrow, when he promised to see us more privately, and then retired, leaving us to be regaled with the tombo.

New Way to Raise Wrecks.

An ingenious invention for raising sunken wrecks, which has just been invented by Felix Gaillard, a Frenchman of Bordeaux, is beginning to attract considerable attention in the marine world as well as among wreckers and divers.

The apparatus consists of simply a number of waterproof bags made in the shape of huge cylinders or pipes, long tubes which connect these bags with a powerful air pump, and some stout pieces of canvas and chains.

The air pumps used in this wrecking machine are much more powerful than the ordinary kind and are carried in the stern of stanch oceangoing tugs.

With the canvas the diver patches the holes as tightly as possible, and at the same time opens all the hatches of the sunken ship. That much being accomplished, the next step is to make fast to the hull in the securest possible manner a large number of air-tight, cylindrical bags. These are sent down to the diver, who with chains binds them along the keel on either side. As the bags gradually fill with air under the influence of the powerful pressure from above they exert a lifting power on the hull which is not to be resisted. Gradually the huge frame is completely turned over and eventually rests on the bottom upside down.

Meantime the large main pipes, which were first made fast inside the hull, have not been idle, and as the powerful and steady current of air is forced through them into the hull the water is gradually forced out, and light buoyant air takes the place of the heavier water. As the air pressure increases the hull becomes lighter and rises to the surface.

WOMAN BANK CASHIER.

MRS. MARY A. COSTA has the honor of being the first female bank cashier in California. She is not a cashier de jure, but de facto. Mrs. Costa lives in San Jose, and she is discharging the duties of the position with a promptness and accuracy that cause the people of San Jose to say that as a bank cashier woman is a decided success. Mrs. Costa's husband is the principal owner of the bank, but this does not detract from the fact that the lady fills the position better than a mere salaried employe would.

Anyone who is acquainted with the tasks which devolve upon a bank cashier will readily recognize the fact that it is not a post which admits of neglect of duty. There is nothing about the position which would attract a poseur. The place is in no wise ornamental, nor is it intended for one of those detestable persons who, while nominally holding a position, force the work thereof upon others. So it is that Mrs. Costa has undertaken a task that at no time can be termed light. She has demonstrated that she has no fear of her ability failing to justify expectations. The pistols always at her hand show she is, too, prepared for robbers.

CASHIER MARY A. COSTA.

It would be thought that a woman so completely engrossed in business would find only a little time for home life or for making happy that spot which is supposed to be the dearest of all on earth to the married man. On the contrary, Mrs. Costa is as attentive to her home as she is to business. There is in all San Jose no pleasanter home than that which the head of the banking house of Costa & Co. has in his mind's eye. The delicate touch of the woman, the evidence of dainty feminine taste in adornment, are everywhere visible about the house. It has every mark of the home of the womanly woman, and it all goes to show that a woman may be bright and businesslike, and at the same time retain the attributes which have won her her place in the domestic world.

Able Southern Woman.

Mrs. Van Leer Kirkman, of Nashville, President of the woman's department of the Tennessee Centennial, is a Southern woman by birth. From school she entered society, wherein she won distinction as one of the most beautiful belles of the South. She is the daughter of Caswell Macon Thompson, only son of Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior under President Buchanan. She was married eleven years ago. Though born in Nashville, the first four years of her life were spent in Cuba. In her native city she received her early education under the Episcopal Sisters of St. Mary, afterward pursuing a course of study at Fairmont College, Monteagle. At the age of 16 she went to school in Paris for two years, traveling the following year through the prinicpal cities of Europe. The enthusiasm with which Mrs. Kirkman assumed the leadership of the woman's department of the Tennessee Centennial insured its success. The nucleus of the necessary funds was obtained by issuing a woman's edition of a Nashville paper. Several times the interested women have taken charge of stores for a day, the considerable incomes from this source being increased by the proceeds of various entertainments. Throughout the work the fair general has shown great executive ability.

MRS. VAN LEER KIRKMAN.

To Cure a Headache.

Women are always studying fads, and now comes one that seems sensible, inasmuch as it is a cure for that bane of many a woman's life, a headache. It is a little mechanical instrument of massage, simple in construction and requiring no skill for its application. The results are said to be miraculous. And as there was never known to be a woman who did not have headaches the number to whom the new remedy will appeal is practically infinite.

This much-vaunted little affair is a simple metallic chain terminating in a handle at each end. To each link in the chain is fastened two tiny balls so arranged as to permit of easy revolution. The chain is taken in both hands and rapidly pushed backward and forward over the aching portion of the head, the speed, of course, being regulated by the judgment of the sufferer.

The advantage of the little arrangement, say those who know, is that it increases the capillary circulation and thereby produces the effect of a gentle or violent reaction, according as the sufferer pleases.

It is true that it is an expensive toy, but that will doubtless be considered only as an evidence of its value.

Too Much Credit for Beauty.

It is sheer nonsense to claim that every debutante is a beauty, says the Washington Post, or that every woman who gives a dinner is lovely and graceful. She may be neither, and yet a charming hostess. Beauty is not everything. Some of the most attractive women are not even good-looking, and on the other hand there are many beautiful women who are anything but attractive. The beauty business is rather overdone. It is getting to be tiresome to read about beautiful women. They are becoming entirely too common. An old-fashioned, charming woman, pleasant, agreeable, entertaining, but not beautiful, would be a sight refreshing to behold, and she would attain a degree of popularity unknown among the modern beauties.

President McKinley's Nieces.

The President and Mrs. McKinley, having no children of their own, are devoted in their attachment to their young nieces. These fortunate ladies were a happy quartette during the festivities in honor of their uncle's accession to the Presidency. All four have in common the same kindliness of heart and common sense which is so noticeable a trait in the President and his wife. All are attending school, or are busy cultivating some special talent, but during the coming four years they will spend a great many happy seasons enjoying the hospitality of the White House.

Miss Mabel McKinley is a dainty blonde, and a very pretty young girl. The President and his wife have a pretty pet name, that of Sunshine, for their brother's child, and her musical talents afford them much pleasure. A piano, a dainty white and gold affair, was placed in the beautiful blue parlor at the White House the day following the inauguration ceremonies, especially for Miss Mabel's use. All of President McKinley's nieces have strong musical tastes. Miss Grace McKinley will go abroad to study music in Germany.

MISS MARY BARBER.

Mrs. M. C. Barber, Mrs. McKinley's sister, has gone to her home in Canton, Ohio, after a delightful visit at the White House. The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Barber was one of the most winsome debutantes in the Presidential party at the inaugural ball. Miss Sara Duncan, of Canton, a niece of Mrs. McKinley, completes the youthful quartette, who were so happy in their first inaugural ball experience. She is of the Spanish type of beauty, and is strikingly attractive in her piquant and bright conversation.

The Engagement Ring Finger.

The custom of wearing the wedding ring on the fourth finger of the left hand is one of those survivals of pagan superstition which have become part of civilization itself. The old Greeks and Romans believed that this finger contained a vein directly communicating with the heart, and when the ring became the marriage symbol this finger was naturally chosen as the one on which the ring should be worn. The supposed connection of the fourth finger with the heart is, of course, a mere fallacy, but the custom that arose out of it has long been sanctioned by usage.

Cast Off Corsets.

A very curious scheme was started last spring in Paris. A society for the relief of the poor placed a box in a wealthy quarter of the town, with a placard begging women to throw worn-out corsets therein. It was intended that the manufacture into various articles of the whalebone would give employment to poor women, and the result has proved that the idea was most clever.

Don't Lose Your Hat Pins.

Now that hat pins are selling for $1,000 downward the minds of inventive geniuses are turning toward a pin that will stay in the hat, past all danger of falling out. Recently there was patented a split pin that was provided with a little spring which worked by pressure. A very nice hat pin, with a head of amber, had an amber fastener accompanying it and fastened by a gold chain. The "fastener" was stuck in the hat, so that to lose the hat pin you must lose the hat also.

FOR HOLDING A HAT-PIN.

A very ultra little piece of jewelry is a band of pearls connected with the hat pin by a gold chain. The pearl band is used as a brooch or as a pin upon the breast. The gold chain dangles from the hat pin and makes a pretty bit of finery for the woman who likes "fixings." The band may match the hat pin and be of any jewels or plain gold. Any device is good so long as it holds the pin, and when you reflect that every year there are hundreds of dollars lost in hat pins the economy of a little fastener is easily computed.

We know of several things we'd rather have than the higher life.

In the Heart.—Nothing is lost. Things lodge somewhere and live on, not only in eternity, but in the hearts of men.—Rev. W. D. Evans, Episcopalian, Columbia, S. C.

Fatalists.—He who merely hopes and will not act may write himself down what he pleases, but he is in reality only a fatalist.—Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, Hebrew, Chicago, Ill.

A Curse to Faith.—Ignorance is one of the greatest foes of the race. It is a curse to faith and hope and an ally to oppression.—Rev. J. F. Stout, Methodist, St. Paul, Minn.

Dr. Patton, Presbyterian, Princeton, N. J.

Real Church Work.—It has come to pass that in some of our churches you can get 100 young men to attend an entertainment where you will not find five who are willing to do any real work for God.—Rev. Olin S. Roche, Episcopalian, New York City.

WHEEL DEVOTEES' COMFORTS.

Toilet Set for the Women and a Smoker's Set for Men.

There are many unconsidered trifles which may promote the comfort of the cyclist when on tour, but which are too often left behind, since the capacity of the cyclist's pockets is limited, and many of the articles are too bulky to carry. A leather firm has recently made pouches for the purpose of carrying these things. One is a toilet set for women riders, containing brushes and glass, as well as needle, cotton, thread, and court plaster. The smoker's companion is an equally compact case, made of fine solid leather; it fits on the handle bar by means of two spring clips.

Rescued a Famous Poem.

Tennyson, just after finishing the manuscript of "In Memoriam," had trouble with his landlady and gave up his lodgings. He forgot the manuscript, but could not be induced to go back and face the landlady. His friend, Coventry Patmore, who was with him, returned to the lodgings, forced his way in and found the poem already thrown carelessly into a drawer of rubbish.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

BUTLER POLITICS.

It is seldom the COURIER ever mingles with outside politics but things are getting so warm over there that we insert the following specials from that place:

"Ingratitude at Butler" is the title of an article in last week's Auburn Dispatch, which is only worthy of attention because it is none of the Dispatch's business what Butler people do politically, and the people of Butler, old soldiers included, are in no way under obligations to the republican ring in Butler nor the Dispatch.

"The only old soldier that has been named for an office in DeKalb county" is untrue. But Mr. Gordon probably meant that he was the only old soldier belonging to his ring who had been named for a postoffice in the county, for Mr. Forkner of Auburn, is an old soldier who bears an honorable discharge from the service. But Mr. Gordon only seems to recognize old soldiers who belong to his crowd.

The ring in Butler as in the county, has been run for the benefit of the few who might belong to it and has no conscience in turning down an old soldier or any one else who opposes it.

As an instance of this I know of an old soldier who "one of the best financiers of DeKalb county" beat out $150 of hard earned money and his conscience never once winced. I have also noticed that wherever this "financier" places his hand he is sure to secure his full share.

"For the reason" that he supported Daily for postmaster," is of but little importance to the reason for opposing A. G. Jones.

I, in common with many others, believe that there should be a change in affairs. That we should know more about our cemetery matters than we seem to be able to get under the present arrangement and probably never can know until the ring is turned down.

Aside from that we are tired of being dictated to any longer even by the "best financier of DeKalb county." Although this dictator is town trustee, school trustee and superintendent of the cemetery we do not propose to "kiss his foot, by ginger" as has been suggested.

I think it is a well known fact that Butler people have as little to say about the school management as they have about their postmaster and their wishes are heeded about as much.

This great "financier" has held office uninterruptedly for twenty years, and has built around himself a support of followers of greater or less moment who are supporters and followers of him similar in a less degree to the Geo. B. Cox ring of Cincinnati, which the people turned down.

It is not a question of turning down of a Union soldier, but a question of the Butler people protecting themselves against the encroachments upon their rights by the man who has worked the old soldier racket for his own benefit as also has Gordon.

Regarding the recommend of Isaac D. Daily for postmaster, I would say that there were plenty of old soldiers who might have been chosen, who would have proven popular and have been competent to fill the position, which I cannot say for the man recommended. Nearly everyone pronounces him the most unpopular and the least competent of any one of the candidates of any old soldier patrons of the Butler postoffice. Need more be said.

As for A. G. Jones, I have never yet found a man who could tell me of any thing he has ever done which shows he is one of the "best financiers of DeKalb county," and I challenge the Dispatch the name an instance.

As for the "supposition" that he supported Daily, there is no supposition about it. The fact is too well known that the endorsement of Jones was needed and the secret night meeting at his house was sufficient proof that he had a hand in the making of the pie.

As for the "old time patriotism for which Butler is celebrated," the republicans who are supporting the citizens ticket are patriotic at some other time than when the spoils are to be divided and every citizen in Butler knows that no one worked harder for the election of McKinley than did those republicans who are now supporting the citizens ticket while the "old defenders of the Union" took a back seat.

This part of the county has long since given up hope of receiving any fair treatment from the hands of Gordon, and his unjust attack upon Butler people in their attempt to manage their own affairs is resented by all honest people.

OLD SOLDIER.

Then comes the fight on marshal. It will be seen that county officials are not alone in suspicious ways of conducting business.

The following verified statement and copy of town order No. 508, turned in by Marshal Isaac Hose to L. C. Harding, treasurer, may help you decide.

That on said February 13th, 1897 affiant went to the office of Marshal Isaac Hose for the purpose of paying the corporation taxes on several pieces of property in said town, and computed the interest on said order from the day of its presentation for payment until said February 13th, 1897, and offered and tendered said order in payment of said taxes, whereupon said marshal informed him said affiant, "that said order was good and acceptable for taxes, but that he could not and would not allow affiant any interest on said order and affiant further protested and objected to the refusal to allow him the interest thereon, whereupon said Hose said "affiant had held said order too long" "and was not entitled to any interest" and affiant believing said Hose to be an honest and truthful man and official believed that he, affiant, had by his delay and failure forfeited said interest and did then and there submit and permit said Hose to take up said order at its original face value, viz:—$48.93, and did receive no interest thereon whatever.

THE RECORD AGAIN.

The Record has not been able to wean itself from its favorite diet the Stroh matter. Last week it said:

"If the AUBURN COURIER wanted to be fair in the Stroh controversy it would publish the findings of Expert Ernst in the matter. But instead of showing any disposition to be fair, the COURIER continues to harp on its old story and ignores the Expert's findings."

The Record is partly right and partly wrong. It is right in things not in dispute and wrong in all else. The COURIER does insist on its "old story of the Stroh matter" because that old story is true, and has never been denied either by Stroh or his apologists. It is to the effect that Stroh had for some time kept back fees that the law required him to turn into the county treasury. Has he or anyone else, ever denied this? If the Record wants to be fair, here is a fair question that we have repeatedly asked. Again we stated fairly, that after waiting till March when things were getting pretty hot about the county offices, Stroh turned this money into the treasury. March 3 and 5 he turned in $692.57, about half in cash and the rest in county orders. A few days later, he turned in another county order, $204.17. This with $190 of fees turned in for him by the Clerk, makes a total of $1,056.74. Now as a quarter's salary is but $575, will the Record explain why he should pay over $1,056.74 at one time, and yet the county be owing him? This one statement shows how foolish it is for Stroh and his defenders to keep up this controversy.

And this also shows of how little value in this particular, is the "report of Expert Ernst." He came in and examined the books some weeks after Stroh had turned this money back into the treasury. Of course Stroh's books would now show all right. In fact after turning in this $1,056, Stroh's books show he had turned in $8.81 more than he needed to. And yet his apologists have not stopped telling us that "the county still owes Mr. Stroh." Will they state just what Ernst's report would have been had he examined the books any time before March 1897?

ERNST'S STATEMENT.

The reason the COURIER has not published Mr. Ernst's statement, will appear plain from above remarks. His statement amounted to little. Had Moody and Fair gone and paid in all that was shown as a shortage Mr. Ernst would have found their "accounts all balanced." But as the Record seems to desire it we give Ernst's reports.

Sheriff's fees collected on writs	$ 2243 54
Rec'd on allowances by commissioners	1046 60
	3290 14
Amount paid to county treasurer	3298 95
Excess turned in	8 81

And Mr. Ernst adds:

"It must be understood however, that said excess is not Stroh's fees remaining in the treasury, but simply an excess of all fees turned in by him over the amount collected."

But he does not attempt to explain why an officer should turn in "more than he has collected."

And here is the next paragraph of Mr. Ernst's report:

"I have also examined a statement filed with your board at the March 1897 term, of Stroh's salary account showing a balance in the treasury of $163.30. This statement of balance is incorrect, the fact being that Mr. Stroh had at that time, drawn out upon allowance by the board, the full amount paid in from all sources and credited to his account."

So the Record can see that the reason we "harp on the old story" is because it is true and has never been denied. And the reason we did not publish Ernst's report, was that it did not cover the proper time or ground in the Stroh matter. And what ground it does properly cover, goes to prove our former statements, that Stroh's accounts had not been properly kept. If our contemparies feel that this subject is getting old, they have themselves to blame for it. We said our say a month or so ago. We told the truth and there was no need to repeat it, except as it seemed necessary to defend ourself against these foolish attacks.

HE KNEW HIS OWN VALUE.

Before the war, in days of slavery, a New York jeweller, of a prominent family, who can be called Mr. X., had owing to him a bill of $1200 from a reputedly wealthy family in the South. Time after time the bill was rendered, but there was no response, and finally Mr. X., as he chanced to have other business taking him beyond the Mason and Dixon line, decided to call at the home of his debtor in New Orleans and see if he could get some satisfaction for his claim.

On his arrival there he found that his debtor was in a bad way financially and had but little money, although running an expensive establishment. A proposition was made that Mr. X. take in payment of his bill a negro named Jim, a very bright fellow, and considered to be worth fully $1500. Jim was an expert horseman, and through all his life had been working in the stables of his master.

Mr. X. was in a quandary. His abolitionist ideas prevented him from being a slave-owner, but his natural anxiety to receive something for the bill due him almost demanded that he should accept the slave as payment. Finally a bright idea suggested itself, and he called the negro to him.

"Now, Jim," said he, "I am going to be your new master. I do not want to live here in the south and look after you, nor do I wish to take you to the north with me. Now I've been thinking of this plan: Will you be honest, sober, and attentive to business if I set you up in the cab trade in this city? Will you turn over every cent to me and not steal from me? If you promise I will set you up in business, and when you send me the money that you earn I will credit half of it to you. When your half of the money above all expenses amounts to twelve hundred dollar, you can buy your freedom, and then we can continue partners in the business, or you can buy me out. If you do not want to make any promises, or if you will not keep the promises that you may make, I will sell you, and then you may get a hard master."

Jim of course promised, and what is more remarkable, he kept his word. Mr. X. bought for him three cabs and as many teams, and allowed him full management of the business.

So well did Jim take care of the enterprise that within a year he had charge of nine cabs and several teams of horses for each cab. He sent his money regularly to New York, and within two years his share of the profits amounted to over $2800. But still he made no suggestion that any of his money be turned over to Mr. X. for his freedom.

Mr. X did not wish to speak about the matter to Jim, but he was anxious to get some cash value for the slave. He accordingly sent a friend to see Jim and find out what was the matter. The friend went to Jim, and said to him, "Jim, you have sent to Mr. X. nearly fifty-seven hundred dollars, haven't you?"

"Yassir," said Jim.

"And twenty-eight hundred dollars of that money will be yours if you buy your freedom, won't it?"

"Yassir," said Jim again.

"Well, it will only cost you twelve hundred dollars to buy your freedom, and when you do you will have sixteen hundred dollars left, and can still continue in partnership with Mr. X. Why don't you buy your freedom?"

"Look yere, boss," said Jim, solemnly—"look yere; yo' doan' ketch dis chicken y-re a-buyin' a niggah dat has consumption."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bower Kauley, the subject of this sketch, was born at Swaldor, Germany, March 6, 1833, and departed this life April 20, 1897, age 64 years, 1 month and 14 days.

On the year 1864, she was united in marriage to John Kauley and the following year 1865, they emigrated to America. To this union were born five children, two boys and three girls. A husband, daughter and son survive her. Early in life mother Kauley united with the Roman Catholic church and was a faithful, devoted christian until death. Mother Kauley was a kind, faithful mother. Those who knew her in life will regret her death. Funeral services by Rev. Dewitt and interment Union Chapel cemetery.

Dear mother, rest from all your care;
Sleep now, your loving work is done;
No more that look of trouble wear,
But wear the crown that thou last won.

Now let thy heart that ever beat
Responsive to thy children's call
Be filled with heavenly pulses sweet
That from the angel chorus fall

And let thy hands, that knew no rest.
From sun to sun through many years;
Lie still upon thy peaceful breast,
Nor wipe again the fount of tears.

And weary feet, that walked so long
The rugged way that mother's tread,
Go, walk those heavenly paths among,
Where faithful souls are comforted,

BUTLER.

Mrs. Phillip Ramsy living 2½ miles east of town is dangerously ill.

Mother Hollinger, the aged widow of John Hollinger two miles east of town is suffering from a cancerous affection of her mouth.

Adam Tombow, of Wilmington Center is reporter as improving.

Our little town election is kicking up more dust than an average state election. The emoluments of these offices are so thin, one would suppose that scarcely an effort would be made by either faction, yet it seems that the smaller the importance of an office is, the greater effort is made to secure it, by the little men that seek it.

Ev. Campbell, who recently graduated from the Toledo Medical College, has again entered Dr. Shumaker's office to assist him in his large practice.

Dr. Frank Fanning, who recently graduated from the Chicago College of physicians and surgeons, has entered into practice with his father here.

The Fort Wayne Journal has taken up the cudgel in favor of Butler's mixed ticket. If the half its random talk was true, the situation here would be deplorable. Its statement are so wide of the mark that they are news to our people. We always go away from home to hear news.

The Sunday school gathering here last Saturday was only meagerly attended.

The county seat trouble seems to have quieted down, and new developments no longer create sensations.

The 79th anniversary of American Odd Fellowship was celebrated in Butler on the 26th of April. Fully three hundred members of the order, including the auxiliary of the Daughters of Rebekah gathered together at the M. E. church in the evening and listened to a grand address from Grand Scribe Leda, interspersed with songs and short addresses from others, after which they adjourned and left for the Opera House, where covers were spread for about four hundred. The members of the order and their friends enjoyed a feast, fit for a prince, prepared by that caterer to the taste, Chas. Voight. After supper, speeches were indulged in by the ministers present, visiting brothers, and some of the members of Butler lodge. The occasion was one of special pleasure and profit and will be remembered for years to come. Waterloo, Garrett, Auburn, Angola, Hamilton Edgerton, Edon and St. Joe, lodges were present by liberal representation.

Additional population. J. Grates a daughter and Wm. Rhynearson a son.

Mrs. Samantha Orr is very poorly with rheumatism.

Mrs. M. A. Leins is recovering from sciatic rheumatism, under special treatment of Dr. Greene, of New York City.

O. P. Raber only recently purchased a fine show-case that is now filled from top to bottom with the popular weed.

Latest reports concerning the fair ship, "it is shaped like a cigar only peaked at both ends," we suppose those parties feel peaked after they became sober.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common, as a bad breath; and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you will take Simmons Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite, complexion and general health.

CONSTIPATION

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

—There was a large number of nice looking young people in town Saturday to take the examination for teacher's license. The papers of this examination will be the last for Mr. Merica to grade, as the election of a superintendent will be held on the first Monday of June, and the new man will be entitled to this work. Mr. Merica will have to hold the examination however.

—Our friend Mr. Bottenberg is in better luck this spring. He has sold his patent right, we are told, for a fair price, and will be employed in selling it, besides. We understand it was purchased by Dr. Sparling and his brother, the Dr. Sparling in Butler, and that they have engaged Mr. Bottenberg to travel for them in the sale of it. It is the patent window shade or screen.

OBITUARY.

Hannah High was born in Union Co. Pa., Dec. 19, 1816. At an early age she, with her parents moved to Ashland Co. Ohio. Was united in marriage to Samuel Foltz, Dec. 22, 1873. She with her husband and family came to DeKalb Co, Ind., in April 1850, where she has since resided till her death April 18, 1897, aged 80 years and 4 months. Mrs Foltz with her husband united with the Evangelical Lutheran Church soon after her marriage and of which she has ever since lived a consistent member.

She was the mother of 14 children, 4 of whom and her husband preceded her to the tomb. Leaving 5 sons, 5 daughter, 46 grandchildren 19 great grandchildren and a host of friends to mourn her loss. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Overholser of Spencerville April 20, and interment made in the Spencerville cemetery. Mother Foltz was a quiet unobtrusive woman, ever ready to lend a helping hand in sickness or distress, and although a great sufferer for a long time she bore her trials patiently and when the master called, was ready and willing to answer the summons.

Fold her hands gently,
Her labors are o'er;
She has crossed the dark river
To yonder bright shore.
Away from the earth,
Her spirit did soar;
She has gone to meet father
To be parted no more.

For the first time in twenty-eight years the State of Ohio is without a Democratic representation in the United States Senate. Among the things that furnish occupation for the eyes and minds of Atlantic ocean passengers are the swarms of flies which accompany steamers. In sunny weather they buzz cheerfully about the sunny decks, and when the wind blows high they take refuge in the cabins and saloons. The flies often remain with the vessel while in port and return with her on the next trip, thus crossing the ocean several times in succession, and usually spending the entire season at sea. They are always on the wing.

Americans who are going abroad this season will rejoice to know that the American system of checking the baggage of travelers has been adopted for the benefit of American tourists by several European railroad companies. Hereafter all baggage passing through London or Paris from any point in the United States may be checked through to almost any point in Europe. The traveler who was formerly annoyed by being compelled to pick his trunks out of a pile of baggage and then fee a porter to rescue them for him may now forget that he has trunks and find them at his hotel. The London and Northwestern railroad was the first to make the change and other railways have followed the example.

INDICATIONS OF LONGEVITY.

They Are Carried by Every Person and Are Distinguishable.

Every person carries about him the indications of his longevity. A long-lived person may be distinguished from a short-lived person at sight. In many instances a physician may look at the hand of a patient and tell whether he will live or die. In the vegetable as well as in the animal kingdom each life takes its characteristics from the life from which it sprung. Among these inherited characteristics we find the capacity for continuing its life for a given length of time. This capacity for living we call the inherent or potential longevity. Under favorable conditions and environment the individual should live out the potential longevity. With unfavorable conditions this longevity may be greatly decreased, but with a favorable environment the longevity of the person, the family or the race may be increased.

The primary conditions of longevity are that the heart, lungs and digestive organs, as well as the brain, should be large. If these organs are large the trunk will be long and the limbs comparatively short. The person will appear tall in sitting and short in standing. The hand will have a long and somewhat heavy palm and short fingers. The brain will be deeply seated, as shown by the orifice of the ear being low. The blue hazel or brown hazel eye, as showing an intermission of temperament, is a favorable indication. The nostrils being large, open and free indicate large lungs. A pinched and half-closed nostril indicates small or weak lungs.

These are general points of distinction from those of short-lived tendencies, but, of course, subject to the usual individual exceptions. Still, it is well acknowledged that the characteristics noted are expressions of inherent potentiality, which have been proved on the basis of abundant statistical evidence.

In the case of persons who have short-lived parentage on one side and long-lived on the other side, the question becomes more involved. It is shown in grafting and hybridizing that nature makes a supreme effort to pass the period of the shorter longevity. Anyone who understands these weak and dangerous periods of life is forewarned and forearmed. It has been observed that the children of long-lived parents mature much later and are usually backward in their studies.

Such observations are of the highest importance.—Scientific American.

Great Shooting.

There is a weather-vane in Frankfort which, if the story told of it be true, is a witness to the skill of a marksman whose shooting propensities had brought him into trouble. The vane in question bears a number nine neatly pricked on its surface by nine holes. The story—which is told in Mr. H. A. Buerber's "Legends of the Rhine"—attributes the figure to a poacher who had used his gun once too often, and had been imprisoned in the tower which the vane adorned.

Nine days and nights of solitude, during which he had nothing to do but listen to the creaking of the vane, caused the prisoner to hate the dismal sound with so violent a hatred that he complained sorely to his jailer. It had prevented him, he said, from finding a moment's oblivion in sleep.

"Were I only free," he added, "I would show the good people of Frankfort how accurately I can aim by shooting as many holes in that wretched old weather-vane as I have spent nights in this tower; and what is more, those nine holes should form the number nine."

The jailer reported the speech to the city councillors, and they, anxious to see such a proof of skill, agreed that the poacher should be allowed to try whether he could make good so great a boast. If he succeeded in touching the vane nine times, and so managed his shots that the nine holes should group themselves into a figure nine, his skill should earn him his freedom.

The poacher was brought forth. He loaded his gun, took aim at the movable vane, and fired. The mark was reached, and a hole appeared in the vane. Nine times the marksman tried, each fresh hole appearing in precisely the spot where it was needed to help in fashioning the figure nine. When the poacher took aim for the ninth time the figure was complete. A well-shaped number nine graced the vane, and, under the terms of the agreement, the prisoner had earned his freedom.

Politics of the Day

DEPRESSION ON THE FARM.

There are quite a number of people who, having passed all their lives in a city, are disposed to regard the farmer as the luckiest of all individuals, and the one who is always assured of a comfortable living.

The usual idea of the farmer, by those who have had no experience in farming, is that he is sure of his sustenance from what the ground yields him, and that the surplus products mean so much clear cash in his pocket. But the working of the farm necessitates help which, while the pay is not large, eats considerably into the receipts. Then to keep up the production of the land, fertilizers have to be utilized, and large sums are expended yearly, for agricultural machinery.

After the ground is planted, and even up to the time the crop is plucked, the farmer is constantly facing the possibility of having the entire season's labor swept away. Too much wet weather means the ruin of crops; a drought means that they will be burned up by a blistering sun, while sudden storm may sweep away in an instant property which he has been years in acquiring, or the produce which is ready for the market.

The past few years have been decidedly unfortunate for the farmers in every section. The price of produce has been small, and the demand light, because the masses have had no money. In many instances crops did not pay for their cultivation, and within a few miles of some of the big cities potatoes and many other lines of farm produce have been allowed to rot in the ground, because the price would not repay for the labor of marketing.

No matter how disastrous the season, taxes pile up upon the farmer, and as a climax to the period of depression the law steps in and dispossesses him. Not until the volume of money is largely increased, and comes in a medium which will be placed in circulation, instead of being hoarded away, will there be any real and practical relief for the farmer.

The Tariff and the Trusts.

The account in the San Francisco Examiner of the manner in which the different trusts have been allowed to write their own schedules of the Dingley tariff sufficiently explains why the sponsors of that measure did not welcome a proviso that articles controlled by trusts should be placed on the free list. It would have been rather queer if they had been willing to punish the men that made their bill.

This easy method of framing a tariff bill by farming out the work to the various interests that expect to profit by it is nothing new in Republican tariff legislation. Precisely the same course was followed in the preparation of the original McKinley law. The trusts and capitalists to whom the party managers felt under obligations wrote the schedules that affected their respective interests, and in many cases these schedules were adopted word for word. The people who were to pay the taxes had nothing to say until the following November, when they spoke with considerable emphasis. It appears evident, however, that the impression made by their remarks at that time has faded out, and that they will have to speak again at the next opportunity.

Canadian Resentment.

The story coming from Montreal that the new Canadian tariff will be pro-British and anti-American, and that the Liberals will pursue a policy the very reverse of that they have been advocating these many years, is not entitled to much regard. It bears marks of Canadian toryism and American protectionism.

It is certain, however, that the representatives of the Liberal Government who were recently in Washington did not return home in an amiable mood. They were treated in a manner which they might have expected, but which in their commercial good will it seems they did not expect. They were treated with downright incivility and contempt and given to understand that while the party in power professed to favor reciprocity in the abstract or with certain countries, it had no thought of anything but strangulation for trade with Canada.

Very likely protectionist hostility which was so ostentatiously manifested in Washington will have its effect upon the tariff policy of the Liberals.

Swarming Lobbyists at Washington.

Never before in the history of the country has such a horde of lobbyists representing the protected monopolies of the country gathered in the nation's capital. These swarms of greedy lobbyists represent the saturnalia of selfishness, and it is worthy of note that the Republican majority is more intent on carrying out their demands than it is in promoting the interests of the people. The people have no lobby to represent them. The Republican party governs solely in the interests of greed and selfishness.—Atlanta Constitution.

Rebuke to Tariff Boomers.

If the Republican party is correct in its claim that the election of McKinley indicated a great popular demand for more tariff the elections this spring do not indicate it. Why, if the Dingley tariff rates were just what the people wanted, wouldn't the elections this spring have been the most enthusiastic kind of jubilation meetings over the jamming of the bill through the House? If more tariff were all that is necessary for prosperity the jamming of the Dingley bill ought to bring the dawn in sight.—Utica Observer.

The Rush for Office.

That the rush for office, under the new administration, is tremendous, is well known. But that it assumes the proportion of a torrent is something which the great majority have not yet considered. Some idea of the tremendous pressure can be gleaned from the statement that since the inauguration the Postoffice Department has received 95,000 letters relating to appointments.

If this immense number of letters is poured into one department, the entire torrent of applications to all the departments must be something appalling. But there is one pleasant thought to be gleaned from this craze for office. If all the letters are properly stamped, the applications ought to net a snug sum to Uncle Sam's receipts, and thus contribute something toward paying the vast army of those who hold public place.—Philadelphia Item.

Patent Reversible Protective Tariff.

The protective tariff is marvelously adapted to meet the wants of all emergencies—according to the claims of its various advocates. It lessens the cost of the thing you have to buy, and increases its price when you have the same thing to sell. It shuts out foreign importations, yet increases the revenues collected on such importations. The "foreigner pays the tax" on goods imported to this country, but it is "an outrage on the poorer classes" in Germany and France for those countries to "increase the cost of meat by tariff-taxing cheap American hog and cattle products in the interest of German farmers."—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Foreigners May Fight Back.

Germany is a pretty good customer of the United States. France is also a pretty good customer. But both nations give inofficial warning that they, too, can play at the game of high protection, and will be willing to increase their protective duties in the same proportion President McKinley and Mr. Dingley propose to increase protection. About two years of "protected" home markets will satisfy the farmers of the United States, and then the Dingley bill will join the shade of the McKinley bill in the fields beyond the Styx.—Nashville American.

Brief Comment.

The newspapers which have undertaken to explain why the good times are postponed have a difficult and perhaps protracted job on hand.—Waterbury (Conn.) American.

The sons of their fathers do not seem to be getting the glad hand from the present administration. The Major has no boys, and he doesn't know how it is himself.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

Cannot Congress pass a law making all of Mr. McKinley's appointments "retroactive," so that they may draw their salaries for the four years Cleveland kept them out of office?—Louisville Post.

"The tariff was not a winning card last fall," says the Chicago Tribune (Rep.). "It does not seem to have been one this spring. Republican Senators may find food for thought in this fact."

If any newspaper thinks of printing what Senator Hanna thinks of the Ohio municipal elections it would do well to take time by the forelock and lay in a large supply of asbestos paper.—Omaha World-Herald.

Mr. Hanna has formally and firmly refused to attach any importance to the recent municipal election results. Mr. Hanna is enough of a politician to shut his eyes when he doesn't care to view unpleasant things.—New York Journal.

The flint glass makers who were told that they were to have their wages raised when McKinley got in fail to see through the contradiction of a proposed cut in wages. Perhaps they do not use the right kind of glasses.—Boston Globe.

Corporations can go on in their present reckless course and invite retaliation—a retaliation which is sure to come—or they can be contented with the rights and privileges enjoyed by their poorer fellow-citizens. Is it not time they began to appreciate their responsibility?—Indianapolis News.

According to the New York Hide and Leather Club, free hides brought more than $20,000,000 into the country and gave employment to over 100,000 men last year. Of course, the logic of Dingleyism will throw these men out of employment and drive this money to Germany and England.—New York World.

It was just as unreasonable and mischievous to promise good times as the result of McKinley's election as it was to attribute the hard times to the election of his predecessor. But the Republican press and orators were as prodigal with their predictions as with their slanders.—Rochester Herald.

Ever since the McKinley idea came in the annual appropriations have been larger than ever. This is the real source of the woes under which the country is suffering. It cannot be cured by piling up taxes; by taking more money out of the earnings of the people to make good what has already been taken out of the same place. The means of real relief is the reduction of expenditures; it is economy.—Boston Post.

Pith of Opinions.

"The retroactive clause in the Dingley tariff act has had its answer in the retroactive vote from the big cities in the different States," says the Dover Index.

With reference to the retroactive clause of the Dingley bill the Boston Post says: "The House of Representatives has in effect set up a Government lottery in every custom house and invites merchants to risk their money on the chances of one rate of duty or another turning up on the final drawing."

In the view of the Baltimore Sun "the great danger is that the Dingley bill will be so loaded down with provisions that are practically prohibitive that it will reduce revenue instead of increasing it, while it will impose additional burdens upon the masses of the people."

"The protectionist newspapers are busily engaged in explaining the causes of political reaction as evidenced by the results of the recent municipal elections," says the Philadelphia Record. "There is one cause for dissatisfaction which they have not yet urged, and that is the dilatoriness of the Senate in passing the Dingley tariff bill. The people are so anxious to be more heavily taxed!"

TO BLOW UP ARCH ROCK.

Famous Menace to Safe Navigation to Be Sent Skyward.

Government engineers are at present surveying the arch rock, in the harbor of San Francisco, Cal., and as soon as the survey is completed the work of placing a great blast of dynamite to destroy that menace to safe navigation will be begun.

The object of the present survey is to ascertain the amount of rock to be removed in order to cut away the reef to a depth of thirty feet below the low-water plane. While the popular name is "rock," the engineers are careful to explain that it is not a rock, but a reef running almost due north and south. The hole from which the rock takes its name runs lengthwise of the reef and is oval in form, so that it is about the same shape under as above water. At the central point the arch is three and a half feet high above the low-water plane, and the deepest point of the inverted arch is nearly four and a half feet below the same level. The hole is sixteen feet wide at the center and flares at both ends, so that there is ample width for a large-sized barge of shallow draft to pass through.

The plan followed is to take soundings along a number of lines diverging rapidly from a fixed point on the rock; then move to another fixed point on the rock and repeat the soundings on similar diverging lines until the trip has been made completely around the rock. The exact position of each radial line must be carefully noted and the depths of the rock below the water at every ten feet along each radial line must also be accurately entered on the engineer's records, for on these data all his calculations as to the quantity of rock to be removed, and so of the charge of dynamite needed, depend.

Many borings, and an immense quantity of high explosives, will be required to prepare for the big blast, and while the undertaking is not on near so large a scale as was the famous Hell Gate work at New York, it is yet one of the greatest engineering undertakings of the world.

YOUNG ELECTRICIAN.

Garret A. Hobart, Jr., Is the Bellhanger of the White House.

Garret A. Hobart, the 12-year-old son of the new Vice President, has been appointed official bellhanger of the White House by President McKinley. Young Hobart is an adept in electricity, and he was the first applicant for office after the inauguration. He had an eye to business and made a business proposition to the President. After looking into the matter with great care the President let the contract to young Hobart, and so the young electrician and his partner, Ned Van Ripper, were given charge of the White House bellhanging. Hobart Jr. began his career as a practical electrician by "wiring" his father's house so thoroughly that a bell would ring whenever anyone as much as coughed. The servant girl could light the kitchen fire by touching a button on her bedhead, and the bulldog was released whenever a window was opened after dark. His business career began when the neighbors of the Hobarts hired the boy to protect and equip their houses in a similar fashion. The work of Garret A. Hobart Jr. & Co. was as scientific as that of the best electricians, and as it was fearfully and wonderfully cheap as compared with that of the professionals, the boy firm throve at Paterson. It is expected that President McKinley and his family will have all the bell-ringing they want in the White House if Hobart Jr. & Co. are allowed full sway.

GARRET A. HOBART, JR.

Grew Worse Under Treatment Till We Gave Her Hood's Sarsaparilla—She Has Rosy Cheeks Now.

"When my baby was two months old she cried night and day, and seemed to be in great pain. She had a discharge from her ears, and the top of her head broke out in scrofulous eruptions. The doctor gave me something to stop the discharge and ease the pain, but his treatment did not cure her and instead of better. The top of her head broke out with scrofula. A crust would form on her head and fall off, taking the hair along with it, and this continued for two or three months, when something seemed to tell me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I did so, together with Hood's Pills and Hood's Olive Ointment. SORE EYES? DR. ISAAC THOMPSON'S EYE WATER

Battles a Wild Goose.

William E. Metcalf, of Niles, Mich., is considered a famous hunter. He has spent many years in that vicinity, and the many spots where game abounds are not unknown to him. He is an absolutely fearless man, and his bravery more than once saved him from being torn to pieces by the fierce denizens of the forest. While Mr. Metcalf loves to relate his many adventures, there is none that he recalls that causes him to shudder so much as a fight he recently had with a male wild goose. One morning he started out with a quail net, which he set in hopes of capturing some of the birds. After accomplishing the setting of the trap satisfactorily he left. The next morning he returned to the scene of his operations, and when he approached within a few rods of the trap he heard a loud cackling. He crept cautiously forward, and when he came in sight of the net was astonished to find that seventeen fine wild geese had become entangled in the meshes, and were unable to get loose. Outside, and free of the net, stalked along a magnificent gander, a lordly bird, and seemingly monarch of all he surveyed. As he came forward the gander eyed Metcalf and then flew at him ferociously. Before he could escape the bird had given him several hard slaps with his wings, meanwhile digging him severely with his feet, and pecking away with his beak at his face and eyes. The man was knocked down by the suddenness of the onslaught of the enraged bird, which did not let up in his attack. Mr. Metcalf thought his time had come, but he finally got hold of a club lying near by, with which he dealt the gander a half dozen blows, stunning the bird. Mr. Metcalf managed to get to his feet, and then easily dispatched the gander, which was the largest ever seen in the vicinity. The hunter's face was terribly scratched and his clothes were badly torn, while he smarted considerably from the blows of the gander's wings. He killed the balance of the wild geese and carried his game home in triumph, though he had had a fierce fight to gain possession. Mr. Metcalf could never account for the attack of the gander, unless it was trying to protect its mates.

"THE MAN WAS KNOCKED DOWN BY THE SUDDENNESS OF THE ONSLAUGHT."

He Got His Answer.

As the train pulled out of Chicago a quiet, gentlemanly looking man entered the buffet car, and, ensconcing himself in a comfortable chair, drew out a long cigar and entered deeply into his paper. He remained so quiet and retained his seat so long that another passenger, whose bearing distinctly stamped him as a commercial traveling man, one of the kind full of chatter and curiosity, could no longer restrain himself. Addressing the quiet gentleman, he inquired: "Traveling East?"

Slowly removing his cigar, the gentleman turned slowly and looked at his questioner with slightly elevated eyebrows, replying, "Yes."

"New York."

"Yes."

"Pleasure?"

"Yes and no."

"Great place, New York. Ever been there before?"

"No."

"I'm going home this trip—New York, you know."

The gentleman made no reply, but resumed his paper. After a little silence the commercial man began again.

"I'm with C. & Co., on Broadway. If you drop in I'll show you over the city."

"Thank you, it will not be necessary."

"Excuse me, but might I ask what you're going to New York for?"

By this time most of the other passengers were interested. The gentleman, who was extremely annoyed at the drummer's curiosity, laid down his paper and exclaimed:

"I'm going to New York, first, because the train is taking me there; second, because I've got lots of money and can afford it; and last, because if I like the place I intend to buy it."

The commercial man susided amidst a roar of laughter.

Negroes Who Speak Irish.

The Irish language still lingers in the Bahamas, among the mixed descendants of the Hibernian patriots banished by Cromwell to the West Indies. One can occasionally hear, it is said, black sailors in the London docks, who cannot speak a word of English, talking Irish to the old Irish apple women whom they meet, and thus making themselves intelligible without a knowledge of the Saxon tongue.

Scoff and Cough.

The man who scoffs at the friendly advice, to "take something for that cough," will keep on coughing until he changes his mind or changes his earthly residence. A great many scoffers have been converted by the use of the standard cough remedy of the past half century,—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. But some are scoffing and coughing yet. They wheeze with asthma, bark with bronchitis or groan with the grippe. Singular, is n't it, the number of stubborn people, who persist in gambling, with health and perhaps life as the stake, when they might be effectually cured of cough, cold or lung trouble, by a few doses of Minor State Items.

Andrews, Wabash County, has received a shipment of 250,000 cobs from Missouri to be made into pipes.

Mrs. Lizzie Wilson, 66 years old, was run down by a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern passenger train at Charlestown. Both legs were cut off and she was fatally hurt.

At Indianapolis, John Reiger, 69 years old, returned home intoxicated. Upon being reprimanded by his wife, he went to the stable and committed suicide by hanging.

All quart shops and other unlicensed places have been closed by Chief of Police White in compliance with the new State law, which will be strictly enforced in Vincennes.

Lawson B. Moore, who was permitted by Gov. Mount to go home to Mitchell from the Prison South to see his dying mother, has been paroled. He was sent up seven years for killing a distiller and politician named Tow.

A terrific battle occurred between Officer Riley and four safe blowers in Huntington. The officer was shot at several times, but escaped unhurt. One of the thieves was wounded by Riley, but succeeded in getting away.

Chas. Walters, young farmer of Morgan County, asked W. H. Wooden to go security on a note in payment for a horse. Wooden refused, but Walters forged his name. The latter is in jail. It is his second offense againt Wooden.

A conference of the representatives of the Presbyterian Churches of Indianapolis was held recently to arrange for entertaining the Presbyterian General Assembly at Winona in May. General Benjamin Harrison will preside.

In Clinton Township, near Greencastle, the 6-year-old daughter of Wesley Horney was burned to death. The children had erected a toy furnace in imitation of the sugarmakers, and the girl's clothing came in contact with the flames.

While the 6-year-old daughter of David Keys was playing in the yard at her home in Montgomery, eight miles east of Washington, she fell into an open cistern and was drowned. Her lifeless body was not discovered until three hours had been spent in searching about town for her.

A pile of burning clothes and human bones burning in a hollow tree six miles west of Greencastle led the neighbors to call the Coroner. He thinks he may have a clue to some mysterious crime. The package was wedged into the hollow and fire set to it. The people are excited.

Dr. Hezekiah Smith, pioneer of Shelby County and founder of Smithland, aged 77, was out driving, when he was seized with a paralytic stroke and fell out between the buggy wheels. He was found out of his mind and may not recover. He has practiced medicine for many years.

Rev. Hinshaw, who was transferred to the Prison North from Jeffersonville, is to be given Winnie Smith's place in the hospital, where he will help operate the Bertillion system of measurement of newly arrived convicts. Hinshaw is given the place because he is a life-time man, and being well educated will make a valuable assistant to Dr. Spinning.

Henry Dinges, a cigarmaker, 48 years old, was found in his room at George's Hotel, Indianapolis, having taken morphine with suicidal intend. He was divorced from his wife four years ago, and under order of court paid so much weekly alimony. Dull times made it difficult to comply with the order of court, hence his despondency. He was the father of five children.

Intense excitement prevails at Alexandria over the striking of oil in the well sunk by a company from Lima, Ohio, of which M. Zimmerman is President. It gushed out at the rate of fifty barrels a day when shot. It has been plugged, and tanks will arrive soon. Contracts have been already let for drilling 25 wells and a large influx of oil speculators is looked for at once.

At Washington, the brick graded school building, one of the best in Southern Indiana, burned to the ground. The loss is $60,000, with $31,000 insurance. Over 700 children were in the building when it caught fire, but all got out in safety. The tower, which is fifty feet high, fell with a great crash just as the last line of pupils passed out. The building was the pride of the city.

Mrs. James Bell of South East street, Indianapolis, returning from a shopping expedition down town, was surprised as she neared her home to see smoke and flames issuing from the porch, and hurrying through the gate, she found her 12-year-old daughter, Margaret, almost denuded of clothing, burned to a crisp and in a dying condition. The blackened body was scarcely recognizable.

While Thomas Mockford and Jacob Koonz were in Patrick Ward's saloon on North Senate avenue, Indianapolis, Ward offered to sell them a revolver. Mockford attempted to examine the weapon and it was discharged, the bullet striking Koonz in the abdomen and causing a wound likely to prove fatal. It is claimed that the shooting was accidental, but Mockford has been locked up pending further inquiry.

Patents were issued to Indianians as follows: Maranda Earnould, Stewartsville, jar-holder; Charles Deweese, Fletcher, swinging gate; Anda H. Calhoun, Plum Tree, fire escape; William C. Myers, South Bend, triturating and mixing machine; Ralph S. Paxton, Arcadia, reversible pulley; Charles H. Shank, Noblesville, wrench; Martin O. Southworth, Indianapolis, dynamo electric machine; Melvin H. Tyley, Muncie, lifting jack.

The National Tin Plate Company of Anderson, has decided upon the location of an Eastern six-mill plant. Youngstown, Ohio, gets it, in consideration of a large bonus. The plant will handle Eastern trade and the Anderson plant the Western trade, thus curtailing freight.

John Hartman, while fishing in the St. Mary's River at Fort Wayne, found on his hook a small bundle of clothing, in which was wrapped the body of an infant. A twelve-pound stone was tied about the little one's neck. Physicians assert that the babe was born alive and had been in the water less than twenty-four hours.

Jack Paige, Zack Pollard and Ben Bass, all colored, were arrested on the charge of burglarizing the residence of Judge S. M. McGregor of Brazil. "Why, of course; we're always glad to accommodate our subscribers."

The Code of Patches.

The old code explaining the significance of a patch on a certain part of the face was as follows: "The "impassioned" patch was fixed at the corner of the eye; the "gallant," in the middle of the cheek; the receleuse (or receiver of stolen goods), on a spot or pimple; the effrontee, or bold-faced, on the nose, and the "coquette" on the lips. A round patch was called "the assassin." The great Masillon preached a sermon in which he anathematised patches. The effect produced by his discourse was rather unexpected; patches were worn in greater number than ever and known as mouches de Massillon.

Horse Flesh for Food.

The number of horses consumed in France each year is now about 120,000, and of this number 24,000 are sent to Paris. In 1868 only 2,500 horses made their final appearance in the guise of beef. Of the 120,000 now consumed it is, of course, impossible to say how many are eaten in ignorance of the fact that they have probably once been between the shafts.

An Appeal for Assistance.

The man who is charitable to himself will listen to the mute appeal for assistance made by his stomach, or his liver, in the shape of divers dyspeptic qualms and uneasy sensations in the regions of the gland that secretes his bile. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, my dear sir, or madam—as the case may be—is what you require. Hasten to use if you are troubled with heartburn, wind in the stomach, or note that your skin or the whites of your eyes are taking a sallow hue.

Unlucky Arm.

An army chaplain at Gosport has just broken his right arm for the fifth time. He did it once while skating, twice by being thrown from a horse, once by tumbling off a bicycle, and the last time by falling out of his dog cart.

The mistletoe is a true parasite, formerly never growing save on the branches of oaks in moist situations. Of late years it is extensively raised in greenhouses, the crushed seeds being placed upon slabs of bark in situations as nearly as possible approximating its original habitat.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Hair Cutting Is Unknown.

The tonsorial art finds no favor among the Malays; and the Latookas, one of the native tribes of Africa, are never known to cut their hair. They weave it into most wonderful shapes, a process which is said to occupy several years before it is fully completed. The thick, crisp wool of the male is woven with fine twine made from the bark of a tree, until it represents a network of felt. As the hair grows it is subjected to the same process and trained into the shape of a helmet. A rim of about two inches deep is formed, and the front part of this hair helmet is protected by a piece of polished copper, while a piece of the same metal, shaped like the half of a bishop's mitre and about a foot in length forms the crest. The helmet is then adorned with numerous vari-colored beads.

Alabastine.

Chicago Inter Ocean, Feb. 23: Readers of the Inter Ocean have often seen Alabastine prominently mentioned in these columns during many years past. The main counting room on the first floor of the building was daintily and beautifully decorated with Alabastine, both walls and ceiling, seven years ago, and has been nicely cleaned five times, though badly smoked each year.

The same room has just been handsomely redecorated in freehand Alabastine modeling in the delicate tints and other Alabastine work, and the effect is very beautiful, even surpassing the original work of seven years ago.

The original Alabastine (the hot-water kind) supplied nearly all demand for ready-made wall coatings throughout the whole of the United States for sixteen years.

This is the same as the original except being in form adapted for use in cold water. Alabastine is a cement that forms permanent coats, admits of recoating from time to time without removing its old coats, and hardens with age.

A man should be virtuous for his own sake, though nobody were to know it; as he would be clean for his own sake, though nobody were to see him.

"When I Saw —your advertisement,

I thought that it was probably like the announcements of many other makers of harvesting machinery—big blow and little show; but I'm ready to surrender; go ahead, gentlemen, you're all right; I bought one of your binders last season and it is equal to any claim you ever made for it."

This is the condensed essence of what Mr. Thomas Carney, of Washington Court House, Ohio, has to say about the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator Harvester and Binder. The claims made for McCormick Machines are strong claims. That's because

McCORMICK

Machines are so constructed that strong claims for them are justified. The machine you want will cost you more than the other kind, for the simple reason that it is worth more; that's all — there's no other reason — and in the end you'll be glad you paid the difference, because there's nothing cheaper than the best.

The village doctor felt the boy's pulse and then said: "Let me see your tongue!" When that was shown he said: "It's white! It's coated!" and then he gave the mother half a dozen little things that looked like chocolate lozenges. "Let him take one now and another before he goes to bed to-night." Next day the boy was as good as new and went in swimming three times, and when the mother determined to know what medicine it was that cured so quickly, the doctor honestly told her

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered: accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The reverend gentleman has probably never been in the grand stand with the bases full in the ninth inning when the last batter up for home team struck out, and gave the other fellows the game.

It was fitting, therefore, that the world-wide popularity of these pills should be recognized by the World's Fair medal of 1893—a fact which emphasizes the record:

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

It Meets In Richmond, May 11, 12 and 13—A One-Cent Railroad Rate.

The Grand Army Encampment, Department of Indiana, meets this year in Richmond. It begins on the evening of Tuesday, May 11, and continues Wednesday and Thursday, the 12 and 13.

The Richmond people are making elaborate preparations to receive the veterans and their ladies and friends, and a successful meeting is assured. Fortunately a railroab rate of one cent a mile each way has been secured from all lines entering that city, and this will doubtless add largely to the crowd. These tickets are good going on May 10, 11 and 12, and good returning to and including May 14.

Richmond is one of the most picturesque and beautiful cities of the State. An interesting program has been arranged for the entertainment of visitors. Ample accomodations have been secured at reasonable rates for all who choose to go. The grand street parade will occur on Wednesday. This is expected to be of special interest. One of its special features will be the chorus singing of over 2,000 schoo children, who will be placed in one large group at some convenient point on the line of march. A number of beautiful street arches, with electrical effects for evening, will also add much to the charm and interest of the occasion. Governor Mount has accepted an invitation to be present, and a number of other distinguished ex-soldiers and citizens are expected. Let the cry once again be, "On to Richmond."

SECOND GEORGE WASHINGON.

In all the selfishness growing naturally out of a great civil war like the late rebellion, it is refreshing to find a few, who were actuated by no other than patriotic motives, at the time nation was in distress, and who lived up to this principle in al the years since the trouble was over and the nation strong and rich. We quote to this effect, the following from a Washington correspondent, who is reliable:

"It appears that Mr. Harrison, the sugar refiner of Philadelphia, who was nominated as consul-general to Cairo yesterday, is a personal friend of the khedive. He has spent considerable time in Egypt since his refinery was absorbed by the trust, and hunted, fished and been on yachting parties with the khedive many times. Three or four yeras ago he sent his head groom from Philadelphia to Cairo to become master of horse in the royal stables, and the khedive made Mr. Harrison a present of a beautiful white steed as an acknowledgment of this courtesy. In return last year he sent the khedive a magnificent American hackney for a birthday present. They have exchanged letters frequently for several years, and it is said to have been on the khedive's suggestion that Mr. Harrison applied for the American consulate.

Mr. Harrison is distinguished in another respect. He served four years one month and eleven days in the United States navy during the war—from July 6, 1861, to Aug. 17, 1864—and participated in all the expeditions and engagements in the gulf and the Mississippi river. At the same time he had a substitute in the army, who originally entered the service as a private, but was mustered out as a captain. Mr. Harrison not only paid him a handsome salary for serving in his stead, but insured his life for a considerable sum for the benefit of his family, and kept up the premiums. Mr. Harrison refused from the beginning to draw pay for his own services, and did not receive a cent from the government for the entire period. He is said to have been the only person in the army or navy during the war, except the Count of Paris, who did not draw pay.

Cause of the War.

It is now believed that Russia has a good deal to do in bringing on the war between Greece and Turkey. While claiming to side with Turkey it is now thought Russia only did this, to encourage the Turks to go to war. Then, in the accompanying troubles, which would naturally extend to Turkish provinces in Europe, lying close to Greece, the Russians would have an excuse to interfere "to keep order" as those provinces are also near the Russian border. In this way, Russia could occupy them with a part of her big army, and when the war was over, they would hold a province or two, to "secure peace on the frontier." This would in the end become Russian territory. Russia has for a century or so, been pushing southward to get all the Turkish territory in Europe that it could. Before the war of 1877 between Russia and Turkey, the Russians owned but little territory south of the Danube. At the close of that war they were occupying the provinces almost to Constantinople, and had it not been for the interference of other European powers, they would have gobbled up all the Turkish territory in Europe, except perhaps a small portion around the city of Constantinople. Russia however, got all the provinces from the Danube south to the Balkans, or else had them made neutral territory. Now, she is looking for a new chance, to get the rest.

Another cause of this new war, is the bad management of the Turks in Crete. Their home government got short of money, and put extra burdens of taxation on the Cretan poeple, the most of whom were Greeks. And as they have for many years been in a state of half rebellion against their Turkish rulers this last burden set them wild. And when the Greeks at Athens sent troops to help the Cretan rebels, Turkey felt it her duty to fight. She is many times stronger than Greece, and the Turks are splendid fighters. But they have for centuries had bad rulers and this has gradually weakened the nation, and injured its armies.

Throat Coughs

Is there a tickling in the throat? Do you cough a great deal, especially when lying down? Are you hoarse at times? Does nearly every cold you take settle in your throat? These "throat coughs" are very deceptive. Don't neglect them. Troches, or cough syrups won't touch the spot. You must take remedies that will enrich the blood, tone up the nerves; and heal the inflamed membranes.

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites contains such remedies. It has wonderful nourishing and healing power. The cause of the cough is removed; the whole system is given new life and vigor; and the danger from threatening lung trouble is swept away.

ELECT A CAPTAIN

Says Special Order No. 30, from Adjutant General Gore.

Since Major Kuhlman appointment to Battalion Major, 3rd Infantry the Rifles have been without a captain and have been subject to orders from First Lieut. J. F. Lahnum, commanding. The long looked for order arrived this morning and the election will take place on tomorrow, Friday night, at the Armory. There will also be a first and second Lieutenant elected. Every member of the company is requested to be present. Following is the order:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., April 21st, '97.

Special Orders No. 30.

1. The commanding officer of Co. K. 3rd. Infty. I. N. G. is hereby ordered to hold an election to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Capt. A. L. Kuhlman to be Battallion Major 3rd. Infty. and such other vacancies as may occur by reason of such election, in accordance with Sec. VI. R. & R.

II. Major Kuhlman is hereby ordered to retain control of the property for which he, as Captain, was responsible to the State of Indiana, until the newly elected Captain has executed his bonds to the Quarter-master General, when Major Kuhlman will turn the property over to him, taking the Captain's recipt therefor, in duplicate, one copy of which he will forward to this office.

By order of the Governor,
JAS. K. GORE,
Adjutant General.

Major A. L. KUHLMAN,
3rd. Infty. I. N. G.

Saturday's Daily.

The election of a Captain and First Lieut. of Co. K. passed off very smoothly at the Armory last night. First Lieut. Frank Lahnum was the only candidate for captain and received the unanimous vote of the forty members present for that responsible position. In a neat little speech he thanked the boys for the confidence they had placed in him in selecting him their captain and promised to do every thing in his power to promote the best interests of the company. For First Lieutenant the names of Herman Lobmiller, Joe. Grover and Geo. Clark were announced and on the first ballot Mr. Grover was elected to the honorable position of First Lieutenant. He was almost overcome with joy and expressed his appreciation of the honor bestowed on him by treating the boys to Victor Joe cigars as did also Capt. Lahnum. Company K. has an excellent set of officers and if the members will do their part the company will be in a flourishing condition.

At the meeting of the Rifles at the Armory last night, Major Kuhlman announced that he would appoint Sergt. John C. Noel, of New Era as Battalion Adjutant. This is one of the staff officers Major Kuhlman has to appoint and the selectoin of Mr. Noel is evidence of the confidence bestowed in his ability. He has been a member of the company since its organization five years ago and he deserved the high honor conferred upon him by the Major. The other appointment, that of Sergeant-Major, will not be made for a short time yet at least as Major Kuhlman desires to give this place to a man he thinks is capable of filling it. There seems to be several applicants, but we judge from the remarks made last night to the company by the Major, that he wants a man who can do both the clerical and field work. There are members of the company who could do one or the other all right but the appointment will be given to a man who can do both, if a man outside of the company must be selected, and no one can blame Major Kuhlman for being careful in selecting this second member of his staff. However we have great faith in Major Kuhlman's ability and believe he will select only such a man as he believes capable of doing the work satisfactorily to himself, and to do that, others no doubt will be satisfied.

WHAT ARE OUR YOUNG MEN WORTH?

Fathers and mothers, whose sons are yet boys,
Whose future will bring you your sorrows or joys,
What are your young men worth—what do you say
What are your young men worth, Parents to-day?

Business and commerce, where hustle is needed,
And truth and veracity, or else be impeded,
What are our young men worth—what do you say
What are our young men worth to you to-day?

Cities whose sites may be buried for sin,
And only be known by the history of their men,
What are our young men worth—what do you say
What are our young men worth to you to-day?

Nations and States, whose future depends,
Not upon laws, but entirely upon upon men,
What are our young men worth, what do you pay?
What are our young worth to you to-day?

Answers come back from nations and states,
From parents and commerce, from cities great gates;
"Much are our young men worth, much we say.
Much are our young men worth to us to-day."

Then rule out the vices, nip wrong in the bud,
Let boy's eyes behold not, except what they should
Much are our young men worth, much we say;
Much are our young men worth to all to-day.

P. S.

Young Ladies, excuse us; for you we will say
Young men are worth much, and you, more than they.

J. G. PLOWMAN.

THE EXPONENT!

This is a bright little school magazine published at Waterloo, once a month, and filled with special articles prepared for it by local talent. It is also devoted to the interests of the schools there. But the most interesting feature of it, is the fact that it is edited and printed by three lads, we should judge ten to thirteen years of age. These are the firm whose style appears on the cover as "Bonnell Bros. & Willis." Their names are Arthur Bonnell, Howard Bonnell and Frank Willis, jr. The work is all done by them, and with their material, and it would puzzle an expert to discover that it was not done by a professional printer. The boys have done all this work without in the least interfering with their regular lessons in the school, of which all are members. This may look impossible to some boys, who hardly think they have time even to attend school as it might interfere with their principal avocation—what J. Whitcomb Riley calls "jes chaw terbacker." But the COURIER has a warm side for boys who try to do and to be something. We hope to see the firm of "Bonnell Bros & Willie" succeed.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. Thrush an Aged Lady Expires at her home this forenoon.

Mrs. Thrush, an aged and highly respected lady who lives on Fourth street between Jackson and VanBuren passed peacefully away at about ten o'clock this forenoon. She has been sick for a long time with consumption. No one was present at her bedside except Mrs. Lawrence and the hired girl Her remains were cared for until her son from Butler township arrived and took charge. The arrangements for her funeral will be made and announced later.

Mrs. Sarepta Thrush, widow of the late William Thrush, died at her home on Fourth-st Friday, April 23, 1897. She was born Oct. 30, 1830, thus living to the age of 66 years, 5 month and 23 days. She was married to Wm. Thrush Dec. 25, 1856, which union was blessed with 8 children, two of whom, Albert the present trustee of Butler township, and Ira, are the only ones left to survive her. The rest of the children all died in infancy. Mrs. Thrush has been in rather delicate health for many years, and for the past year or two she has been practically an invalid suffering almost constantly with lung trouble. During all her sickness she was patient and uncomplaining, hopeful for change of health for the better, yet never expressing any fear of death. She was anxious, however, to live at least until after Ira had completed his course of study in electrical engineering at Purdue University, the graduation of which is to take place the last of June this year.

Wherever Mrs. Thrush has lived, her kind and generous nature, her sympathy for the sick and distressed and her christian words of encouragement to all, gave her many admiring frieads. She was a member of the First M. E. church of this place and when her health would permit was a regular attendant at all the services. The funeral will be held at the M. E. church to morrow, Sunday, at 1:30 p. m., the pastor, Rev T. M. Guild, officiating. Interment at Huntertown, Indiana.

CLEMENS WOLF.

ACCIDENT ON THE B. & O.

Thursday's Daily.

There was a freight wreck on the B. & O. about a mile this side of Garrett at two o'clock this morning. It was caused by a long draw bar being pulled out. It ran into the ground in such a way as to throw the cars off the track Nine cars were derailed and considerably injured. No lives were lost or any one injured. But trains were all delayed a little. Fortunately there is a double track from Garrett to Auburn Junction, which will enable trains to run much sooner in case of accidents like this.

MAIL SACK FOUND.

Yesterday, Sam McAnally, at the Junction had a queer experience. He had missed one or two of his chickens, and set out to hunt for them. When they lose a chicken down there they never know whether it is merely lost, or whether it has not become a sort of silver lining to some hobo's stomach. For Auburn Junction is noted for the multitude and appetite of her stock of hobos. Sam failed to find his chicken. But his search led him over into the "bull pen," or triangular inclosure of Sherm Hollister's land within the three railroads. He got through the high fence in some way, and in looking about, saw something lying near the fence next to the B. & O. tracks. He went to it, and found it to be an empty mail sack. It had evidently lain there some time as it was blackened and mildewed. It is likely that some night train had thrown the sack off onto the platform, and gone on and left it, as usual. There is no night agent for either of the three roads, and the target man, goes after the trains depart, gets the mail sacks and cares for them. It may be that, while he was busy signalling the trains through that in the short time the sack lay there, some hobo spied it and threw it over the fence. After that it would be easy to watch the chance to get through and empty it of whatever it contained. There has been but little trouble of this kind there lately, but formerly mail sacks and express packages often were lost there. Now, the express company has a man to look after its packages, but except him, there is no one there all night but the target man. It does seem as if the three roads could afford to keep at least one man there to accommodate the public and care for property.

WHO LEFT IT.

Levi Jackson and his son Delbert, were in town Saturday, and to the COURIER man related the story of a queer find. Friday evening when Mr. Jackson went to the barn to do the chores, Mrs. Jackson went along, to look up some chickens and on looking under the barn, she saw a dark looking object she could not well make out, and called him to see what it was. It was brought to light and proved to be the oil cloth apron to a buggy or carriage, almost new. It had been nicely folded by some one, and put carefully under the barn and left. But by whom, or why, is the question no one can answer. Mr. Jackson will not object if the fellow brings the whole buggy and leaves it there, next time. In the meantime Mr. J. will hold the property, and if the chap who left it there will come up, pay for this notice and prove property, he can have it.

GRANITE WARE DAY.

People Thronged the Store from Early Morn,

This was a great day at Brown, Culbertson & Boland. They had advertised Saturday May 1, as the day they would sell granite ware at tin ware prices. And they did, and hundreds were made happy. People got up unusually early, and many a husband was surprised that he didn't have to call his wife more than three times, to get up. And as soon as breakfast was over, the procession began, and continued to move Brown—Culbertson—&—Bolandward all day. And on the return it was noticed that each had collections of the much sought utensils in one or both hands. In fact the sales were not confined to Auburn and vicinty, but extended to surrounding towns, including Hicksville, LaOtto and Albion. In addition to the usual force of salesmen, Mr. Boland came over from the auditor's office, and Clerk Long from the clerk's office, and all took a hand at the work. And there were a number of lads employed to help deliver the goods. It may be that in the far future, there will appear a triple monument in Woodlawn inscribed,

"Erected by the Grateful Ladies of DeKalb County, in Memory of the Men, who on the First day of May, 1897, sold us the popular Granite Ware at Tin Ware Prices."

And on the other side, a tablet,

HOC LOCO JACENT SEPULTUS

ET BOLANDIBUS.
REQUIESCAT IN PACE.

Leighty vs Spencer.

There is a tendency to remove Mr. Spencer as pension agent at Indianapolis on charges preferred against him. For with no charges made against him, he will hold on till some time next fall or the full four years. The particular thing that has been urged against him is, that he turned out republican clerks when he went in, and appointed democratic clerks. As that is the very thing Mr. Leighty will do when he gets in, except that he will chop off democratic heads, we do not see why republicans are kicking. As far as anyone has ever heard, Mr. Spencer has been a good officer, and Mr. Leighty will do an unwise thing, if he takes part in this move to oust him before the four years expire. If he does this, and the democrats should have the next president, then a part of Leighty's four years would be chopped off, and there we are, at the old partism racket again, and no one to blame for it but the republicans. We hope to see officials of all departments, hold their positions till their commissions expire.

From Kansas.

Simon McEnterfer at Russell, Kansas, writes us, that he got back home safe and sound, reaching there March 26. He found the folks all well. He writes they have had a very wet spring, which is greatly to the advantage of the farmers out there, as it puts the ground in fine shape for cultivation. The outlook for a good crop of wheat is very favorable, and if no other bad weather comes on, they will have an extra big harvest. This is all the more encouraging to them as the most of their lands were put out to wheat, and not much ground was saved for any spring crop. Fruit prospects are good, and all kinds of fruit trees are in full bloom. He also said that unimproved land can be bought for $5 to $10 per acre. Well improved farms are worth from $20 to $30 per acre. It depends a great deal on the location, water, and the distance from market. Wheat is worth 65 cents, oats 20 cents, barley 30 cents and corn 25 cents.

AYER'S PILLS

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these pills every night."—G. W. BOWMAN, 26 East Main St., Carlisle, Pa.

CURE CONSTIPATION.

NASTY NEWSPAPERS.

Dunlop, the publisher of the Chicago Dispatch, who was sentenced over a year ago to go to the penitentiary two and a half years lor sending obscene matter through the U. S. mails, has to start to-morrow. He has been using every possible influence to gain time, and finally asked the President to pardon him. Failing at all points, he was on Friday, just starting with the sheriff, for Joliet, where their penitentiary is, when a telegram came, saying he might have four days in which to settle up his business. He is still running his paper. The charge on which he was sent up, was for admitting obscene advertisements such as assignations for meetings of low characters, etc. But the real trouble seems to be that he levying blackmail on people. He or his assistants would find out a scandal on some wealthy man, then put it in type with big headlines, then take the proof sheet to the one who was shown up in the article, and scare him into paying a sum of money for suppressing it. The price ranged from $25 up into the thousands according to the wealth of the party concerned.

And this makes us recall the case nearer home. Charles Glessner was tried in Ft. Wayne last week on a similar charge and sent to Michigan City for two years. He was the Ft. Wayne correspnodent for the vile Kansas City Sun, and it appears was in the habit of using Dunlop's plan to find a scandal against a prominent man, then threaten to publish it, unless paid a good sum of money. He at last found a man who fought back. This was Valorous Brown of Columbia City. Glessner had expected Brown to pay big money to have a scandal surpressed, Brown refused, and brought suit against Glessner and his partners for blackmail. At one time the Kansas City Sunday Sun had correspondents in nearly every little town over the country. There were several in this county, and they published nothing but the vilest matter, and the innocent were hit about as often as the guilty. It is to be hoped that these convictions will rid the country of such vermin as these lewd newspapers and their corrupt correspondents. But we do not expect it will do much to purify the Garrett Clipper. It is wedded to its idols, and its idols are wedded to it.

Something to Depend On.

Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with LaGrippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from first dose, and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it Free trial bottles at Robbins & McCord's rugstore. 5

NEGRO LYNCH LAW.

Colored Men Avenge a Terrible Crime in a Summary Manner.

For three murders, for outraging two girls and burning down the humble home of their victims, incinerating their bodies, six, and perhaps seven, negroes suffered the death penalty at the hands of a mob.

The other night a mob of negroes took from the room at Sunnyside, Texas, where they were being guarded, Fayette Rhone, Will Gates, Lewis Thomas, Aaron Thomas, Jim Thomas, Benny Thomas, the four latter being brothers, and Will Williams, all negroes, and hanged the first six named to an oak tree. The seventh was hanged but has disappeared. The negroes all confessed to having murdered Henry Daniels, an old negro, his step-daughter, Marie, and a 7-year-old child, burning the bodies of the two oldest by setting fire to the cabin where the crime occurred, and throwing the little one's body into a well.

Old man Daniels had the proceeds of a robbery which the Thomas boys committed, and they demanded it of him under pain of death. They outraged the grown girl and 7-year-old girl then killed both.

Twenty Victims.

Guthrie (O. T.) special: At this time it seems certain that the loss of life in the flood stricken valley of Cottonwood will not exceed twenty. All of Friday missing people supposed to have been drowned, were found clinging to bushes or driftwood down the stream on the west bluff, or scattered in farm houses for miles. Daylight found dozens of people clinging to trees, overturned houses or timbers in perilous positions, which they had sustained all night. For miles along the scene of devastation 1,500 people, homeless, half ill from exposure and hunger, having passed a miserable night, were found, most of them too weak to give much assistance either to themselves or others. The scene in the flood-swept district is one of desolation.

Hanna Gives $10,000.

Senator Mark Hanna has decided to donate $10,000 to a fund which is being raised for the purpose of erecting a public library of Lisbon, Columbiana County, Ohio. The Lisbonites, it seems, recently secured a donation of $5,000 from a wealthy lady residing in the place, but the fund grew slowly nevertheless, and they were almost in despair when their hopes were revived by the news of Mr. Hanna's donation. Lisbon was his native town.

Two Little Corpses Found.

A box containing the bodies of two infants was found in a deserted stone quarry near Bellevue, Pa. The box was securely fastened and a membership card of the Canton, Ohio, branch of the Young Men's Christian Association was tacked on the lid. The babies had evidently been dead several days and lime had been placed over their remains to hasten decomposition.

Curfew Bill Vetoed.

Gov. Pingree has sent a message to the Michigan Legislature vetoing the Donovan curfew bill, the purpose of which was to keep children off the streets after 8 o'clock at night. The Governor says such laws have long since been abandoned by enlightened nations as intertering with personal liberty and are a step backward toward the dark ages.

Perish in a Tenament Fire.

Four persons lost their lives in a fire at 1278 Third avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. The dead: Mrs. Celia Barnett and her two children, aged 3 and 5 years; Mrs. John Newell, aged 38 years. Before she was suffocated Mrs. Barnett threw her two children out of the window into the street. The injuries they received resulted in their death soon afterward.

Five Persons Burn to Death.

MANY STARVING IN CUBA.

Babes Found Dead in Their Exhausted Mothers' Arms.

Private letters to Havana from the interior of Cuba report wholesale starvation. Some of the cases are especially heartrending. Children are dying in the streets of Matanzas and babes have been found dead in the arms of their exhausted mothers. A correspondent who has been through the province of Pinar del Rio has seen whole villages of living skeletons, in bark huts, praying for death to release them from their suffering. Gen. Weyler is seizing the cattle of the citizens for the use of the troops in Santa Clara. Rafael Rubio, an American citizen, lost twenty-one head of cattle in that way. When he complained to the Spanish authorities and demanded pay for them he was told that he was impudent to ask Spain to pay for what the insurgents take with impunity. A guerrilla corps raised and armed and mounted by Spanish cattle owners of Sancti Spiritus went out and drove in 200 head of cattle to be slaughtered for the benefit of the needy people of the city, but Weyler ordered all the meat sent to Manzanillo for the soldiers. The effect of concentrating the country people in fortified towns is seen in all its awfulness in Las Villas, as the Cubans call Santa Clara province. It means "the towns," Santa Clara having many cities. Five of the cities are of large population. There were 350,000 people living in the five districts, of which these five cities are the capitals. Of this population 150,000 lived outside of the cities and villages. All these have been compelled to leave their farms and move into the cities and fortified towns. In some of the latter the people from the country districts outnumber the original population. They have no money and if they had there is not food enough to supply all who need it. Bark huts have been built in low-lying places and they are crowded with poverty-stricken refugees. They are half naked, sick from exposure and dying of hunger. They are peaceful, hard-working people. On their farms they would be not only self-supporting but able to supply plenty of vegetables, eggs, meat and fruit to the starving people of the cities. Under Weyler's policy of concentration the whole 350,000 persons are suffering and 150,000 are doomed to die for lack of food, which they could easily obtain if allowed to work. In some of the smaller places in Las Villas the overcrowding is terrible. Sitiaclato, before the order was given, had 100 people. It now contains 1,000, including soldiers. The farmers ordered in have built 250 huts, and are slowly dying off. There are a dozen places like this in the province. Weyler has had all the cattle killed in the fields by the guerrillas. Not a pound of meat can be brought in except for the troops. Not a druggist dares sell any drugs or fill a prescription to be taken outside the regular fortified towns. If a grain of quinine for a suffering wretch goes out it means death to the sender if caught. The insurgents in arms are much better off than the concentrated pacificos.

DEATH OF T. A. HAVEMEYER.

Vice President of Sugar Trust Expires at New York.

T. A. Havemeyer, vice-president of the sugar trust, died at 3 o'clock Monday morning in New York. Mr. Havemeyer returned a few days ago from a trip to St. Augustine, Aiken and Old Point Comfort. Changing from a warm to a colder climate, he took cold and the grip rapidly developed. Physicians thought the patient's condition was not at all serious, but Sunday night Mr. Havemeyer's condition changed for the worse. Mr. Havemeyer was a member of the sugar refining firm of Havemeyer Bros. He also acted as consul in New York for Austro-Hungary. He was the grandson of the Havemeyer who founded the great sugar industry which he and his brother have inherited. Although an American, Mr. Havemeyer was really more of a foreigner than a Yankee. He lived most of his years abroad and was decorated by the Austrian emperor with the Order of Leopold. For twenty-five years he was consul general of Vienna. Mr. Havemeyer was vice-president of the sugar trust. He was born in New York City in 1839. He was a brother of Henry O. Havemeyer, the president of the company. He was worth something between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. Mr. Havemeyer added to his millions money made in the banking business and by wise dealings in real estate. He lived in a palace on Madison avenue, New York.

WELCOMES ALL CREEDS.

Uncle Sam Will Permit Each to Erect a Chapel at West Point.

Secretary Alger has made the following statement of the policy of the War Department as to chapels on the West Point military academy reservation: Much has been said about the building of a Catholic chapel on the grounds of the United States Military Academy at West Point. This was a privilege accorded these people by my predecessor, who said that similar privileges should be accorded to others. You can state that any other denominations wishing to build a chapel on the grounds upon the same conditions will be given an equally advantageous site for the building. No favoritism will be shown to any denomination, and others will be accorded a site equally as good as that of the Catholic chapel.

Abandon the Battle.

At Ottumwa, Iowa, the river rose a foot during Sunday night, and is now higher than at any time since 1876. The damage will be enormous. The Burlington road, which had been kept open with a mighty effort, gave up at 11 o'clock, cutting off main line communication between Chicago and Denver. Of the six railroads the only trains moving were on the Wabash, from the south, and the Milwaukee, from the north. Even the right of way fences in many cases are out of sight on the Rock Island and Burlington roads for miles. It is believed the tracks are washed entirely away. Even when the water recedes it will take days to re-establish communication. All near-by towns report conditions as bad. The water flowed across the business portion of South Ottumwa, and people were in a panic. Hundreds of men were put to work on the levee at the west end of the city.

Lives Washed Out.

A terrible flood in the Cottonwood river suddenly ingulfed West Guthrie, O. T., shortly after sunrise Wednesday morning. There is reason to believe that fully a score of persons were drowned. Hundreds were driven from their homes and many houses were swept away. It is the most appalling disaster that ever befell the city of Guthrie.

Spain's Fairy Tales.

A dispatch from Havana to the Epoca of Madrid says that the number of insurgents in Cuba who are submitting to the Spanish authorities increases daily. The military authorities are preparing to send 3,000 additional troops to the Philippine Islands.

Louis William of Baden Dead.

Prince Louis William August of Baden, brother of the Grand Duke of Baden, died Tuesday at Carlsruhe. He was born in 1829, and was a general of Prussian infantry and president of the first chamber of the grand duchy of Baden.

Centennials His Scheme.

Col. Jesse Peyton died at Haddonsfield, N. J., Wednesday morning. Col. Peyton was popularly known as the "Father of Centennials," because it was he who conceived some of the biggest celebrations of historical events in the country. Probably the first was the centennial of American independence celebrated in Philadelphia in 1876. It was in 1865 that he conceived this and planned the preliminary meeting in Independence Hall. Later celebrations proposed by him were those of Bunker Hill, Yorktown, the Constitutional, and New York. His latest scheme was the celebration in 1900 in Jerusalem of the birth of Christ by all Christian nations. This latter was the pet of his heart and he hoped to live to see it come to fruition. He was connected with many minor celebrations, aided in the bi-centennial of Pennsylvania in 1882, and was ever patriotic and public spirited. Col. Peyton was born at Forest Retreat, Nicholas County, Ky., on Nov. 10, 1815. He organized at Riley's Hill the first cavalry regiment to reach Washington in the war of the rebellion and organized the Third and Eleventh regiments of Pennsylvania, in all about 40,000 men. He never received a dollar for his service. He counted among his acquaintances many of the men whose names are written high on the scroll of honor of the country. He had lived for years a quiet, unassuming life in Haddonsfield.

DEBOE LANDS THE PRIZE.

After a Battle of Many Months, Kentucky Elects a Senator.

W. J. Deboe was on Wednesday elected United States Senator from Kentucky. the vote stood:

Deboe ..... 71 Stone 1
Martin ..... 12 Blackburn 36

After the official declaration of the election of Deboe there were such loud demonstrations that even the telegraph offices in the jobby had to suspend business and only the bare ballot could be sent out. The excitement was intense, as it ended a contest that has been waged since last year. Senator Blackburn and his friends, after fighting hard for over a year in the regular and the extra sessions, went down with their colors flying. The silver Democrats conceded their disappointment and the gold Democrats joined in the jollification. There never was such a scene in the Kentucky State House. Senator Deboe proceeded to Washington at once with his credentials, to assist in reorganizing the United States Senate, and in the passage of the tariff and other measures on which the lines are closely drawn.

MINES POUR OUT WEALTH.

California's Yield of Gold and Silver Greater Last Year than in 1896.

The statistician of the United States mint in San Francisco has just forwarded to the director of the mint at Washington the annual report of the gold and silver production of California, which covers the yield of 1896. According to returns received at the mint, the gold yield of that State last year was $17,181,562, which is an increase over 1895 of $1,847,245. The yield of silver was $422,436, a decreased production for the year of $177,353. The total gold and silver product of the State for the year was $17,604,026, which is a total increase over the previous year of $1,669,918.

HORSE MEAT CANARD.

Report Still Works Harm to Beef from Chicago.

The canard concerning alleged shipments from Chicago to Europe of horse meat disguised as salted beef is still circulated harmfully in Europe. United States Consul Boyesen, at Gothenberg, has just furnished the State Department with a copy of a circular issued by the Swedish Government officially calling attention to the report and requiring a medical inspection of imported meats. He adds that he informed the custom house officials that meat imported from the United States under the stamp of the Department of Agriculture was sound and free from disease.

Greeks Meet Reverses.

By force of superior numbers the Greeks were forced Saturday to abandon Larissa. King George started in person to command his forces, which will make a stand at Pharsala, a town which is flanked by rocky hills. The Turks captured vast stores and several field guns at Larissa. Sunday Great Britain took the initiative in a move by the powers to stop the war. Italy, France and Germany agree to the suggestion.

British Cabinet Meets.

The fact that a cabinet meeting was held at London Tuesday morning before the return of the Marquis of Salisbury, is held to indicate that matters of urgency are under consideration.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

THE WEEK'S DOINGS IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Comprehensive Digest of the Proceedings in the Legislative Chambers at Washington—Matters that Concern the People.

Lawmakers at Labor.

The House Friday completed the consideration of the Senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill and sent the bill to conference. The main contention centered about the Senate proposition to open the Uncompahgre Indian reservation under the mineral land laws. Finally an amendment was recommended to the effect that no corporation should be allowed to obtain possession of these gilsonite deposits, but that the Government should lease the lands in limited areas and for limited terms of years. The Senate amendment striking from the House bill the provision for the ratification of the oil and gas leases made by the council of the Seneca Indians last December was disagreed to. A resolution was adopted by which a committee of twenty-five was appointed to attend the dedication of the Grant tomb in New York on Tuesday, and the House agreed to a program of three-day adjournments.

The Senate chamber had a deserted appearance when the session opened Monday. Mr. Harris of Tennessee was at his desk for the first time in many weeks, and was congratulated on his recovery from a serious illness. In the absence of the Vice President and President pro tem., Mr. Frye, Mr. Nelson of Minnesota occupied the chair. Dr. Milburn's opening prayer made eloquent reference to the gathering of thousands to pay tribute to the great chieftain, Grant, and invoked that the glow of patriotism freshly enkindled may strengthen our nation, our Government and the Union of the States. When the Indian bill was reported back from the House an effort was made to send it to conference, but Mr. Gorman objected, saying it had been understood that no business whatever was to be transacted. Thereupon, at 12:05 p. m., on motion of Mr. Morrill, the Senate adjourned to Thursday.

The question of whether business was to be done by the Senate was raised by Mr. Pettigrew Thursday. Mr. Pettigrew proposed that the Senate direct a conference on the Indian appropriation bill. A message from the President transmitting the report of the commission to adjust the boundary line between the United States and Mexico west of the Rio Grande was read. Mr. Quay presented a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Interior for information as to whether the leases of the Senecas' oil lands had been made in the usual manner and whether there had been any corruption. It was agreed to. Mr. Pettigrew followed with a resolution calling on the Commissioner of Labor for information as to the cost of producing 1,000 feet (board measure) of white pine lumber, the answer to include the cost of work in the woods and in the mill, both in the United States and Canada. This was adopted, with the addition of a question concerning the cost of stumpage. The House was in session seven minutes. The journal was not read. Both houses adjourned to Monday.

BOGUS MONEY MINTS.

TWO ARE UNEARTHED IN MICHIGAN TOWNS.

One Operated on Premises Owned by a Prominent Citizen—Product Disposed of Broadcast—Has Given Uncle Sam Much Trouble.

Homes of Counterfeiters.

Out of the arrest of John Hill, alias Wilson, made Saturday by the Chicago police, came Monday the discovery of a counterfeiting plant which had been in active operation for three years and which the Government had spent $5,000 trying to find. It was located in Benton Harbor, Mich., in the cellar of the residence of one of the most respected men in the town.

By the light of tallow candles, officers of the United States secret service groped about in the cellar until they collected in a pile every article of the plant. They then transferred the mass to a train bound for the headquarters in Chicago. Capt. Porter, grimy with the long search and almost exhausted, followed it into the train. He arrived in the city a few hours later. Once there, he declined to show the apparatus or to say what had become of it.

The owner was not at home when his house gave up its long-kept secret. Neither was he at any of the Benton Harbor clubs, which he has frequented as a man of leisure for three years. He could not be found in Benton Harbor at all, and the only clew to his whereabouts which the secret service officials could obtain was a vague rumor that he had recently departed for Chicago.

While the search in the Benton Harbor house was going on another was in progress in a rickety shanty twenty-four miles north of Niles, Mich. This was being conducted by Policeman Tully of the Harrison street station. It was successful. Bushel basketfuls of molds, acids and metals were found. This is supposed to be a sub-mint of the one in Benton Harbor.

John Livingstone of 139 Lincoln avenue, Chicago, met an old acquaintance in a Clark street saloon, and shook dice with him. He won considerable money, but upon leaving discovered that he had been given counterfeit silver dollars. He reported the matter to the Harrison street police, and later Detectives Shea and Tully arrested John Hill, who gave his name as Wilson. Livingstone said he had known him for twenty years; that his family resided in Willow Springs, and that formerly he resided in Benton Harbor, Mich.

Capt. Porter of the United States secret service was given the case. To him Hil is alleged to have confessed that he was disposing of the product of a Michigan counterfeiting mint. The police went to Niles, and Capt. Porter, with Detectives Inslow, to Benton Harbor.

The product of these Michigan plants, it is said by the Government officers, has been spread broadcast over the country, and has caused the Treasury Department no end of trouble. Only the silver dollar of 1881 was counterfeited. The work was so well done that experts could scarcely detect the bogus nature of the coin. For the reason that several arrests remain to be made, Capt. Porter declines to discuss the case, but what is accomplished is considered the most important effected in years.

THE FLOOD SITUATION.

Iowa and Illinois Towns Suffer from the Deluge.

Advices from Ottumwa Tuesday morning said:

The Des Moines river is higher than ever was known before and fifteen inches higher than during the famous flood of 1892. All small streams in southern Iowa also are out of the banks. Bridges are gone, communication by highway cut off, and railroad traffic almost at a standstill. The Chicago and Denver line of the Burlington is cut in two by five miles of inundated track. The Rock Island has five miles of road under water west of the city. The Milwaukee roundhouse yards and several hundred feet of track are under water. Part of one approach to the bridge has been taken away. The Kansas City line is cut off entirely. The Iowa Central is running no trains. The Wabash can get in from the south, but cannot get out going north except over the Milwaukee and Rock Island tracks through the eastern part of the State. Damage to railroad property is incalculable. Nothing will be known until the water recedes.

Eddyville, eighteen miles north, is under water, with 150 houses vacated. The people have been riding in the main business streets in boats. In Ottumwa no less than 300 families were compelled to move and many were rescued in boats, so rapid was the rise. At South Ottumwa, where 5,000 people live, the river flows parallel with the main street. It broke across this street and poured down residence and business streets, causing a panic and a scramble for higher lands. Most household goods and stocks in stores were saved.

In Central addition the water is up to the roofs of houses. In Stiles addition the water is five feet deep in the main street. In Shickville, a western suburb, the water is up to the eaves of houses, and has moved several from their foundations.

Water in Fairview stands four feet deep in the fair ground, and nothing but right of way fences can be seen along the Burlington and Rock Island tracks. Both above and below the city farms are flooded. In some places the water has a width of five miles.

At Quincy, Ill., the Mississippi flood made the situation alarming Tuesday. Live stock by the hundred head have been drowned, and in most places the water was eight or ten feet deep.

The town of Alexandria was all under water except a narrow strip of land about twenty feet wide and 500 feet long, and the whole population of the town camped on that little island. Steamboats took them off as fast as possible. The town of Canton, Mo., was also submerged. At Keokuk, Iowa, 500 families were made homeless. Mayville, Mo., was waterbound.

Three bridges were washed away by the breaking of a 1,000,000-foot log jam and gorge on the Ammicon river, twelve miles from Superior, Wis. The greatest damage was done to the iron bridge at the head of the St. Croix river, the loss being about $9,000. The damage to the other bridges and the loss of logs will aggregate $20,000. It is feared that several million feet of logs, which are now tied at various points along the stream, will be lost.

The Chicago Great Western was completely tied up between St. Joseph, Mo., and Des Moines. Bridges are washed out near Afton Junction. The company maintained service to Kansas City, however. The Hopkins branch of the Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs was washed out near Barnard. The main lines of the Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs and Hannibal and St. Joseph roads were not broken at any point.

Amid imposing ceremonies the corner stone of the Trans-Mississippi exposition arch of States at Omaha, Neb., was laid. There was a long parade of military and civic societies.

George Grove, living near Fairview, was found dead at his home, with a revolver near him. He had been despondent since his mother's death, and suicided.

Albert Carpenter was appointed receiver of the Superior Radiator Company of Elwood. The recent purchase of the Etwood Iron Works floored it. Bond $20,000.

Leister Linderman, aged 12 years, of Bourbon, kindled fire with what he supposed to be coal oil, but which proved to be gasoline. Linderman was burned to death when found.

Thomas Jones of Jeffersonville, while trying to board a moving freight train on the Big Four route, failed to catch the handle and was thrown down an embankment. He will die.

William Lutz of Brazil, aged 74 years, a veteran of two wars and a pensioner, was instantly killed on the Otter Creek branch of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad by a freight train.

Mrs. George W. Weyburn, a widow of Goshen, jumped into a cistern and was drowned before help came. Her husband died, a few days ago, which made her so disconsolate that she did not care for life.

President L. H. Gedge authorizes the statement that the reports sent from Elwood that the American Wire Nail Works would move from Anderson to Elwood are erroneous. The plant employs 700 hands.

George W. Boyd was sentenced to from one to three years by Judge Barnard of New Castle, for stealing chickens. The Judge and the convicted man were old playmates, and it was a sad duty to sentence him.

The Prosecuting Attorney of Clinton is about to begin action against the various card clubs of Frankfort that have been playing cards for prizes all winter. The preachers have been making attacks on the practice.

A monstrosity was born in Shelbyville in the shape of seemingly one kitten—either one kitten with four bodies, four heads, four tails and sixteen legs, or four kittens joined together at their hips and otherwise perfectly natural in form.

Brant Matthews of Dark Hollow, six miles northwest of Bedford, attempted suicide by shooting himself. The bullet entered the abdomen and went through his body. It is claimed that grief over a relative's action prompted the act.

Miss Christina Hooker died, aged 78 years. Miss Hooker taught the first school ever held in Evansville. Nearly every resident of that city has at one time been her pupil. She had charge of the early training of ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster.

The Standard Oil Company has decided to make Bedford a general distributing point for the Southern Indiana district. Three steel tanks of 20,000 gallons capacity and a storage depot of Bedford stone will be erected. The aggregated cost will be $10,000.

At South Bend lightning struck the residence of Fred Milke, scattering the chimney over the yard and paralyzing the members of the family. The 4-year-old daughter was thrown out the doorway and lay in the yard for several hours before being discovered by a neighbor, the parents not having recovered from the effects of the shock.

Throughout the northern part of this State reports are that sheep are dying by hundreds. A few days ago the Indiana Live Stock Commission made a trip to the districts ravaged by the malady, and held post-mortems on a number of dead animals. The disease is a new one to veterinarians, and thus far no remedy has been discovered. In the case of every animal it has attacked it has proved fatal.

The body of W. L. Lange of Fort Wayne, one of the victims of the terrible White River wreck on the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad, several weeks ago, has been found about a quarter of a mile from the scene of the disaster. His is the first body of the five or six victims of that accident to be recovered. The body was buried in the sand below shallow water near the bank. The body was identified by a photograph.

The tramps who have been giving Bedford and the county so much trouble of late were attacked at their rendezvous, near Horseshoe, by farmers, and badly beaten with clubs. The attack was the direct result of their supposed attempt to wreck a train near Bedford, though much poultry as well as small stock have been lost by the farmers and several barns have been burned. All these and many other crimes are charged to the tramps, who number about sixty.

A few years ago there were sixteen toll roads in Allen County. They have all been purchased by the county except two. Recently the owners of these two roads began suit against several farmers who live along the roads who refused to pay toll. The other day a number of farmers appeared at the city gate of the Maysville pike, tore it down and demolished it and drove the keeper and his family out of the toll house into the road and locked up the house. Suits for trespass will be brought against them at once.

A novel suit at law was tried in the Circuit Court of Goshen. It was submitted by Elkhart attorneys over the telephone, and witnesses examined in the same manner, Judge Warner deciding in favor of the plaintiff, Edwin E. Drake vs. Louise M. Strong and others to quiet title.

Jesse Tetrick and wife started to Elwood with their 3-months-old baby, which appeared in the best of health. It apparently went to sleep. When they arrived at the home of Mr. Tetrick's father the mother handed the babe out to its grandmother, when it was found to be dead.

A valuable horse owned by George Geves of Peru, in some manner unaccountable got its tongue through the boards of its stall and its mate grabbed it with its teeth and held on until the tongue was pulled out by the roots. The injured horse was shot.

Five suits have been filed in the Brown County Circuit Court against the estate of John H. Wilson, claiming $5,000 penalty in each case, or a total of $25,000, for falsely listing his property for taxation in Brown County. The complaint alleges that the defendant, now dead, was for five years preceding his death the owner and possessor of $10,000 in gold and paper money, which he kept continually strapped about his person in a belt.

CARE'S SLAVE.

It was the budding May-time,
The white boughs overhead;
"Oh, give to me some play time,
Good Master Care," I said.
I saw his head begin to shake:
"Not now; just wait and see,
I'll give you a holiday
When planting's done," said he.

It was the glowing summer;
How cool the woodland's shade!
Again an eager comer,
"Oh, give to-day!" I prayed.
Old Master Care his forehead knit;
"The grass is ripe to mow;
Work on till haying time is past,
And then I'll let you go."

It was the glad September;
The maple leaves were red;
"Oh, Master Care! Remember,
You promised me," I said.
"And you will find," he answered me,
"I'll keep my promise true,
And you may sport when harvest's done,
With nothing else to do."

Now winter's winds are blowing—
(How weak I feel and old!)
And by the hearth bright glowing,
I shiver with the cold.
And Care sits down beside me,
And counts up one by one,
The tasks that I have done amiss,
Or I have left undone;
While I, low muttering to myself,
Wished I had laughed and sung,
And had my share of honest joy
When I was strong and young.

CAPTAIN STORMS

Captain Storms put the glass to his eye, and took a long look. Far on, black against the silvery horizon line, that shapeless speck showed. What was it? Captain Storms' prolonged survey ended, he slowly dropped his glass, and turned to Mr. Scott, the mate.

"I knew I was right," he said; "it is a wreck, a dismantled hulk, drifting about at the mercy of wind and sea. There may be no one left aboard, but we'll bear down and have a look."

And then Captain Storms lifted up his voice—a stentorian voice it was—and gave the proper orders to the man at the masthead, or at the helm, or somewhere—I don't know exactly. I would tell you the precise words which Captain Storms used on this occasion, if I could; but I'm deplorably backward in nautical matters. So you'll have to be content with learning that the gallant bark, the Lovely Lass, bore straight down upon that dark mass, outlined against the sunny sky.

Captain Storms leaned over the side and lit a cigar. He was a bronzed young man, stalwart and gallant as I take it sailor men mostly are! and he looked the very beau ideal of a dashing seaman, in his off-hand seafaring costume. He had a beard, and he had a mustache, big and brown, like himself; and, from the crown of his glazed hat to the sole of his boots, Captain Storms was a sailor, every inch of him.

The Lovely Lass bore down along the sunlit tropic sea and reached that floating wreck. Captain Storms was the first man to hear the moaning cry of a faint human voice. No living thing was to be seen; but from a corner of the deck that faint, plaintive cry wailed.

"There's some one alive here still," said Captain Storms. "Speak, friend! Who are you? Where are you?"

Again that unspeakably mournful wail. Captain Storms strode across to where a heap of torn canvas and rotten wood lay, and looked down. There in the garish sunshine, with her face upturned to the serene sky, a woman lay dead. Crouching over her, a skeleton child, with long, wild hair, sat making that feeble moan of dumb agony.

"My child!" Captain Storms said, pitifully "my child, what is this-"

The ghastly little creature lifted a bloodless face and a pair of haggard eyes.

"Mother's dead!"

"My poor little girl," said the sailor, bending over her as tenderly as that dead mother could have done, "you must come with me, or you will die, too. Come!"

She rose up—a frail little shadow of ten years—and held up her skeleton arms.

"Peace is hungry," she cried, piteously. "Peace is sick and cold, and mother's dead."

And then as the strong arms lifted her as though she had been a wax doll, the blue eyes closed wearily, and the weak baby drooped heavily against his breast; and hunger, and sickness, and cold, and death were all blotted out in blind darkness.

And for weary days and weary nights—while the Lovely Lass sailed along the southern seas, and the dead woman lay quietly under the great Pacific—the little rescued waif lay fluttering between death and life. And during these endless days and nights, the big sun-browned sailor watched over his little girl as a father—nay, as a mother—might have done, until the fluttering spirit ceased its struggles and grew calm in strength and health once more.

Little Peace—her name was Priscilla Weir, she said; Peace for short—came up on deck by-and-by, pale and weak still, and lisped her story to the soft-hearted sailor.

"There had been a great storm—oh a dreadful storm!" Peace said, with a shudder; and they went away in boats—all the men did—and mamma was sick down in the cabin, and left behind; and Peace stayed with mamma and was left behind, too. And then mamma came upstairs on deck, and died; and Peace sobbed, and was so ill and so cold; and then you came," looking gratefully at the captain, "and Peace doesn't remember any more."

"Does my little Peace know where mamma came from, and where she was going?" Captain Storms asked.

"Yes, Peace knows. Mamma came from New York and was going to China to papa. Papa lived in China and was rich."

But that was all she could tell; and Captain Storms knew that among all the unlikely things on this earth, the most unlikely now was that papa and his little girl would ever meet.

The Lovely Lass spent nine long months on the Pacific coast, and then sailed back for America.

"And I shall leave my little Peace behind next voyage," Captain Storms said. "I have a sister who keeps a school in Philadelphia, a fashionable young ladies' academy—and Peace shall stay there and learn to play the piano, and talk French and paint pictures, and grow up a pretty young lady."

"And I shall have silk dresses and lots of pictures and story books!" Peace asked, with interest.

"Heaps of 'em, Peace! And nice little girls to play with, and music, and dancing, and everything beautiful all the day long."

Peace clapped her hands—that would be lovely. So, by-and-by, when Philadelphia was reached, the captain of the Lovely Lass consigned his little girl—a willing captive—into the hands of Mrs. Lee. Not but that she shed a few tears at parting, too, and clung to the sailor's neck, and was very sorry when it came to the last, and the good-by kiss was given.

"There—there, my little Peace!" Captain Storms said, unclasping the clinging arms; "you mustn't cry like that; it will redden your eyes and swell your nose, and make you look ugly. Keep up heart, little Peace; I will come back in a year or two with a cartload of lovely presents for my little girl. Kiss me again, and let me go."

Captain Storms imprinted a sounding smack on the wistful little tear-wet face, and unwound the clasping arms and walked off, and straightway was whistling cheerily along the deck of the Lovely Lass, and quite forgetful, I am afraid, of his little Peace and her grief.

"Dear, good guardian," thought Peace; "he's so kind and so good-natured; and it was nice playing on the deck of the Lovely Lass; but, for all that, I had rather be here and wear pretty dresses, and play with Mrs. Lee's boarders, and never be afraid of shipwrecks any more."

Captain Storms sailed for New Zealand; and on windy nights, when the doors and windows rattled, and great soughs came down the chimneys, Peace lay awake, and thought of him on the terrible ocean, and said her simple child's prayers for his safe keeping.

Two years went by, and Peace had just one letter from "guardy" (guardian) in all that time, and that one to say he was coming back. She was a tall, rather awkward looking schoolgirl of twelve now, with preternaturally long limbs, that were always in her way; high shoulders, and prominent cheek-bones. And so Captain Storms found her when, more bearded and sunbrowned than ever, he walked, with his sea-swing, into Mrs. Lee's prim parlor.

Peace sat at the piano singing, "My Willie's On the Dark-Blue Sea," and, with a shrill cry of joy, she jumped up, and flung herself headforemost into his blue pilot-coat.

"Oh, guardy! dear, darling guardy! I'm so glad to see you again! So glad—so glad!"

"And so am I, little Peace. Don't choke me with those long arms, my girl. Heads up, and let us see you."

Peace lifted her flushed face and kissed him ecstatically.

"Why, how my little woman's grown, getting as tall as the mainmast, by George! and as thin as a shadow. Don't they give you enough to eat Peace?"

"Plenty, guardy; but growing girls are always thin—Mrs. Lee says so. And now, what have you brought me from New Zealand?"

"Bushels of things, Peace. They'll be here by-and-by. How does the learning progress? Let us hear you at the piano."

Peace sat down and rattled off polkas and waltzes.

"And I can read French, guardy," whirling gayly round on the stool, "and draw pencil drawing, you know, and do fancy work. I like everything! And, guardy, when I grow up and am a young lady, and my education is finished, I want you to fit up the cabin of the Lovely Lass with a Brussels carpet, and a piano, and heaps of new novels, and take me to sea with you all the time until I'm an old woman, won't you?"

Of course, Captain Storms devoutly promised, and rose up to take his leave.

"I'm going to China this voyage," he said, pulling her long, brown braids. "If I see papa, I'm to give him his little girl's love, I suppose?"

"Ah! if you only would see him!" Peace cried, clasping her hands. "Darling papa! Guardy, he used to be in Hong Kong, I know. Try if you can find him for me when you go there."

Captain Storms promised this also and departed. Peace clung to him sobbing at the last.

"You'll write to me often this time, won't you, dear guardy? You only sent me one little stingy letter last time, you know."

"All right, Peace," the captain said. "I'll try. I never was much of a scribe, but this time I'll do my best."

So once again the captain of the Lovely Lass left this little girl, to sail merrily over the world; and once more Peace went back to her horn-book and fancy work.

But the months strung themselves out, and the years rolled slowly backward, and Captain Storms, sailing to and fro in golden eastern and southern climes, never came to take this little girl from school. His letters were few and far between, despite his promises, only six in six long years, and in answers he had at least received sixty.

But the sixth and last announced his coming, and told her the wonderful news that he had met her father in Hong Kong, and that she must be ready to go with him next voyage to China.

Captain Storms, hale and brown, and handsome despite his middle age, rang Mrs. Lee's door-bell, and strode, like a sun-burnt giant, into the boarding-school parlor.

"But of course she couldn't know I was coming," he thought, as he sent up his name; "poor little girl. I hope she'll be glad to see guardy."

The door opened and a young lady walked in. A tall and stately and graceful young lady, with a dark, handsome face and waves of sunny brown hair. Surely, surely, this was not "Little Peace."

"My dear guardian, welcome back! Oh, how happy I am to see you once more!"

Yes, Peace, beyond doubt; but, oh, so unutterably changed. Captain Storms reddened under his brown skin, and actually stammered.

"You surely know me, I see," she smiled brightly. "I dare say I have grown out of all reason. Am I taller than the mainmast now? I was almost as tall, if you remember, six years ago."

She recollected what he had said all these years, and Captain Storms' face beamed.

"I expected to find my little Peace and I find a young lady so stately and womanly that I am at a loss what to say to her. I'm not used to ladies' society, you see."

She laid her hand on his arm, and looked up in his honest sailor face with deep, sweetly shining eyes.

"Talk to me as you used to, and call me Little Peace. Ah, guardy, how I have longed for your coming. And my father—tell me of him."

Captain Storms told her how, by merest accident, he had met, how he was rich and lonely, and longing for her, but unable to come to America; how she was to return with him, and that the steward of the Lovely Lass was to take out his wife with him to wait upon her. And Peace listened, like one in a peaceful dream. It was being a heroine—it was living a chapter out of one of her pet novels, to romantic Peace.

So they sailed for that far-off celestial land of tea and pig-tails. Captain Storms and his handsome ward. And Peace had her fairy dreams realized, and there was a Brussels carpet in the cabin, and a piano, and lots of new novels; and she was as happy as the days were long. Her music filled the Lovely Lass with sweetest melody; her clear voice rang out over the purple midnight sea, in songs sweeter than the siren strains of the mermaids; and her beautiful face lit up the grim old ship like the summer sunshine itself. Peace was bright and bewitching, and happy as a bird. The sailors adored her as an angel of light; and the captain—ah, the captain!—adored her too. Sailing along, by day and by night, through days of amber sunshine and nightsof misty moonlight, to that distant land, Captain Storms, in his 42nd year—old enough and big enough to know better—fell madly desperately and ridiculously in love. He lost his sleep and he lost his appetite; and he hung on a girl's foolish words, and existed only in the radiance of a pair of laughing girlish eyes.

"Fool that I am for my pains!" he thought, sometimes, in bitter moodiness; "I am more than double her age; and I am rough and black and weather-beaten as the timbers of my old ship. No, no, Harry Storms; the only wife for you, my boy, is the Lovely Lass."

And yet, sometimes he wildly hoped. She talked to him so happily, she smiled upon him so sweetly, she was ever so glad when he came, so regretful when he went. And girls of 18 had married men of 42 before now; and, oh, why should it not happen again, and Harry Storms be the most blessed among men?

They reached China—they reached Hong Kong—and Peace was folded in her father's arms.

"So like your mother," he said, his tears falling. "Oh, my child! So like your lost mother."

Captain Storms was to stay three weeks in the Celestial City—to visit it, perhaps, never again. He made the most of his stay; visiting Peace every day in her palatial home, and growing moodier and moodier every visit. Peace, too, drooped a little, and looked at him wistfully, and lost some of that bright happiness that made her the light of all places. And when the last day came, and he stood up to say good-by, she broke down altogether and cried like a very child.

"And I shall never see you again," she said; "you who saved my life! Oh, Captain Storms, must you go?"

And then that bashful giant took heart of grace, as a landsman would have done weeks before.

"I must go," he said, "but we need not part, my darling Peace, if you say so, for I love you dearly; and if you will be my wife, we will sail together, for ever and ever, as you once wished, until our heads grow gray. Mine is not so far from it now," he added, ruefully.

But Peace had thrown her arms impetuously around him, and kissed the dark, crisp locks.

"And if every hair were white as the foam of the sea, I should love you, and go with you, just the same. Why, Captain Storms, you have been my hero all these long years; and I should have died of disappointment, I know, if you had left me behind."

So the China merchant lost his daughter, and the Lovely Lass had a second commander; and in all the years to come Peace will reign perennial in the heart of Storms.

Useful Tattooing.

Why should we not all of us be identified from youth upward by a tattooed mark? ask The Boston Home Journal. Men who travel have often found difficulty in getting checks cashed in strange places and women who entertain are frequently taken in by "distinguished guests," who prove to be any persons except the distinguished ones expected. A tattoo mark, registered somewhere and placed on record so as not to be imitated without punishment from the law, would be every bit as useful on human beings as the brand is on cattle.

Human beings, when disassociated from their usual attire and surroundings are distinguished from each other with even more difficulty than attends the picking out of a particular cow or horse from a large number. It was Thomas Hughes who declared that a man would refuse to recognize his best friend if the latter was set down in ragged clothing at a street crossing—and he was right. Men escape justice easily by just such simple devices as shaving the mustache or growing a beard, and the lady in stageland who isn't recognized by her own family merely because she puts on a different colored dress is not unknown in real life. A Philadelphia man has been discovered with his name and address tattooed on his arm, and he takes great pleasure in getting checks cashed at banks where he is unknown by merely exhibiting his arm.

Properly arranged, the name and address of a fair debutante, with her family crest and a few incidentals added, would not disguise her above-glove arm, and similar markings would be very useful for all the boys who went in for athletics and who desired to be known to the world better than was possible through letters pinned on the back and bound to blow off during the first bit of wind.

POKAGAN AS AUTHOR

NOTED POTTAWATOMIE INDIAN WRITING A BOOK.

His Narrative Will Give the Red Man's Side of the Story of the Chicago Massacre—Calls It a Square and Open Fight.

To Set His Race Right.

In his hut, which stands amid the fire-blasted remains of what was once a great Michigan pine forest, Pokagon, the chief of the Pottawatomies, is writing a book. The aged Indian is toiling early and late, so that before he dies his race may be set right in the world. His narrative will give for the first time the Indian's side of the story of the POKAGON.

Chicago massacre, though Pokagon will reject the word massacre and call it a fight—a square, open, manly fight.

"When whites are killed it is a massacre," he says naively; "when Indians are killed it is a fight. So it has ever been and so it always will be until the last of my color has taken the journey beyond the grave upon which I myself must soon set out."

Pokagon is the son of the chief of the same name who, with Chief Potenee-

THE INDIANS TRAPPED IN THE CHAPEL.

bee, led a party of Pottawatomies at the Chicago massacre. The living Pokagon is an old man and the tale that he will tell the white people of the fight near the cottonwood tree and of the wrongs of the Indians prior to that event—and after it as well—will be given just as he heard it dropped from the lips of his father, called by 500 braves the "Great Chief."

He claims that all the written stories of the Fort Dearborn massacre are wrong. In these it is represented that the Indians killed the whites for nothing but because they loved to spill blood. Pokagon claims that it was a broken treaty that led to all the trouble. Such a sacred compact was made between the soldiers and the savages, when Fort Dearborn was placed in the country that the latter owned. This was violated from the first, Pokagon says. Various goods promised him were never delivered, but liquor was peddled out until his tribe became at times like madmen.

Of Captain Wells, who has been made a great warrior and hero in history, Pokagon has very little to say that is complimentary. According to the old chief, that officer was originally the ward of his tribe, and fought side by side with the braves for many years. His desertion to the whites is characterized as treachery and ingratitude. Pokagon cites a second case, that of Captain Heald, who was rescued from the Chicago fight by the elder Pokagon, removed to a safe covert, tenderly nursed, and who, after promising to set the Pottawatomies straight with the Government and recover their lands, lived over the same old story. "White men's promises are made to be blown away like clouds," Pokagon bitterly comments. He insists that had these been kept, had the soldiers treated them with the most ordinary honor and courtesy, the massacre of Aug. 15, 1812, would never have occurred. The promises to adjust land difficulties were evaded by a distribution of firewater, and the liquor made the Indians ungovernable. The fight went on after the soldiers had marched out of Fort Dearborn, "just as the white men fight to-day when there is war time," Pokagon says. "One white man was shot that day as he was directing his horses to the place where the Indians' children were, so he could kill them, yet they accuse us of bloodthirstiness because their squaws and pappooses were killed in the same fight."

POKAGON'S FATHER AND THE WOUNDED OFFICER.

All this story of the massacre the chief intends to relate before the Chicago Historical Society, which is erecting a monument in commemoration of the Fort Dearborn event. His claims of the provocation and injustice shown his tribe will not rest there, however. The later history of his people is of interest. After the massacre the tribe was sent to a reservation. Here Pokagon and many others became interested in religion, and settled down to a peaceful life. He claims that the ceding of these lands to the Government was a base forgery on the part of crooked-handed Government agents, who were paid large quantities of gold to procure the title. The tribe was ordered to move, but refused to go. The agents were to be paid $50 for every Indian carried away, but resistance checked them. Finally the braves and women were enticed to the little chapel, where they were often invited by the priests. It was just twenty-two years after the Chicago fight. The church was at Twin Lakes, but instead of meeting the soldiers of the cross of Christ, as they had been led to suppose, they met United States troopers armed with guns and bayonets. Completely surrounded and outnumbered, they were formed into marching rank and started on a long, weary tramp towards the setting sun, leaving a trail of blood behind them. From fatigue and want of water old men, women and children fell dead, and were left on the plains to be eaten by the vultures and the wolves. Behind there were left broken families, robbed of sons, husbands and fathers. Two women and children so left alone fled in fright like young partridges, and hid themselves in thickets and swamps until all seemed quiet. In the night time they fled from their homes into the land beyond the great lakes.

Pokagon has already set several points in history right. He has compelled the Government to give $400 to each of the surviving Pottawatomie Indians in Michigan and northern Indian, which was a tacit acknowledgment of the truth of his contention that past treaty obligations had not been fully met. He shows, too, that his father received only three cents an acre for the vast tract covering Chicago and its vicinity. He also has proven that the soldiers evacuated Fort Dearborn of their own free will, and through no governmental order. Pokagon is old, but he has a deal of energy and independence remaining, and he seems to be earnest in his determination to show that his people were not the entire aggressors in the great Chicago massacre.

Greece and the Greeks.

The present agitation of the Greek question has increased the interest of the public in all matters pertaining to the classic country. One of the subjects which has caused widespread wonder is how the modern Greek soldier gives such a ballet-like effect to his skirts. A traveler in that country has offered the following as an explanation: Instead of wrapping his kilt about him only once the man of arms envelops his figure with turn after turn of the stiff white linen, till the required degree of stand-out effect is reached, and his shirt is on a level with his waist. This same traveler remarks upon the curious effect of inconsistency that is evident when a visitor to one of the beautiful old ruins finds himself gazing on only a plaster cast of the classic buildings and structures, while a placard announces that the original may be seen in the museums of Europe or America.

Debts Delayed His Burial.

The case of a burial long delayed has recently come to light at Revel, a Russian town near the Gulf of Finland. The body thus tardily interred was that of a Belgian soldier of fortune, the Duc Charles de Croy, who had been commander-in-chief of the Russian army at the historic battle of Narva in 1700. Made a prisoner during the fight, De Croy took up his residence at Revel, where he died in the course of events; his creditors demurred to his burial, however, until his debts were paid. So the soldier was mummified and his remains have stayed ever since in a church, where they have been exhibited to visitors as a curiosity. Now, at least, amid such pomp as was to be found among the local authorities, he has been given a fitting coffin and properly interred in one end of the vaults of the church.

Taxes.

The Dutch have an original way of collecting the taxes. If, after due notice has been given, the money is not sent, the authorities place one or two hungry militiamen in the house, to be lodged and maintained at the expense of the defaulter until the amount of the tax is paid.

A Primitive Light.

Recent experiments by the curious at Portland, Ore., have revived recollections of a primitive light used in the early days of the settlements along the Columbia River, when the residents called smelts candlefish. The dried smelts burn as well as candles and give off an appetizing odor.

MODERN WARFARE.

Long Campaigns Will Give Way to Single but Decisive Encounters.

Summing up the whole question as between any two European peace-trained armies of the present day, the extreme percentage of loss to be anticipated locally, i. e., on particular brigades and divisions, will not exceed one in three (of which one is killed to four wounded), whereas for whole armies of a quarter of a million and over one in ten is the very outside punishment we may reasonably expect.

Compared to the slaughter of the seven years' war and the best contested fields of the Napoleonic period, this is very little, indeed. At Zorndorf the Russians left 21,000 out of 52,000 on the ground, and this is undoubtedly the bloodiest battle recorded since the introduction of portable firearms. Eylau, Friedland, Wagram and Brodino all exceed the figures of any pitched battle since the breechloader appeared in the field.

Moreover, the horror of the whole thing is not to be measured by figures of percentages only, but by the density in which the killed and wounded lie, and the fate of the latter afterward.

In a modern battle 20,000 men would fall on an area of about twenty square miles; at Zorndorf the 21,000 Russians and 12,000 Prussians lay on a single square mile, and of the wounded not one in three survived; whereas, in 1870, nine out of ten recovered, and the Prussian medical staff anticipated even better results next time.

But death on the battlefield is by far the least of the two evils the soldier has to face. There is death on the line of march, and in hospitals along the road. Whereas formerly, particularly under Napoleon, ten would die by the way for one who fell in action, in the last Franco-German war only one man died of disease for two killed in action. Indeed, the health of men in the full prime of life was actually slightly better in the field than in quarters.

It may, however, be argued that, even granted that battles and marches may be less destructive, there will be more of them, because every able-bodied man being trained by war, the resistance will be more prolonged than formerly, but this prolonged endurance is only conceivable under the supposition that the leaders on both sides are hopelessly incompetent, and both fear to stake all on a single collision—a supposition that nothing tends to justify.

On the contrary, every leader brought up in the modern school is taught to understand the vulnerability of all modern military organizations, and is penetrated with the conviction that one downright "knockout" blow effects more than weeks of purposeless sparring, and where both start determined to bring matters to a climax the decision cannot be long delayed. Judging from what we know of the relative efficiency of continental armies, we believe that the first round of the great encounter will also be the last, for the momentum of the blow which decides will simply paralyze every nerve in the opponent's body, and, adding up all sources of casualties that can occur in a short campaign of this description, we conclude that at the very worst the actual cost in human life to the powers engaged will not amount to more than 5 per cent. of their several populations.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Deathwatch.

In 1863 I had two chums of the name of Seth and Cicero Dodge, who lived down in the forks of 'Coon, about four miles below us. The boys were hauling wood to town, and they told me that the woods down in the forks were alive with squirrels, and that if I would go back with them that evening they would get their father to let them have the next day off, and we would have lots of fun. I went home and got my No. 14 muzzle loader, plenty of ammunition and my dog, and went home with them. Father Dodge had built a new frame house, but it was not large enough to accommodate the family and any strangers, so Cicero and I slept out in the old log house. I shall never for get the scare we got that night. As boys will, we lay there a long time discussing the various propositions that suggest themselves to two boy chums who haven't seen each other for some time. Along toward midnight we thought we discovered the presence of somebody under our bed. To make it more certain, we distinctly heard the ticking of his watch. We became uneasy, for the ticking of that watch was regular and incessant. At last Cicero quietly slipped out of bed, went over to the new house and called his father, who came and investigated. Much to our chagrin the old gentleman soon discovered that the cause of our dread and forebodings was only a deathwatch at work in an old log by the side of the bed.—Forest and Stream.

Van Bibber's Benevolence.

Van Bibber, the favorite hero of Mr. Richard Harding Davis, now and then turns up outside of his chronicler's imagination. Recently, according to the Boston Transcript, he appeared at the Old Colony station, in the form of a prompt, benevolent young man, hurrying to catch his train.

He was approached by one of the professional unfortunates who haunt crowded places, and have a practiced eye for well-dressed and substantial-looking citizens. He wanted enough to pay his fare to Quincy. The appeal met with an instant response.

"Certainly," said the gentleman, "I am going to Quincy myself, and the train is starting now," and taking the astonished beneficiary by the shoulder he dragged him on board, and the cars whirled off.

"But I don't want to go to Quincy," said the man, as soon as he had recovered his breath and his senses, "I wanted enough to buy a drink with."

"Can't help it, this is an express train and doesn't stop this side of Quincy."

The captured fraud had no help for it. He had just what he asked for, and was landed on schedule time in that no-license city, eight miles from a drink, cursing his luck and the too prompt benevolence and superior strength of his benefactor, but impressed by a dawning conviction that even in his line of business a little honesty would be the best policy.

A Tree of Light.

A remarkable tree grows in Brazil. It is about six feet high, and is so luminous that it can be seen on the darkest night for a distance of a mile or more.

SAFETY FOR WINDOW CLEANERS.

A Device that Keeps Them from Plunging Into the Abyss.

With the advent of the sky scraper office buildings has come a new device to protect window cleaners who have to work at perilous heights. The cleaner wears a belt which is attached to a fastening on either side of the window by means of a rope, as shown in the accompanying cut. This device is a safeguard against danger and prevents all possibility of accident in the heretofore perilous occupation of window cleaning. The responsibility for accidents rests upon the owners of the building, and hence the scheme has met with considerable favor. The plan herewith described is one of several devices, now patented, for the protection of window cleaners. Many of the office buildings in large cities are equipped with one or another of these devices.

Chinese Ideal of Beauty.

The ideal of beauty among the Chinese differs as widely from ours as do their written characters from our A B C. Not long since a member of the Chinese legation was looking at a photographic group of decidedly pretty young English ladies, and, being being asked whether he admired them, replied, "No, they are difficult to look at, difficult to look at." As to figure, a willow-like waist and a bending yielding form are the objects of highest admiration in China, and so a character formed of parts signifying "a woman" and "curved" is used to denote beautiful, lovely, comely. Many meanings connected with women are allied with characters which prima facie bear no relation to them.

Facts About Suicides.

The late Sir B. W. Richardson is credited with the following curious information on suicides: The rate of suicides is highest in the last four days of June, and lowest in February; more common among Protestants than Roman Catholics, and rarest among the Jews. It increases with education, and spreads with railways and telegraphs. More men than women are swayed by its influence, and the average of suicides is set down at 12 in every 100,000.

CITY ELECTION

Democrats Carry all the Offices But One.

To the surprise of many, there was quite a full vote polled yesterday, the total counted was 677. At the election in May last year, the vote on the highest pair of candidates was 702. Last year everything went democratic except marshal, the republicans getting that by a majority of 89. This year they get one man, Potter for councilman in Fifth ward, by a majority of 128. Husselman, for clerk gets a majority of 130. Last year he had 132. Vote on treasurer seems to keep even. Last year Jones had a majority of 37, this year for that office Baxter gets 35.

ELECTION NOTES.

The candidates did some pretty good work, but all was fair and in good nature.

From the first, it was plain that Ensley was to be the storm center. It was not that he was so very unpopular, but because Potter had made so many friends and so few enemies. Ensley was a good councilman while he was on the board, but this was long enough ago, that it was forgotten. Potter has been on the board for the past two years, and has been a good member, always careful and always pleasant. Then too, it was recalled that when Ensley was on the Board, he had voted for electric lights, and although that had nothing in reality to do with this election, still it was freely used against him. It had its effect to defeat one good man and put in another. No doubt, in case the electric light matter should come up again, both these men, would vote honestly just as the conditions and needs of the town would dictate.

We feel like complimenting our young friend Milo Husselman on his splendid race. It was no doubt due to the splendid record he has made as a city clerk, for he stands at the top notch. But it was also in part due to the fact that he is a straightforward, good hearted fellow. Every body knows where he stands. For want of time now, we will speak of the new officers to-morrow.

There was as will be seen by looking over the vote, a great deal of splitting tickets, especially in the south precinct. Everybody seemed to feel like voting as he pleased. But there could not have been many mistakes made, in trying to vote a straight ticket by voting for the first man, as the first candidate ran only about ten ahead on total vote.

One man seemed to think he had to make a circle within the one that contained the rooster. So he took the pencil and made a ring clear around the bird, and walked out feeling that he had voted a straight ticket. It was thrown out, as nothing but a cross will do.

The full number of votes cast in Auburn was 700 as there were 21 spoiled ballots not counted. In the middle precinct 17 were spoiled and thrown out 2 in the north precinct and 4 in the south.

In the middle precinct one republican wanted to vote a straight ticket, and he run the blue pencil several times around the eagle, inside the printed circle. He lost his vote.

Another man went confidently into the booth and in half a minute came out with a spoiled ballot, which he promptly burned, and was given another. He spoiled the second one by crossing the eagle, and then crossing two small squares by two democrat canidates.

One man made a straight upright mark on each side of the rooster, but within the circle and lost his vote. Another lost his by making a tiny, little circle right on the eagle.

A few voted for the first candidate only, as often happened under the previous law. These crossed the first name only but not the device. So it counted for only one candidate.

BUTLER.

The mixed or citizens' ticket was elected in Butler. Great interest was manifested though mostly of a local nature. And the vote was almost up to a full one, being on the highest man 537. The marshal and clerk elected are democrats, the treasurer and councilman are republicans. The vote ran very even, and stands:

There was a light vote, but a lively contest. The result is a ticket split between the two parties, with one office a tie. This may be changed by the official count, but if not, the two men will have to draw lots for it. The three old members are republicans. The following shows the total vote:

JESSIE MAE HALL.

The celebrated little actress, Jessie Mae Hall and her company of stars will appear for one night only on May 13th at Henry's Opera House, in her new play "Walkers Ward." She will be remembered as the clever actress who played the opening of the Henry Opera House. Last week the company played at the Temple at Fort Wayne for a second time this season and the managers, have secured the company for a third engagement commencing May 10th. Mr Henry attended the play Saturday night and it was, after much difficulty that the Temple managers Messrs. Smfth & Stodard, consented to the company playing at the Henry on the 13th. None of our theater goers have forgotten this clever actress and her superb company and we predict that the opera house will be crowded to its utmost capacity. The prices are only 15, 25 and 35 cents. Seats on sale at Davenport's drug store, May 11th.

—The Dispatch is way off, as often happens over there, when it criticises the COURIER for saying that Mr. Snowberger was made postmaster at Summitt "in place of Mr. Lawson removed." We did not mention Mr. Lawson, and had we mentioned him, we should not have said he was "removed" as we knew very well he was a republican. The Dispatch ought to read the COURIER more carefully, and then it will not see so many ghosts.

Dayton, O., March 12, '96.—"My baby is two months old and from her birth has had severe attacks of wind colic. I tried almost everything, but nothing gave her any relief until I got Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. I have used two bottles and would not do without it. It surely is the best colic medicine ever made." CORUNNA.

Some of our people were very much excited Saturday afternoon as the cry of "mad dog" was heard from several quarters. A dog owned by Jake McKee, acted strange for several days, snapping at and killing several chickens and also snapping at who ever crossed its path. Some one shot and wounded it and then it did get mad and bit several dogs, and was finally transformed into a dog-on-angel, Wm. Gregg being the hero that performed this noble deed.

We understand Station Master Brant laied his pocket-book down carelessly and some one found it and relieved him of the burden of carrying some of it. The contents about $18 or $20 were taken out and the pocket-book replaced. What's the matter of employing our "private detective," they may aid you Drop a line to No. 56. You will be well pleased with the results.

Wine was served in tin goblets at the Leins tin wedding. Mr. L. is building a dump cart to carry rags and old rubbers in, as he says he has tinware enough to start him into business. He only got a bushel basket full of tin cups and other articles in the shining ware, that was greatly appreciated by Mr. and Mrs. Leins. A good time was reported.

Although Corunna is not the largest town in Dekalb county, still the maxim remains. "Size does not always mean greatness or popularity." This fact was again demonstrated upon our streets Saturday, as at an early hour the teams came pouring into town from the north, south, east and west, and at 9 a. m. it seemed for a time that hitching room for teams would be at a premium, but "there is always room for more," so that all were accommodated. To a stranger the question would naturally arise, why all of this vast crowd in so small a town upon such an unpleasant day, which could readily be answered as follows: The people have never forgotten that Corunna is one of the best grain markets and trading places in northern Indiana, with two large general stores, two first-class drug stores and one of the best equipped hardware and lumber emporiums in Indiana north of Ft. Wayne. One of the best grist mills that can be found anywhere which is doing fine work and giving the best of satisfaction to all of its patrons. Try Corunna flour and be convinced—all other business in proportion. These are a few of the reasons that our streets are crowded on Saturdays, and why the farmers find it to their interest to come to Corunna to trade The Union Central Telephone company have also kept a lookout upon the business activity of this town, and have placed a telephone office at this place, so that you may reach any point you may desire from Corunna by telephone, which is far cheaper and more satisfactory than to send a telegram. The office is located in the hardware store of Milo J. Thomas, and any information in regard to the same will be gladly furnished by calling at the above named place of business.

Important Purchase.

D. A. Garwood, as trustee for the Masonic orders here, has purchased, the Fannie Casebeer property, corner of Ninth and Jackson-sts. The bargain was closed yesterday. The purchase was made with the probability in view, that a new building would eventually be put up. It will, if built be two or three stories high, the upper story to be used as a lodge room, and the first floor a hall for public purposes, such as conventions, farmers' institutes and similar gatherings. Their attention to this site, was called by the fact that business in Auburn must necessarily soon branch off from the main streets, and this is a good location, conveniently situated for all purposes. When built, it will be of brick of course. From our standpoint, it looks like a good investment for them. We understand the price paid was about $1300.

Obituary.

Elizabeth Bailey was born near Spencerville, Nov. 29, 1845 and died at her home six miles south of Auburn, April 26. On August 12, 1866, she was married to John D. Freeman, who died leaving her with the care of two small children one son aged three the youngest in the family, died a few weeks before her husband. Since the death of her husband she has continued to live with her children at her home until their marriage; one daughter married Lewis Weygandt and lives in Fort Wayne, the other married Bert Romine, son of Perry Romine, of Auburn, and lives on a farm of their own. She was converted when a girl and joined the M. E. church of which she remained a faithful member until called to her rest. One of her S. S. scholars has spoken so beautifuly of our aged mother of what she learned from her while in her class. It can be truly be said she rests from her labor and her works do follow her. Her funeral was largely attended although it rained quite hard and the church was crowded. We cannot express in our gratitude to the kind friends who brought such beautiful flowers and placed them on her bier.

Alone, all alone, we are left now,
Alone, only sister and I;
Brother and parents both now are gone
To their home beyond the sky.

Yet we hope again to meet her,
Standing, waiting at the door,
Shining angels gathered 'round her,
Waiting on the Golden Shore.

—Newspaper men are blamed for a lot of things they cannot help; such as using partiality in mentioning visitors, giving news about some folks leaving out others, etc. They simply print the news they can find. An editor or reporter should not be expected to know the names and residences of your uncles, aunts and cousins, even if he should see them off on the train. Tell him about it. It's news that makes a newspaper, and every man, woman and child in the neighood could be associate editors if they would.

—The COURIER reporter had a pleasant chat at the Lake Shore depot last evening with S. E. Manly of Niagara Falls. He is a traveling salesman for a manufacturing institution of that place. The great falls and whirlpool rapids are of but little interest to him. He does not think of walking out for a sight-seeing stroll. Many of our people spend $50 or $100 and ride several hundred miles to see the wonderful freak of nature.

—L. J. Miller, the veteran grain buyer, says but little grain is being received now. He is paying 14 to 18 cents for oats, and yesterday, the 28th paid 88 cents for wheat. There will be a poor wheat crop in this county.

Physicians were called and by their assistance he was finally restored to sufficient strength to get home He is about same now, but still very weak. He has been for some time engaged in placing agents for the Milwaakee Harveter Co. for the sale of their binders. He says the counties north of us have a better showing for wheat than we have here, and will have a good crop.

—Ten bicycles were unloaded at Auburn from the south bound forenoon train to-day. And this is only one line of them, of the many handled here. May be these are the advance agents we used to hear so much about.

—About $2,000 in taxes were taken in yesterday at the treasurer's office. But the work is getting quite slack. Geo. Probst, who has been helping them for some time, has gone home, but Geo Lanning is still assisting.

—Frank Rush has been filling in the parking in front of his residence on west Seventh-st., as it had settled some during the winter. Thomas Sommers has done the same for the G. H. Yesbera residence next west. This will give the grass a better chance, and greatly beautify the property.

—The Misses Mabel and Florence Moore, of Angola, have been visiting their brother, Art Moore, at the Keeran Sisters here. Miss Edna Clark, of Ashley, was also with them here, and all go home on the evening train.

—The Russo-Turkish takeoff we publish to-day, was brought out in the war of 1877 between the Russians and the Turks. Correspondents had broken their jaws over the rough names of persons, rivers, mountains and places on both sides of the disputed boundary. So some genius, gave to the world the witty poem which so well fits the reports from the present war between the Turks and the Greeks. It is very timely. It will also be good exercise for some of our local elocutionists. Read it aloud at the breakfast table.

Thirty years is a long time to fight so painful a trouble as piles, but Jacob Mitchell, of Unionville, Pa., struggled that long before he tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which quickly and premanently cured him. It is equally effective in eczema and all skin affections. Davenport the druggist.

—The Goshen News says:—"The Ariel Cycle company has received another order from Stockholm, Sweden, for 100 wheels. Fifty wheels have already been shipped and the second order for fifty are now in course of construction, and shipment will be made this week. This makes orders for over 200 wheels for Stockholm. Last week shipments were made to London, England, and South Africa, and inquries are coming from Germany and Austria."—The above proves what we have always said that American genius and industry are able to compete successfully with any part of the world, and all this cry about needing protection for our infant industries is a humbug. But it would not surprise us to see the Ariel company asking for a protective tariff to save them from the ruinous competition of the pauper labor of Sweden, etc. etc.

SOCIETY INITIALS.

They had barely exchanged greetings when the man in the ulster exclaimed:

"I say, George, I'm mighty glad I met you. We're just organizing a new society—the R. T. Y. and U.—and I want to give you an opportunity of getting in on the ground floor," relates the Kansas City Star.

"What do the initials stand for?" asked the man with the fur cap.

"Stand for!" exclaimed the man in the ulster. "Stand for!" Why, they stand for the society, of course. We just put the alphabet in a hat and let a blindfolded man pick them out—the regular way, you know. If you speak up quick maybe I can work you in as a charter member."

"Has the society any particular aims?"

"A book full of them. I don't recall any of them now, but we have them all written out and intend to have them printed when we get money enough. It's to be one of these fraternal organizations to help one another—help one another entertain each other, my wife says, and that isn't half bad for a woman. You'd better join."

"I don't believe I can do it," replied the man in the fur cap, doubtfully. "You know I'm a D. F. G. H. now."

"Huh, well, that doesn't cut any figure. I'm a C. V. B. and a U. I. O. of P. myself. I squared it all with my wife by getting her interested and she has now joined the T. G. B., the X. S. W. Q. and the U. J. M. I've also promised to join the I. K. L. and the W. D. V. Z. next week."

Still the man in the fur cap shook his head.

"My wife is alread a Q. S. C. and a D. P. A.," he said, but she said when I joined the Y. J. O. R. K. last week that that made the sixth and six was enough for a man of domestic habits. You see, this doesn't include the card clubs, and it is really becoming quite difficult to keep track of them all."

"Oh, well, if you feel that way about it, all right," said the man in the ulster. "Most of us don't think ten or twelve any too many, but it is your right to draw the line at less if you are not progressive enough to keep up with the times. When it becomes the proper thing for a man to affix the initials of his societies to his name, however, as some scientists do now, you'll feel mighty small."

GREATNESS OF GRANT

STORY OF THE CAREER OF A SOLDIER-STATESMAN.

Hero of Appomattox the Idol of Millions of Mankind—His Humble Birth and Subsequent Rise to Fame—Magnificent Mausoleum to His Memory.

Where His Ashes Rest.

The Memorial services which attended the removal of the remains of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant to their final resting place have revived a grateful interest in that great military leader of the nation. As the President of a free people, the savior of a country, the idol of millions of mankind, the story of his career cannot be told too often to those who knew him as the most commanding figure of his time; or the new generation, which, in the light of a fuller appreciation of his true greatness, venerate him as one of the most commanding figures in all history.

Gen. Grant was born April 27, 1822, in a one-story building of two rooms in Point Pleasant, Ohio, twenty-five miles from the city of Cincinnati. His father, Jesse Grant, a man of revolutionary stock and New England ancestry, was the foreman of a tannery, laboring hard to acquire a competence sufficient to enable him to embark in business for himself. This he did in Georgetown, O., whither he removed in 1823. Here young Ulysses grew up, a sturdy young lad, quiet, reserved, self-reliant. At the early age of 8 we find him breaking bark into the hopper of the bark mill in his father's tannery—a task he did not relish. Less than a year later he regularly drove a team on his father's farm and at the age of 10 he used to drive to Cincinnati, forty miles distant. In winter he attended school in Georgetown, and then in his 14th year he was sent to the Academy at Maysville.

In 1839 came the turning point in his life. He entered West Point as a cadet.

His name up to this time was Hiram Ulysses Grant, but in the making out of his official appointment to the military school the name was written by mistake Ulysses S., and so it has ever since remained. Grant made commendable progress at West Point and had the distinction of being the best horseman in his class. In 1843 he graduated, and was assigned to the Fourth Infantry, stationed at Jefferson barracks, near St. Louis.

During the Mexican war he rendered valuable service, being engaged in every battle except one, and was promoted to a first lieutenancy. After the war he was stationed at various military posts and in 1853 was promoted to the captaincy of a company at Humboldt bay, California. The following year he resigned his commission and engaged in farming and real estate near St. Louis. This did not prove profitable and he secured a clerkship in the hardware and leather store of his father at Galena, Ill.

Here Gen. Grant was living when the civil war broke out. Four days after President Lincoln's call for troops Grant was drilling a company of volunteers and later was made mustering officer. Within five weeks he was appointed colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry and reported for duty to Gen. Pope in Missouri. In August he was made brigadier general of volunteers and Sept. 1 was placed in command of the district of southeast Missouri. He immediately seized Paducah, Ky., thereby saving that State to the Union cause. After the battle of Belmont he advanced against Fort Henry, on the Tennessee river, and Fort Donelson, on the Cumberland. After the fall of the former, the movement against the latter was begun. After three days' fighting Gen. Buckner, then in command of the fort, proposed to Grant that commissioners be appointed to arrange terms of capitulation. Grant's famous reply was: "No terms other than unconditional surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works." The same day the garrison surrendered.

GEN. U. S. GRANT.
How the great military leader appeared a short time before his death at Mount McGregor.

Became Famous.

Grant at once stepped into national fame. The question was everywhere asked, "Is he the coming man?" The hero of Donelson was immediately made a major general, and in 1863 took command of all the troops in the Mississippi valley. The siege of Vicksburg and the battle of Chattanooga made an opening for the national forces into Georgia. Grant, now the hope of the nation, was made lieutenant general by Congress, and by special act was given the command of the armies of the United States. A remarkable campaign was planned and carried out. For each of his brilliant aides Grant mapped out a certain duty. As his own opposing force he selected the army of northern Virginia, under Lee, and the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna and Cold Harbor—the hardest Grant ever fought—attest the difficult task he mapped out for himself. But he triumphed. The surrender of Lee, the paroling of the entire Southern army, ended the greatest civil war in history.

Gen. Grant started for Washington immediately after the fall of Richmond, to superintend the disbandment of the national forces. Everywhere he went he was greeted with ovations, and these continued until 1868, when he was elected President and took a conspicuous part in the reconstruction measures in the South. On the expiration of his first term he was re-elected by the largest majority that any candidate had up to that time received in the nation.

After retiring from the presidency Gen. Grant decided on visiting the countries of the Old World, and on May 17, 1877, accompanied by his wife and son, he sailed from Philadelphia to Liverpool on the steamer Indiana. Never was such demonstration of esteem and respect given a departing citizen. Distinguished men from all over the country assembled to bid him good-by. On reaching Liverpool a reception, hardly inferior to the demonstration that bade him godspeed at home, awaited him. The river Mersey was alive with vessels bearing the flags of all nations. The docks were lined with thousands, all eager to greet the great military genius, the ex-head of a powerful nation and a plain American citizen. In London he was received by the queen and the Prince of Wales and he afterward visited the queen at Windsor. Banquets, balls, receptions and other entertainments were given in his honor and the members of the aristocracy vied with one another in extending courtesies and hospitalities to the great American.

From England he went to the continent, and the greetings there from crowned heads and the common people were such as he had experienced in England. He next visited Italy, Egypt, the Holy Land, India and China. The Chinese paid him the greatest honors that had ever been bestowed on a foreigner. Prince Kung entertained him and he became the friend of the great Chinese, Li Hung Chang. The two were photographed together and to this day Li Hung Chang speaks feelingly of the great American. Nay, more—each Memorial Day Li Hung Chang has a wreath of flowers laid on Gen. Grant's tomb, and when the movement was begun to erect a suitable monument as the last resting place of the general's ashes Li Hung Chang contributed $500 towards the fund. Japan, Cuba and Mexico were visited next in turn, and from San Francisco to the East the general's progress was in the nature of a great triumphal march.

When Gen. Grant returned from his world's tour, his entire fortune did not amount to $100,000. Looking around for a means of increasing his income, his attention was directed to the banking business in which his son Ulysses, together with Ferdinand Ward and James D. Fish, was engaged. Gen. Grant invested his $100,000 in the business. In 1881 he bought a house in New York, where he afterward spent his winters. Affairs moved very smoothly for the general until, in 1883, he fell on an icy pavement and sustained injuries from the effects of which he never fully recovered. And then in May, 1884, came another blow. The firm of Grant & Ward failed, bankrupting the general and the entire Grant family, who had invested their money in the concern. Two of the partners in the business had been guilty of the most unblushing frauds. And then came out the shameful story of craft and guile in all its horrible proportions and it was seen that the honored name of Gen. Grant had been used to decoy hosts of friends and acquaintances to their own injury and his. After a little the world knew that his honor was unsullied. For a time Grant was in actual need of household expenses, but he directed his attention to writing his memoirs, knowing that their proceeds would be all he would have to leave to his wife and children.

Meantime the general's health was failing, and in 1884 severe throat complications ensued. His patience and courage through a weary siege of pain were characteristic of his unfaltering heroism. For weeks he sat propped up by pillows, his limbs swathed in blankets, writing his memoirs. June 9 he was removed from New York to Mount McGregor, near Saratoga, and here for a time the change of air seemed to strengthen him. He continued on his memoirs and four days before his death he completed them. Immediately after the end of the book was reached, the other end was seen to be at hand. The final crisis was neither long nor painful. July 21 the country was informed that he was failing. For two days his symptoms indicated increasing depression and exhaustion, and on the 23d came the end. He passed away without a groan or a shudder, with no one but his wife and children and his medical attendants by his side.

WHERE GRANT'S ASHES NOW REST.

Selecting His Resting Place.

Immediately on his death the question of a suitable resting place for the great warrior became a matter of national concern. Washington wanted the honor of possessing his ashes and so did many other places. Grant himself, at one time, had expressed a preference for West Point, the military academy where he imbibed those principles of war which he afterward put into operation on such a gigantic scale, and in this connection an interesting story is told.

It is said that while Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant were in Europe they paid a visit to the tomb of Ferdinand and Isabella. The thought of the ashes of the royal couple sleeping side by side through the centuries appealed to the devoted husband, and, turning to his wife, he said: "Julia, that is the way we should lie in death." Upon his return to the United States Gen. Grant investigated this subject. He found that there was a regulation governing the United States Military Academy which would prevent the remains of his wife being placed beside him. Otherwise there is hardly a doubt that the Grant tomb, instead of being in New York City to-day, would be in the grounds of the great military school on the Hudson.

Shortly before his death and while unable to articulate, Gen. Grant wrote the following memoranda on the subject of the selection of a grave:

"West Point—I prefer this above others, but for the fact that my wife could not be placed beside me there.

"Galena or some place in Illinois—Because from that State I received my first general's commission.

"New York—Because the people of that city befriended me in my need."

Here Grant was prevented from writing more owing to an acute renewal of his sufferings and he never referred to the matter again.

Riverside Park, in New York, was selected, the preference of the Grant family being for it, and immediately the construction of a temporary tomb for the reception of his remains was begun.

The remains of the great general lay at Mount McGregor, where he died, until Tuesday, Aug. 4, when they were moved to Albany. Here they lay in state until the following day, when they were taken on a draped train to New York, being accompanied by numerous officials and sorrowing companions-in-arms of the dead general. When they reached New York they were borne in funeral procession to the city hall and there they lay in state until Saturday, Aug. 8. Crowds, gathered from almost all parts of the country, viewed the body. President Cleveland and his cabinet; the Governors of numerous States, with their staffs; generals who fought under Grant and generals who fought against him; battle-scarred veterans of the Union cause and men who wore the gray; judges of the Supreme Court of the nation, Senators, negroes, Chinese, high and low, the rich and the poor, the obscure and the prominent—all swelled the crowds that in almost unending procession passed through the city hall to gaze on the pale features of the honored dead. It is estimated that 350,000 persons viewed the remains.

GRANT'S HOME AT GALENA.

The Funeral Pageant.

And when on Saturday morning the funeral procession formed its ranks to march to Riverside Park, New York and neighboring cities had poured forth into the streets of the metropolis more than 1,000,000 spectators and mourners.

The funeral car, wherein reposed the remains of the dead captain, was drawn by twenty-four horses, each with a black net reaching to the ground, and led by a negro. One thousand regular troops, 10,000 of the State militia and citizen soldiery from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut helped swell the military parade. There were nearly 20,000 Union veterans of the war in line and camps of Confederate veterans turned out to honor the man who, great in war, was even greater in the hour of victory and the day of peace. And to show that North and South were united in their sorrow over the grave of a hero two of the great Confederate generals of the war were pall-bearers at his funeral.

As the funeral cortege passed through New York's streets amid the mournful tolling of bells and the muffled sounds of drums, another procession—the naval—moved up the beautiful Hudson until the vessels anchored opposite the tomb prepared for the remains. And there with simple religious services and amid the booming of cannon on the Hudson the body of Gen. Grant was laid in the tomb.

THE GRANT MONUMENT.

A Memorial, in Its Design and Setting, One of the Greatest in the World.

In the interval between the death of Grant and his interment a Grant Monument Committee was formed to raise funds for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of the great general. In February, 1886, the Grant Monument Association was organized under an act of the New York Legislature. At first money came in generously, but gradually the interest in the project lessened and in 1892 the fund with accumulated interest amounted to only $150,000.

IN THE OLD TOMB.

Meantime the design of the monument had been determined on and the plans called for a structure to cost between $500,000 and $600,000. Ground was broken for the preliminary work April 27, 1891. In March, 1892, Gen. Horace Porter undertook the raising of further funds and so well did he succeed that April 27 the corner stone of the monument was laid by President Harrison. By the following Memorial Day the total amount needed had been subscribed.

The monument as it stands to-day represents an expenditure of nearly $600,000. This came from 80,000 American citizens, and it includes the widow's mite and the poor man's modest offering as well as the large subscriptions of the rich. It is a genuine tribute of the people, unlike the great monuments of Europe. The Albert Memorial in London, the tomb of Kaiser Wilhelm in Berlin, and the huge Germania upon the Niederwald were each constructed by governmental agencies. The Grant monument represents the loyal love and patriotic remembrance of a united people.

Amid Splendid Surroundings.

Grant's tomb is massive, yet well relieved by pillars and other embellishments. The ground upon which it rests is 140 feet above the river and the structure lifts itself 175 feet in the air. The surroundings are beautiful. The Hudson river, the American Rhine, flows silently within a stone's throw. To the rear and south are located the stately buildings of the new Columbia University. Adjoining them will stand, as soon as time and labor permit, the great Cathedral of St. John the Divine, which is to cost $10,000,000. Constantly flowing by the front of the monument is a stream of humanity on pleasure bent, for here, along the edge of the bluff, is the Riverside Drive, one of the most charming of New York's delightful boulevards.

The exterior of the monument is of a light granite, and all of the interior is finished in white marble. The porch is approached by a flight of steps seventy feet wide. In prominent letters on the front are Grant's famous words, "Let us have peace." They were used in his letter of acceptance of the presidential nomination in 1868.

As you enter upon the southern exposure you see the opening of the crypt before you. It is thirty feet wide, in the center of the chamber. Looking down into the vault the great sarcophagus made for the remains of Gen. Grant is to be seen. This sarcophagus was made from one piece of Wisconsin porphyry, which is said to excel in beauty the Finland porphyry from which the sarcophagus of Napoleon was chiseled. Beside this sarcophagus is a place for another. Here an exact duplicate will some day hold the remains of Mrs. Grant.

The sarcophagus of Gen. Grant is 10.4 feet long, 5.6 feet wide, 4.8 feet high and weighs ten tons. The pedestal is square 10 feet 10 inches each way, and on this are the pillow blocks upon which the sarcophagus rests. The latter stands seven and one-half feet above the floor of the crypt.

GRANT'S FIRST WAR HORSE.

Removing the Remains.

Into the sarcophagus the coffin containing the remains of Gen. Grant was recently moved from its resting place in the temporary tomb of brick which had been erected in 1885 and which stands a short distance from the new and magnificent monument. The coffin was enclosed in a steel jacket and for several days before workmen had been employed in taking the latter apart.

When all was in readiness for the removal, Col. Fred Grant and Ulysses Grant, sons of the dead soldier, a few family friends and an honorary guard of his old comrades assembled at the old brick tomb. The copper coffin containing the remains of Grant was reverently borne to the new monument and after being put in a cedar casket was lowered into the sarcophagus, which is to be its resting place for all time. As the remains of the soldier-statesman were being borne from one tomb to another those taking part in the ceremony uncovered their heads and the thousands of spectators assembled paid a similar mark of respect to the hero's dust.

Inside the steel casing were found four wreaths, three of oak leaves and one of roses, and a sheaf. The flowers were almost as fresh as though they had been placed there the week before, whereas they had been within the casing for twelve years.

OUR WORST CRIME BREEDER.

A Speculative Mania Possesses the American People.

Every time a cashier takes passage for Canada or for that more distant bourn whence there can never be, in Shakspeare's opinion, any extradition and the friends he leave behind him find that his books will not balance the chances are about a hundred to one that some kind of "speculation," as it has come to be denominated, has been at the bottom of it. A few days ago a circle of callow youths in Indianapolis were found to be jointly engaged in "taking flyers" on the stock market and, since the little capital they owned was soon exhausted, they resorted to surreptitiously borrowing the money of their employers.

The city or county treasurer who falls short of making both ends meet commonly gets into the tangle by reason of loans from "the crib" to his political friends, but even such cases are not always free from the mania for speculation.

If it shall prove that the university funds, some part of which it is now feared is lost, have actually disappeared the chances are that it will also prove to be because somebody has been speculating and needed more money than his or their own to keep margins good.

Most of this has to be done, of course, through somebody who makes a business of it—a "dealer," so to speak. It would never do for grave, conservative bank cashiers or the treasurers of municipal or other public corporations to be heard shouting frantically in any kind of bourse, whether of the so-called bucket or of larger dimensions.

The other day one of these agencies which profess to aid others in converting nothing into something overreached itself in New York and fell down, doubtless carrying with it a more or less long row of patrons. How many there are of these latter does not yet appear, but the interesting part of this transaction lies in the fact that the agency itself appears to be as elusive as a flea. It was at first said that the principal was a woman whose identity could not be established. Later it was said that even this feminine suspicion had faded like a ghost at cock crow.

A shrewd Frenchman once said that whenever a crime was committed the obvious thing to do was to seek for the woman at the bottom. But in nearly all crimes of this class in this country the thing to be first done is to seek for the speculation which was the temptation.

The problem arising out of this is a grave one for civil and for criminal administration. The moral error consists in dignifying as legitimate business that kind of speculation which is really nothing more than gambling. There is a kind of speculation and a way of conducting it which is entirely legitimate and honorable, but that which founds its only hope of gain for one man on the equal and certain loss of another is neither.

It may not wholly stop this kind of so-called business to relentlessly punish all who are detected in it, but it would certainly check it, and how to attain that end may better employ the ingenuity of our legislators than much of that on which they now fritter away their time and the people's money.—Chicago Chronicle.

REVOLUTIONARY MEMORIAL.

Cairn on the Spot Where Mrs. Adams Watched Battle of Bunker Hill.

The recent dedication of the monumental cairn shown in the accompanying picture, on Payne's hill, at Quincy, Mass., recalls an historic anecdote of the war of the revolution. When the Colonists were fighting the battle of Bunker Hill, Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams (who became subsequently the second President of the United States), watched the soul-stirring scene from Payne's hill, which is situated about ten miles from Charlestown.

THE CAIRN ON PAYNE'S HILL.

The Normans.

Historians are constantly reminding people that there is scarcely a foot of soil owned in England now by the descendants of the Norman conquerors, all the property having gradually come again into the possession of the Saxons, who originally owned it. One of the rare exceptions to this state of things is Trafford Park, which until a year ago remained in the possession of the same family which has held it for over eight hundred years, the Traffords of Trafford. Randolph, Lord of Trafford, who lived in the reigns of Canute and Edward the Confessor, dying about 1050, was the head of this ancient house, which for 800 years has enjoyed an unbroken line of male successors, and whose land has not suffered alienation during all the changes of this time. The old place is one of the most romantic and picturesque spots in all England, and, lying as it does just without the city of Manchester, it is greatly admired by visitors. There are nearly 2,000 acres in the estate. The hall will shortly be turned into a hotel and the grounds converted into parks, golf links, race courses, etc. A considerable portion of the fine old land will be devoted to shipping, as it lies along canals connecting directly with the ocean. It was only last year that the estate passed from the hands of its old-time owners into the possession of a company, which is dividing it up and selling it to various purchasers.

Would It Check Crime?

A well-known scientist claims to have discovered a new and wholly efficacious plan for ridding the world of crime and criminals.

According to him, many of the troublesome smaller perversions of moral character, such as kleptomania, can be successfully treated by hypnotism, and in a measure cured, or reduced to a condition that precludes worry and annoyance.

This treatment, he asserts, can be applied with equal effect to greater lapses, and he believes that thieves and criminals of all kinds could be treated in a manner that would materially reduce both of volume of crime and the number of wrongdoers.

In proof of this, he states that a boy formerly in his employment, whose only failing was an apparently incurable propensity of theft, was ultimately after much trouble, so thoroughly cured that at the present time he holds a position of great trust, and enjoys the full confidence of his employers.

Here's a Chance for Typewriter Girls

There is a rich and fertile field for typewriter girls in China and Japan. The innovation is a pleasing one, and has taken immensely with the Chinese merchants particularly. A number of American girls who have gone there during the past year are now reported married or engaged. A Denver stenographer who left last November already writes that she is engaged to a Chinese mandarin. Hong Kong, Shanghai and Yokohama are the cities where the American beauties catch on the best.

SICK A LIFETIME.

FOR THREE SCORE YEARS MR. WILLIAM LEVI WAS A TERRIBLE SUFFERER.

Muscular Rheumatism Had Such a Hold on Him that He Could Walk Only with the Aid of Crutches—Pink Pills Were Given a Trial, and Although 86 Years Old He Has Thrown Aside His Crutches.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

Mr. William Levi, of Jackson, Mich., is a highly respectable gentleman, who if he lives four years longer will be 90 years of age. Mr. Levi now enjoys good health, and is surprisingly active for a man of his years, but such was not the case until very lately, for it is not very long ago since Mr. Levi could only get about with the aid of crutches. The following is Mr. Levi's story:

"Ever since early manhood I was a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism, and in the endeavor to obtain relief have become almost a pauper. For thirty years I did not enjoy a sound night's rest, nor did I have anything taste good to me, and for sixty years I could not walk without canes or crutches. Of course, I tried every physician near me without any relief, and after one bitter atack which lasted six weeks, everybody thinking my time had come, I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and did so. While taking the second box I was able to throw away my crutches, and by the time six boxes were taken I was able to do any kind of work that a man of my age could do. I now go about with only the assistance of a cane, my sight is good and hearing almost perfect, and all the credit of the change is due to Dr. Williams' Medicine."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are sold in boxes (never in loose form, by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

The brandy, or liqueur drops, are manufactured by mixing the liquor to be used with the syrup. When the drop dries the outside hardens and the brandy is retained in the interior.

You Have Waited for This.

There are many people who would be glad to abandon the habit of drinking coffee if they could only find a substitute for it. That substitute is Grain-O, made from pure grains and a beverage in every way preferable to coffee. Grain-O is not a stimulant—it is something better. It is cheering, nutritious and strengthening. In other words it is a food-drink, as coffee is not. It is acceptable to the most delicate stomach, and agrees with confirmed dyspeptics. Unlike coffee Grain-O produces no nervous action. It never interferes with sleep. As for the flavor of Grain-O, people who use it say that after using it a week or two they like its taste better than that of coffee. Grain-O is sold by all grocers at 15c. and 25c. per package. Try it.

THREE HAPPY WOMEN.

Each Relieved of Periodic Pain and Backache. A Trio of Fervent Letters.

Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health was gradually being undermined. I suffered untold agony from painful menstruation, backache, pain on top of my head and ovarian trouble. I concluded to try Mrs. Pinkham's Compound, and found that it was all any woman needs who suffers with painful monthly periods. It entirely cured me. MRS. GEORGIE WASS, 923 Bank St., Cincinnati, O.

For years I had suffered with painful menstruation every month. At the beginning of menstruation it was impossible for me to stand up for more than five minutes, I felt so miserable. One day a little book of Mrs. Pinkham's was thrown into my house, and I sat right down and read it. I then got some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I can heartily say that to-day I feel like a new woman; my monthly suffering is a thing of the past. I shall always praise the Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON, 363 Lisbon St., Lewiston, Me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of painful menstruation and backache. The pain in my back was dreadful, and the agony I suffered during menstruation nearly drove me wild.

Now this is all over, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine and advice.—MRS. CARRIE V. WILLIAMS, South Mills, N. C.

The great volume of testimony proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safe, sure and almost infallible remedy in cases of irregularity, suppressed, excessive or painful monthly period

THE FALL OF MALAXA, CRETE—INSURGENTS CARRYING THE BLOCKHOUSE BY STORM.

ONE of the most interesting scenes in the Cretan war, now being waged with thrilling interest, was the fight for the blockhouse of Malaxa, and which was followed by the bombardment by the great powers. This blockhouse stood upon a hill overlooking Suda Bay, with its arsenal and its dock yards. For weeks the insurgents had tried to capture it from the Turks, but had failed. On the day mentioned, however, the Cretans succeeded. They had managed to get hold of a small field piece and had burrowed a hole in the sides of the stout building. All day long they kept up a continuous fire in spite of the Turkish warships, which persistently tried to shell their position. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Cretans made a rush upon the position and surrounded the blockhouse with about 300 of their men. Sharp conflict followed and the Turks fought gallantly. Fierce firing was exchanged, and it is said that it was not until at least forty of the Turks were slain that the Cretans got control of the place. The Cretans, fired with conquest and patriotism, killed all of the enemy that resisted, excepting two, who happily made their escape. The Cretans had been previously warned not to attack this position of the Turks, and the admirals in the Bay of Suda, seeing their orders set at naught, began to shell the position of the insurgents. The Italian battle ship Sicilia gave the signal and opened fire on the Cretans. The other war ships followed, and later the British ships in port took part in the bombardment. This concerted action of course put an end to the attack.

A SECOND HELEN KELLAR.

Marvelous Education of a Girl Who Is Deaf, Dumb and Blind.

Linnie Haguewood, a 17-year-old pupil of the South Dakota School for the Deaf and Dumb, is the Helen Keller of the West and promises to develop the marvelous capacities for seeing, hearing and speaking while deaf, dumb and blind exhibited by the wonderful girl now a student at Harvard "Annex." Miss Haguewood is 17 years old and her story is almost a precise repetition of that of Helen Kellar. The Eastern girl, however, has had a great advantage over her Western sister in that her education began at a much earlier age and her teacher was more adept than Miss Haguewood's instructor.

Linnie was born at Ida Grove, Iowa, and, like Helen, was a perfectly normal child up to her 18th month. At that time she was stricken with a spinal disease and when she recovered it was found that she had lost the senses of sight and hearing totally. She lived in a world without sound and practically never having heard the human voice she was unable to speak, notwithstanding that the muscles and nerves used in articulating were in nowise injured. But Linnie's parents, unlike those of Miss Kellar, were not rich, and were unable to engage special teachers for her. Indeed, they did not know that their child could be rescued from the awful solitude in which she lived until she was nearly 14 years old.

Until she was 14 years old Miss Haguewood was cared for like an infant. She was unable to walk and could not communicate a single thought to any human being. At 14 she was placed in an asylum for the blind at Vinton, Iowa, and there Miss Dora Donald, one of the teachers, became deeply interested in the girl. A subscription was opened for the purpose of educating Linnie, the Iowa Legislature appropriated $500, and Miss Donald at once devoted all her time to her. For three years she had instructed the helpless girl and recently brought her to the Deaf and Dumb Institution at Sioux Falls. The methods she has followed are those employed by Miss Sullivan in teaching Helen Kellar. She is now teaching her how to talk. Linnie places her delicately sensitive fingers on the mouth of her teacher. Miss Donald then enunciates a sound and the pupil endeavors to imitate it. One sound is repeated hundreds of times until it approaches perfection, and then another is tried. The various sounds are then combined, and the result is articulate speech. Miss Donald readily understands what her charge says, but others cannot.

Miss Haguewood is able to cut and sew her own garments, to write letters on a typewriter, to read readily her Sunday school paper and her Bible and to write slowly on the tablets which are provided for the blind. By her delicate sense of touch she is able to recognize her friends, and even to remember on second meeting those whom she has noticed before. She is able to recognize at the first touch those whom she knows well. She is passionately fond of flowers, of dress and jewelry. It was only until recently that Linnie began to realize that she differed in any respect from the ordinary human being.

St. Paul's in Shakespeare's Time.

John Bennett's serial story of the time of Shakspeare, "Master Skylark," in St. Nicholas, gives many pictures of old English life and scenes. The following is from the April number:

People passed them like shadows in the mist, and all the houses were a blur until they came into a wide, open place where the wind blew free above a wall with a great many gates.

In the middle of this open place a huge gray building stood, staring out over the housetops—a great cathedral, wonderful and old. Its walls were dark with time and smoke and damp, and the lofty tower that rose above it was in part but a hollow shell split by lightning and blackened by fire. But crowed between its massive buttresses were booths and chapmen's stalls; against its hoary side a small church leaned like a child against a mother's breast; and in and around about it eddied a throng of men like ants upon a busy hill.

All around the outer square were shops with gilded fronts and most amazing signs; golden angels with outstretched wings, tiger heads, bears, brazen serpents, and silver cranes; and in and out of the shop-doors darted apprentices with new-bound books and fresh-printed slips; for this was old St. Paul's, the meeting-place of London town, and in Paul's Yard the printers and the bookmen dealt.

CHICAGO'S MAYOR'S WIFE.

Mrs. Carter Harrison Was a Louisiana Belle.

One of the most talked about young men in the country to-day is Carter H. Harrison, who was elected Mayor of Chicago by a phenomenal majority. Naturally his wife and family are also coming in for a large share of attention.

Mrs. Harrison is a charming woman of the Southern type of beauty. She was Miss Edith Ogden, daughter of Judge Robert N. Ogden of the United States Court of Appeals in Louisiana. Her parental home is at New Orleans, and she usually spends her winters in the South. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison first met at the old Harrison home in Chicago, where, during a visit to her Chicago cousins, she attended a reception. In December, 1887, they were married at the home of Judge Ogden in New Orleans. They have two children—Carter H., the third (the seventh of that name in the family), now 7 years old. The other is a bright little daughter, Edith Ogden, 15 months old. Mrs. Harrison was educated in the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy in her native city, and is a Catholic in religious belief.

MRS. CARTER H. HARRISON.

The Harrisons, owing to travels, etc., have not entered much into Chicago society during the last two or three years. Mrs. Harrison has studied French and German under private tutors and is an accomplished conversationalist.

Slag Bricks.

The manufacture of bricks from furnace slag is an important Bohemian industry, the granulated slag mixed with caustic lime hardening to a cement-like mass, from which the bricks are made, weighing about ten pounds each. Such bricks will bear, theoretically, thirty-eight pounds per square centimeter, though practically, twenty-five pounds is the limit of the burden put upon it; hence 1,000 bricks can be safely piled above each other without any danger that the bottom one will be crushed by the weight, and the broad side of the brick will bear a burden of 10,000 pounds.

Another Romance Destroyed.

A British naval writer says that neither Casabianca nor his father perished on a burning ship. They were drowned while swimming for the boats. But as the iconoclast was not there Mrs. Hemans will still be considered the best authority.

MONUMENT TO VON MOLTKE.

Memorial to the Great German Marshal to Be Erected at Breslau.

A pretty monument to Von Moltke, the famous German marshal, is soon to be erected at Breslau. The design has already been selected. "Old Forwards" is seen in a single figure standing erect upon a pedestal and holding a map of war. At the base of the pedestal is an equestrian group showing a figure of Victory with winged head, tendering the general a laurel crown. Near by are standards, ordnance and other symbols of war. Von Moltke has been dead just six years. Germany is rather prompt in erecting monuments to its heroes, and the wonder is that the gallant field marshal has not been publicly honored in this way before this time. Just before his death Van Moltke was the recipient of signal honors by the German people. It was in 1890, on the ninetieth anniversary of his birth. Berlin took a holiday and celebrated the birth of the hero of the French campaign with great pomp and glory. The field marshal had been a member of the Prussian army since 1822. The model at Breslau is said to be a splendid portrait in face and figure of the old soldier.

MONUMENT TO VON MOLTKE.

Washington Well Fortified.

In view of the fact that the national capital was once taken and burned by a foreign enemy, it is reassuring to know that a calamity so humiliating is not likely to occur again, even in case of sudden war.

Washington is the best defended city in the country. A hostile fleet could not now ascend the Potomac, as was done in 1814, when President Madison and his wife were compelled to make a hurried escape across the Potomac to avoid capture by the British.

For military and prudential reasons little has been allowed to be made known concerning the new works and the heavy ordnance recently installed below the city; but for the past two years engineers have been busy at the river forts. Some very formidable guns are now in position there, and a system of torpedo defenses perfected which would render the approach of an enemy's warships, within twelve miles of Washington, practically impossible.

The defensive works are located at the "elbow," or turn, of the Potomac where old Forts Washington and Sheridan stood, and where at one point the channel for vessels of deep draught is but 300 yards wide.

The guns are protected on the water side by emplacement walls of stone and concrete seventy feet thick, and on the land side by redoubts for infantry.

The rapidly increasing wealth and importance of Washington, the grand new public buildings and the vast sums of money and bullion in the treasury render these protective and defensive measures a matter of national importance and necessity.

Discouraged.

Physicians Wise in Their Generation.

The above class of scientists recognize and have repeatedly borne testimony, to the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a remedy and preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism, want of vigor, liver complaint, and some other ailments and infirm conditions of the system. Experience and observation have taught them its value. They but echo the verdict long since pronounced by the public and the press. Only the benighted now are ignorant of America's tonic and alterative.

Stone Cement.

The following composition is said to make an excellent stone cement: Glue is soaked in cold water; afterwards heated and fresh slaked lime added, until the mixture attains the proper consistency—the cement must be applied while warm. This cement acquires great hardness, equal to stone, and it is not influenced by water or moisture. When used for porcelain, glass or metal a small quantity of flour of sulphur must be added.

His Back Up.

When Noah blew his horn, the camel humped himself to get aboard, and by a curious freak he stayed humped all his life. Lumbago or lame back humps a man's back simply because he cannot straighten himself on account of the stiffness and soreness accompanying the ailment. Nature helped the camel to his hump for a special purpose. Nature will help a man to get rid of his hump right off if he uses St. Jacobs Oil, because the character of the trouble is such that it needs just such a remedy to warm, soften and straighten out the contracted muscles. From the time of Noah down to the present time men have had lame backs, but only since the introduction of St. Jacobs Oil has the best cure for it been known. Lumbago really disables, but St. Jacobs Oil enables one to attend to business without loss of time.

The greatest of all luxuries in Central Africa is salt. The long-continued use of vegetable food in that country creates so painful a longing for salt that natives deprived of it for a long period often show symptoms of insanity.

Little Girl Suffered With Eruptions on Head and Face.

Faithful Use of Hood's Sarsaparilla Effects a Cure.

"My little girl was covered with boils on her head and face. She also had sore eyelids. We began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla one year ago, and for some time we could not see any change in her condition, but we were faithful in the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a few weeks more I noticed some improvement. After she had taken three bottles she was perfectly well. Her face is now entirely free from any marks or scars. I think it is no more than right if give this testimonial in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. Milton Beamsderfer, 35 Hazel St., Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

"I was weak and nervous. Hearing so much about the wonderful effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla I concluded to try it and improved rapidly. I have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and my father has also taken it for catarrh of the stomach and it has cured him." Miss A. E. Fifty Years Ago.

This is the cradle in which there grew
That thought of a philanthropic brain;
A remedy that would make life new
For the multitudes that were racked with pain.
'Twas sarsaparilla, as made, you know
By Ayer, some 50 years ago.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla was in its infancy half a century ago. To-day it doth "bestride the narrow world like a colossus." What is the secret of its power? Its cures! The number of them! The wonder of them! Imitators have followed it from the beginning of its success. They are still behind it. Wearing the only medal granted to sarsaparilla in the World's Fair of 1893, it points proudly to its record. Others imitate the remedy; they can't imitate the record:

5o Years of Cures.

DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR.

Husband and Wife in a State of Beastly Intoxication.

We thought Auburn had been sufficiently disgraced by scenes of brutality on several occasions before, but yesterday there was still another and one that fully kept pace with the rest in point of shameless indecency. It was the appearance on our streets of a man and woman, both in a state of beastly intoxication. Where they got their whisky, we do not know or care. The man who sold it to them, can be but little better than they. They made frequent exhibitions of themselves for some time during the day and afternoon, their respective jags, male and female, getting more and more unmanageable as the hours wore on and the water mark or rather whisky mark in their respective tanks rose higher and higher. And when the overflow came it was a sight to make angels weep. Their names were Snyder. The woman is the mother of the young woman, Mrs. Elijah Sherwood, who fignred in a divorce case last fall, and in several other lawsuits since. At that time Snyder and his wife resided on the old Brand farm northwest of Waterloo, and Mrs. Snyder was a witness in one or two of the trials. Lately, however, they have been living on a farm in the west side of Richland township. They came to town yesterday with a fine team of large spirited horses, with a two-seated buggy, the husband and wife occupying the front seat, and Mrs. Snyder's aged mother, Mrs. Chandler, widow of the late Thomas Chandler, was on the back seat. Along in the afternoon, after the husband and wife had a dozen or so straight drinks under their respective vests, and got very sloppy. They made a bad picture as they sailed over town with arms about one another, and all they could do to get along as a double team. They were finally got into their buggy but instead of heading for home on the right road they went south and on that trip the woman fell out into the mud. In about an hour, they found they were not on the right track and then came back. Or, it may be they discovered that there was one package of their load, that had been omitted when they set out. It was Mrs. Snyder's mother. So the old lady who had spent the afternoon at Hebel's store, was helped into the rig, and once more a start was made. This time they went north as far as the old Moody House, but soon after they were discovered coming back on Main-st. lashing the team into a dangerous speed and at Garrett's store, were running away. At the crossing of Seventh-st., they were brought to a stop by the crowd who were watching them and had gathered there. The drunken husband and wife both became nearly frantic, to find themselves stopped. But it was of no avail. The team was detached and taken to Trout's livery barn. Then the old lady, now half frightened to death was helped out and Sheriff Stroh and Geo. Chapman assisted her to the Hollister House. Stroh then went back to the drunken couple where they were still sitting in their buggy, hugging one another and slobbering over each other in the most approved fashion. The man looked and acted bad enough but the woman was worse. As they refused to get out, the rig was hitched on to the rear of the bus standing near by, and hauled down around the public square, and then to the town calaboose. Here the couple were taken in and locked up, and left to sleep off their jags. About nine in the evening they had recovered enough to be taken before 'Squire Walter, and each was fined $1 which with the customary trimmings made a total of over $18. They at first refused either to pay the fine or to give bail. But finding they would have to go to jail or give bail they at last got bail and were set free. By this time they were in fairly good shape, and might have gone home, but concluded as it was nearly eleven, and they would not arouse the old lady, now asleep at Hollister's. It appears that even the old lady had taken a drink or so with them, or was supposed to have done so, as all were seen on two occasions going into Berg's saloon together.

This morning they got ready and went home. One of the features of the case was the fact which leaked tout a the trial that the woman has a ten-months old child at home, and it was left all night to the care of the other children. Altogether it was a disgraceful performance from start to finish. It may be of interest to those who did not have front seats, to know that G. H. Yesbera took a snap shot of them while sitting in the buggy, and then took another of the woman and Sheiff Stroh while the latter was carrying her into the calaboose.

Little Men and Women

We call them little men and little women, but they are neither. They have ideas and ways all their own. Fortunately they soon become fond of cod-liver oil, when it is given to them in the form of SCOTT'S EMULSION. This is the most valuable remedy in existence for all the wasting diseases of early life. The poorly nourished, scrofulous child; the thin, weak, fretting child; the young child who does not grow; all take Scott's Emulsion without force or bribe. It seems as if they knew that this meant nourishment and growth for bones, muscles and nerves.

Book telling more about it, free.

It won't pay to try a substitute for Scott's Emulsion with the children. They will relish the real thing.

For sale at 50c. and $1.00, by all druggists.

ANOTHER PLUM.

Sergt. H. A. Lobmiller Appointed Commissary Sergeant.

That the Auburn Rifles can furnish men to fill almost any and all important positions is evidenced by another appointment made by Col. Geo. M. Studebaker of South Bend. Major Kuhlman previous to his appointment recommended Sergt. Lobmiller for the position as Commissary Sergeant. It will be no new work for Mr. Lobmiller as he filled the position temporarily on two previous occasions. He has been a loyal and never tiring member of Co. K. since its organization and we are pleased to see him advance in his military work. Order No. 5, as received by Capt. Lahnum last night reads as follows:

Headquarters, 3d Infantry I. N. G.
South Bend, Ind., April 29, '97.

ORDER No. 5.

Sergt. H. A. Lobmiller, of Co. K 3d Infantry, I. N. G. is hereby appointed Com. Sergt. 3d Infantry I. N. G. and he will be respected and obeyed as such.

He will report to Q. M., E. G. Melendy, of Fremont, Ind., by letter, for duty.

By order of
GEO. M. STUDEBAKER, Col.
H. K. SCOTT,
Adjutant.

THAT BUTLER P. M.

The great objections raised against the selection of I. D. Daily for postmaster at Butler, has resulted in Fairbanks writing a letter to Butler politicians in which he says he will appoint Thomas Rudd instead of Daily. He evidently hopes in this way to allay the trouble at Butler for a few days, until the election is over, when no doubt, the whole matter will fall back into the old rut and Daily will be the man after all. That is the way it looks now, a mere scheme to save the city election.

ROBBED BEN FRANKLIN.

His Description of the Stolen Garments and the Man Who Took Them.

Hicksville News.

The following advertisement is taken from the Pennsylvania Gazzette, No. 532, wherein the reader of Feb. 22, 1738, was informed that The Gazette contained the "Freshest advices, Foreign and Domestick. Printed by B. Franklin, Post Master, at the news printing offices near the Market. Price, 10s. a year. Where advertisements are taken in, and Book Binding is done reasonably, in the best manner:"

STOLEN on the 15th Instant, by one William Lloyd, out of the house of Benj. Franklin, an half worn Sagathee coat lin'd with silk, four fine homespun shirts, a fine Holland shirt ruffled at the Hands and Bosom, a pair of black broadcloth Breeches, new seated and lined with leather, two pair of good worsted stockings, one of a dark color, cambrick Handerchief, marked with an F in red silk, a new pair of Calf skin shoes, a Boy's new Castor Hat, and sundry other things.

N. B. The said Lloyd pretends to understand Latin and Greek, and has been a school master; He is an Irishman, about 30 years of age, tall and slim; Had on a lightish colour'd Great Coat, red jacket, a pair of black silk breeches, an old felt Hat too little for him, and sewed on the side of the crown with white Thread, and an old dark colour'd wig; but may perhaps wear some of the stolen cloathes above mentioned. Whoever secures the said Thief so that he may be brought to Justice, shall have Thirty Shillings reward and reasonable charges paid by

B. FRANKLIN.

New Factory Law

The recent legislature made a law in regard to factory employes. Among other things are these:

The law provides that no person under sixteen years of age, and no woman under eighteen years of age shall be permitted to labor in any factory more than sixty hours per week or ten hours per day, and the number of hours of labor exacted, and the commencing and quitting time shall be posted in the factory.

No person under fourteen years of age shall be employed under any circumstances, and none under sixteen years of age except under special condition and restrictions which are carefully set forth, and no child shall be employed who cannot read and write.

The law particularly provides as to how elevator shafts shall be protected, and shall operate same, for hand-rails and screens at all stairways, that doors shall open outward, that fire-escapes be provided in certain cases, a report and record of all accidents, however trivial. Separate closets and retiring rooms must be provided, kept clean and free from obscene pictures and writings; all rooms must be kept clean and light, and when needed, to be whitewashed; each employ must have 250 cubic feet of air, dangerous machinery must be boxed and protected, and a great many other provisions are required, and heavy penalties provided for their violation.

There is a state factory inspector who must see that the law is enforced.

Don't Waste Money.

Dr. John W. Bull's Baby Syrup is an excellent carminative for babies suffering from flatulency, wind-colic and griping. "I have used Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup in my family for a number of years and can cheerfully recommend it as being the best soothing syrup for children that I have ever used. Lawrence Horan, Fairmont, W. Va." Mothers, don't waste money on substitutes. Dr. John W. Bull's Baby Syrup costs but 25 cents; see that you get it.

Handy Dog.

On a quiet little thoroughfare leading off of St. Charles-ave., New Orleans, there might have been seen during the heavy rain lately a big shaggy Newfoundland dog carrying a spread umbrella in his mouth, his dripping tail sticking out from under and wagging complacently. Investigation revealed the fact that there was a little girl under the umbrella with the dog, her tiny arm thrown around his neck, and the two tripping along most amicably.

"My name is Marie," said the little maid upon being questioned, "and this is Beauregard, my very own dog. Yes, Beaury goes to school with me. I go to the kindergarten, you know, and he always carries the umbrella if it's raining, because I can't, you see, and he can."

And the big umbrella sheltering the two friends passed on.

Winona Assembly.

The 109th General Assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States, meets near us this year, and everybody will feel an interest in it. It is held at Spring Fountain Park or Eagle Lake, two miles this side of Warsaw, May 20. Our people have known this popular resort by both the above names, but the place will hereafter be known as "Winona." The church interests have purchased all the lands of the Beyer Brothers, all the buildings, including the hotels, cottages, cyclorama building, stands, stables, ornamental grounds and walks, in short, everything there is. Much building has been going on for a year, in order to be prepared for this great meeting. As there will be several thousand delegates, and many more visitors, more hotel room was needed, and has been provided. Then all of Warsaw is brought in to help. Private houses will make the guests welcome, and special trains be run on the Pittsburg tracks from the city to the Assembly every few minutes in the day, and evening. Then there is the canal from the city into Eagle Lake, through which the steamers will take visitors back and forth between the city and the Assembly grounds. Our people may never be as near this great meeting again, and many no doubt will attend a day or more. Nearly 8,000 churches in 224 presbyteries, are represented in these meetings the membership represented, being nearly a million.

A NEW CEMETERY.

J. J VanAuken has just completed the plat of the new Catholic cemetery at Garrett. It is of a lovely and unique design and as fine a specimen of landscape outline as we ever saw. The ground is at the edge of the town to the southwest of the Catholic Church and contains seven acres. There are over 700 lots laid off in the several divisions of the ground. One enters the grounds from the corner next to the town, the main drive or avenue running towards the center, which is a rise of ground and serves as the central point of one of the main groups of the lots. In approaching this, however, we pass on the left, a similar rise of graund, which forms the center of another group and is perhaps more prominent than the one above named, as it is nearer the main entrance. The other groupings are no less artistic, and the whole plan shows Mr. VanAuken's skill and genius as an engineer and draughtsman. There is no prettier cemetery plat in this part of the state. And besides the beauty of this work much credit should be given to Father Young and his people for their liberality and enterprise. It will save them many a weary drive to the Auburn cemetery.

FATHER TIME.

This sweet little cantata was given at the school yesterday afternoon, by twenty-four of the boys and girls of Mary Teeters' room and in the presence of forty or fifty visitors. These pupils had been trained and instructed by Miss Flora Hoffman, and all did their parts nicely. There were solos, duets, and choruses all carried out to perfection. Of course, a leading figure was the the King, Father Time, on his throne, and there were "Love," "Patience" etc. And at the proper intervals appeared the other leading characters. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday etc. each with an appropriate part, such as washing represented on Monday, ironing on Tuesday, baking on Saturday, etc. It was all much finer than can be told, and all of them did so well. Our people should not neglect to attend these occasional Friday afternoon excercises, as the are always good, and show the various lines of excellent work our schools are doing. On this occasion, an interesting thing was to see how each little miss or lad was independent in her or his part, and went about it like veterans, never losing their self control. This was shown by those who led the marches, etc. All did great credit to their instructor and to themselves.

BICYCLE PATHS.

At several points over the county, the stronger bicycle clubs are having bicycle paths built along the highways to accommodate riders along that road. The clubs of Laporte and Michigan City, have arranged for a roadway of this sort. The highway between the two cities is about ten miles long and is to have a bicycle path on one side, three feet wide. Hills will be cut down and hollows filled, enough to secure easy grades, and three inches of gravel laid on the path and packed into place. Over the smaller streams the bicyclers will have small bridges separate from the highway bridge, but for large streams the same bridge will be for both.

OBITUARY

An Aged Pioneer gone to her Heavenly Home.

Anna Houser, daughter of Henry and Magdalena Houser, was born in Schuylkill Co. Pa., Sept. 13, 1819, and died at her home in DeKalb, Co., Ind., May 2, 1897, aged 77 years, 7 months and 19 days. She moved with her parents from Pennsylvania to Champaign Co. Ohio in early life. Was there married to H.——Turkner in the year 1847. To them were born three children, two of whom survive her. After her husband's death she moved with her parenss to DeKalb county. In 1856, she was again married to Josiah Cattell. To them were born three children all of whom are still living. There were also two step-children by her second husband, John and George Cattell, with whom she lived at her death. She was a member of the Reformed Lutheran church at the age of 14 years and has been a very consistent christian all her life, and died in a full and triumphant living faith. The funeral services were held at the Union Church near her hone, May 5, and conducted by Rev. J. A. Burkett, and her remains laid to rest in the presence of a multitude of sorrowing friends.

OLNEY-SALISBURY TREATY.

The defeat of this treaty, by yesterday's vote in the senate, has been for some time expected by those who have watched the wild working of congress. The treaty in itself, is the most notable one that has been negotiated between any two nations during this half of the century, and its main provisions were so desirable and so in keeping with the intelligent and humane thought of the age, that people all over the world desired to have it pass. In fact a number of other nations were waiting for this to go into effect, when they would want similar treaties for the settlement of difficult diplomatic and national questions that might arise elsewhere. But in this case, the United States and Great Britain, two leading and progressive nations had developed a treaty, by the terms of which all questions or nearly all, would be settled by arbitration or other peaceful means, with no danger of war. And these questions would not only be settled without war, but fairly and honestly, according to the merits of the case. But there were some objections to certain provisions of the treaty, and when the senate began to tinker with it to get rid of these objectionable features, every senator seemed anxious to make an amendment. In this way, so many new items were added to it that its best friends refused to vote for it. It takes two-thirds to ratify a treaty, and it lacked a few votes of that number. Another thing that made the treaty unpopular, was the unfriendly feeling between President Cleveland and his secretary of state, Mr. Olney, on one side, and the senate on the other. In this spirit of unfriendliness the treaty did not have the consideration it should. No doubt public opinion will force the governments of the two countries into a new treaty on which our grave and reverend Senators can unite.

Express Improvements.

The Auburn Express office is looking up. Yesterday Charlie Weaver, who has had charge of the business here so long, received a new express wagon from headquarters. It is much lighter than the old one, and therefore not such a horse killer. And down at the Junction the surroundings of the company are being improved, The low ground near which the wagon stands, is being filled up and made presentable. It may be that a little parking or other oramental work will be done. The roadways for the wagon, have also been filled and improved.

ASHLEY ELECTION

Like Other Town She Goes Democratic.

Ashley Times.

The election Monday resulted in a democratic victory, the entire ticket save marshal being elected by surprising majorities. The republicans by reason of dissension in their own ranks practically gave up the fight by noon, but did not expect to be so completely "wholloped" as they were. The democrats were united and worked hard polling their full strength, rolled up the majority. There were but 30 straight republican votes cast while 92 democrats voted straight. The successful candidates are all good men, Bruce and Parsell being chosen for a second term. Gonser for treasurer is conveniently located and has served in that capacity before, being Ashley's first treasurer. Lakins will make a good marshal, being a young man full of energy and vim. The following is the vote for differen candidates:

TRUSTEES.

Parsell, D	164
Kelley, R	90

CLERK.

Bruce, D	185
Krieble, R	65

TREASURER.

Battle With Tramps.

A gang of hoboes gathered at Kendallville Tuesday, and causeda good deal of trouble. A dispatch from that place says:

About 7 o'clock to-night a gang of tramps came in on a Lake Shore freight train from the east, having threatened the brakeman, who had ordered them to leave the train. The tramps were all armed, and the trainmen were forced to let them ride. On arriving here the gang broke up and began begging money, but their efforts were not successful, evidently, and about 10 o'clock several of them attempted to hold up Silas Carpenter, who was going home from a drill of the Uniformed Rank K. of P. Carpenter beat them off with his sword, but he had a desperate fight before he got away. About the same time another squad of the tramps marched down to the Lake Shore depot and held up the baggagemaster, but the arrival of help scared them away. The men then went to the railroad yards, where they had a keg of beer, and began to drink. Jackson, a colored man met the gang, and they tacked him. He resisted and several of the tramps began to shoot. One man held a revolver close to the negro's head and shot him three times. The firing was at such close range that the negro's clothes were set on fire. The gang then boarded a freight and got away. A telegram was sent to Goshen and the gang was rounded up, but all escaped except the man who did the shooting. He was captured and will be brought here by Marshal Berhalter. The negro is sinking and cannot live.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Mrs. Houston and Daughter Nearly Suffocated From Escaping Gas.

When house-cleaning time comes the women are always anxious to get done. Mrs. M. Houston on Fifth-st. had planned to commence her work on Friday and just before retiring Thursday evening took down the pipe from the coal stove. She had let the coal burn out and did not think of danger. But the warm cinders formed a gas and filled the rooms, and when Mrs. Houston and daughter awoke yesterday morning they were desperately sick. A doctor was sent for and he pronounced it a serious case of asphyxiation. Mrs. Houston and daughter were taken to the rooms occupied by Mr. and Mrs. McDougall and cared for while the windows and doors were opened and her rooms purified. Both the victims are still suffering from the effects of the gas and it will be a long time before they fully recover from the effects of the deadly poison. It was a very narrow escape, and had the door to the bed room in which they slept, been left open that night, which ordinarily is, they no doubt would have been found dead.

A Valuable Prescription.

Editor Morrison of Worthington, Ind. "Sun" says: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for constipation and sick headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal." DOUBLE CHICK.

Mr Dice of this place brought up town quite a curiosity a few days ago. It was a chicken with four legs, or rather it had two bodies for one head, and consequently had two sets of legs. It was not alive, as the egg had been accidentally broken just before the time for hatching. We believe he will preserve it in alcohol.

Horrible! Horrible!

Innocent children by the thousand are constantly dying of diarrhoea whose life might be saved. How quickly the demon works! Flesh speedily wastes away as though subjected to fire. You try change of water, and change of food and change of air. The handiest and quickest and safest thing you can do is to procure at once a bottle of Dr. Hand's Diarrhoea Mixture, at any drug store, for 25c. It's wonderful how quickly it brings good results. The anti-trust law just enacted in Georgia is a very comprehensive and thorough one. It is based upon the theory that free competition in all forms of business is a personal right and a public advantage, and that a wrong is done whenever it is suppressed or obstructed. There seems to be no room left for the escape of any combination designed to control prices or to interfere with the general laws of trade.

Misfortune has overtaken William Byers, who owned a 600-acre crabapple farm of 30,000 trees near Leavenworth, Kan., and his place has been seized by creditors. It was supposed to be the largest crabapple orchard in the world. In the early prohibition times, Byers planted all the trees he could get and coined money out of cider, which he sold all over the State. The free sale of liquor during the last two years ruined his market.

Some two years ago a number of English farmers living on the line of the Great Eastern Railway made arrangements with that company to ship small packages of farm produce direct to consumers in London. The business has progressed satisfactorily to all engaged in it and has grown to considerable proportions. During the year 1896 no less than 60,000 consignments were delivered and in January and Februrary of this year there was a further increase. The average value of the packages was 7 shillings.

Travel in Europe is expected to fall off this summer on account of the general advance in first-class cabin fares from $85 to $100, which is now the minimum rate. No reduction will be made to tourist agents for parties less than twenty-five. Some of the steamship lines expect a reduction in the number of first-class passengers of 20 or 30 per cent., but the crack ships were overcrowded last year. The special attractions on the other side this season are the Queen's jubilee, the Bairenth music festival, the Stockholm exposition and the international medical congress at Moscow in August.

A firm of cheap publishers in England not long ago arranged with an equally irresponsible firm in Paris to receive from the latter each week blocks they had used for illustrating a seventeenth century novel. One day a mistake was made and a modern society block was sent. The poor young man who had been hired by the London firm to write up the blocks as they came took the misfit to his proprietor, explaining that his story dealt with the time of Louis XVI. and that the up-to-date picture would not do. Whereupon the irate manager rebuked the youth sharply, took the picture and wrote beneath it: "They retired into the wood and disguised themselves in modern costume."

The Scientific American scoffs at the proposed gigantic relief map of the United States in the District of Columbia, which was provided for in a resolution which passed the Senate and was defeated in the House. According to the Scientific American's estimates, a model on the scale proposed could not be built for less than $500,000,000. The writer goes on to suggest that by reducing the scale from three feet to the mile to three inches to the mile, the map could be brought down to a cost of $50,000. It would be less than 100 feet in diameter, instead of 1,200, and could be kept under cover, so as to avoid the destructive influence of the elements.

At the present price of about 32 cents a pound, aluminum is cheaper than the same bulk of copper or brass. Yet 100 pounds of brass, or 250 of copper, are sold to one of aluminium. Manufacturers of the new metal disposed of 650 tons of it last year, but they are compelled to discover its novel uses. Aluminium has nearly displaced nickel in the arts and it is in growing demand for cooking utensils, bicycle parts, plates for false teeth, handles for surgical instruments, a substitute for lithographic stones, non-magnetic electric apparatus and military accouterments. Its lightness renders it peculiarly suitable for canteens, buttons and belt plates.

A CITY OF MEN.

Some Interesting Facts About the City of Johannesburg, South Africa.

It may be a surprise to those who have simply heard of Johannesburg, South Africa, in connection with the Jameson raid or as the center of a vast gold-mining region, to know that the place, which, in 1882, contained only a few mud huts, is now a city covering an area of fifteen square miles and having a population of 100,000 souls. For years past steamships have been bringing to it about 1,000 persons a week from Europe, Australia and America, and in its buildings the city has now a metropolitan air.

There are lots of idle white workmen in the city, however. The mines on the Rand having to a great extent been worked out, people thereby thrown out of employment flocked into the city, still further congesting the labor market. Numbers of good artisans are prowling over the veldt now, only too glad of a meal whenever they can obtain it, and uncertain where they shall lay their wearied bones at night to rest. Wages are extremely low, bricklayers and carpenters earning only $5.50 a week. Masons are paid even less—$4.80; plasterers receive $5.50 and miners $4.80. Bookkeepers receive from $75 to $96 a month. The cost of living is very high and the cheapest drink one can buy costs 12 cents. Brandy costs 25 cents a glass.

The craze for wealth is the one that dominates Johannesburg. Everything else is subsidiary to this. As a result there are few of those higher institutions that cultivate the aesthetic taste. There are no schools of art, no theaters worthy of the name, no museums, no art galleries. With the exception of an occasional lady driving out, shopping, or some miserable native woman, "the female form divine" is a rare sight. Indeed, Johannesburg might, with truthfulness be rechristened the City of Men.

Zymotic diseases are very prevalent. Indeed, the death rate from them is excessively large. In London the zymotic death rate is 1.6 per annum. That of thirty-three of the large cities of the world averages 1.9 per 1,000 per annum; while that of Johannesburg for the month of November corresponded to an annual zymotic death rate of 19.1 per 1,000.

Mountain Sickness.

All travelers who have ascended to great altitudes have been affected by mountain sickness. This is simply an effect which is the result of the diminution of the atmospheric pressure which is experienced as one goes upward. The reduction which takes place at great heights is quite sufficient to account for the disturbance of the human system. At twenty thousand feet the pressure is less than half the amount that it is at the level of the sea; that is, whereas at the level of the sea the atmospheric pressure is generally capable of sustaining a column of mercury of thirty inches at twenty thousand feet, it will not sustain a column of fifteen inches. Monsieur Kronecker has made some observations on mountain sickness. He found that it sets in at various altitudes with different persons. Above three thousand metres it attacks all persons as soon as they indulge in the least muscular effort; but children and very old people are less subject to it than others. It also varies with the character of the mountains, being usually less serious on isolated peaks. Persons in good health can bear passive transport up to about four thousand feet without inconvenience.

Murrhine Vases.

Murrhine vases were a species of ware often mentioned by writers of the Roman empire, the material of which has been much disputed by modern antiquaries. They came from the East, and, according to Pliny, were made of some precious stone found chiefly in Parthia; but some have conjectured that this was an erroneous opinion prevalent among the Romans, and that they were in reality porcelain, the manufacture of which was unknown to the Western nations, while others have contended that they were made of variegated onyx stone. They have also been referred to as having the reputed quality of breaking if poison was mixed with the liquor they contained.

WILSON VS. DINGLEY.

EX-TARIFF MAKER EXPOSES THE DINGLEY BILL.

Says It Is "the Most Ultra Protective Tariff Ever Proposed"—Makes Some Serious Reflections Upon the McKinley Bill as a Revenue Producer.

Will Encourage Trusts.

Ex-Postmaster General William L. Wilson is credited with the authorship of the tariff bill now in force. His hands were tied so that he could not make the bill nearly as good as he desired to make it, and the bill as finally passed was not nearly as good as when it first passed the house. It was, however, a great improvement upon the McKinley bill and is a model as compared with the Dingley monstrosity. We quote the following from Mr. Wilson's criticism of the McKinley and Dingley bills in a recent number of the New York Herald:

These bills are so nearly identical in general structure and particular items, excepting as to the sugar schedule, that it may be well to consider the effect of the first bill on the revenue of the country. Both bills are vast and voluminous schemes of class taxation, the production of public revenue being an incident and entirely subordinate to the purpose of taxing all the American people for the benefit of a small part of the people.

The protectionist has but one remedy, which he applies whether the revenue be redundant or deficient. If times are prosperous and more money than is needed pours into the treasury, he increases taxes by a scheme that turns the larger part of their avails into private pockets, and this reduces public revenue. If times are depressed and less money than is needed pours into the treasury, he seizes the pretext of increasing public revenues by adding enormously to the amount of private exaction.

The act of 1890, whatever its other effects, did reduce revenue. From a large surplus it swept us headlong to a deficiency, although it weighted the people with heavier taxes and although another law, passed in July, 1890, turned into the treasury as a part of the general assets to be used for paying expenditures a trust fund of more than $54,000,000 which belonged to the national banks and had always been held for the redemption of their notes.

Even before the Harrison administration ended we should have been confronted with a large deficiency but for the use of this trust fund and the further fact that Secretary Foster, by a change of bookkeeping, added to the treasury balance $20,000,000 of token and subsidiary coin not before treated as a treasury asset. With these extraordinary additions, even, we wound up the fiscal year June 30, 1893, with a surplus of only $2,341,674 as against a surplus for the fiscal year June 30, 1890, of over $85,000,000 before the above trust fund and subsidiary coin were touched. And during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, through all of which the McKinley bill was in force, expenditures exceeded the revenues to the amount of $69,803,260, notwithstanding the fact that the expenditures of the government were $15,952,674 less than in the preceding year.

This statement shows how absurd and groundless is the claim constantly made by the protectionists that recent deficits in revenue are due to the substitution of the existing tariff for the McKinley bill. Nothing is more certain than that if the bill had been in force during the last three years the annual deficit would have been immensely swollen, while the people in a season of depression and hard times would have staggered under much heavier burdens of taxation. Even in this disastrous period, customs duties under the existing law have increased from less than $132,000,000 in 1894, the last year of the McKinley bill, to even $152,000,000 in 1895 and to over $160,000,000 in 1896.

In the sugar schedule alone the balance in favor of the existing law is about $55,000,000. The customs revenue reached nearly $40,000,000, scarcely any of which would have been receivable under the McKinley bill.

That the Dingley bill, present conditions considered, is the most ultra protective tariff ever proposed to be enacted in this country plainly appears from Chairman Dingley's statement that if levied on the importations of the last fiscal year it would have increased the revenue $112,000,000—that is to say, it would have gathered from an importation of $775,724,264 of imported merchandise the enormous sum of $272,000,000, which is nearly $50,000,000 more than any customs revenue ever collected in one year in this country in the past. And to say that its rates will probably check dutiable imports to the extent of reducing the estimate to $70,000,000 is only another way of saying that to that extent such rates are prohibitory.

American consumers are shut in the home market to be preyed upon by combinations and trusts without possibility of relief from outside competition. Such combinations, by joining to keep up prices and to curtail production, wage more merciless war against the employment, the opportunities and the compensation of American labor than any possible competition from abroad could do.

The falling off of importations under the present law dispels the illusion that the American laborer is anywhere deprived of employment by the importation of foreign products. The gratifying increase in our exports of manufactures is equally strong proof that those laws are helping us to enter and command new markets, which means not only larger employment for our artisans, but more home consumers for our farmers.

Product of McKinleyism.

A legislative committee which has been investigating the condition of the coal miners in the Pittsburg district has revealed a shocking state of affairs. The operators themselves were put upon the stand, but they disagreed so radically in their testimony that they fell out and passed the lie between them. It was proved that the miners worked three days a week all last winter for 35 and 50 cents a day, and that even at these pauper wages they were cheated by the operators enlarging the screens and using false weights. They were charged exorbitant rents for the shanties they occupied and cheated at every turn. The mine workers in Pennsylvania have passed through a winter of starvation. With the earth beneath their feet teeming with coal, they have been forced to the verge of starvation by the operators, who control both output and wage scale. Not content with this, the operators cheat their miserable employes by the basest means. And these are the men who demand and receive a 75 per cent. tariff to protect their men from the pauper labor of Europe.

Blaine Opposed a Duty on Hides.

The following letter from Secretary of State James G. Blaine in 1890 is supposed to have had great weight with the ways and means committee:

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1890.

DEAR MR. MCKINLEY—It is a great mistake to take hides from the free list, where they have been for so many years. It is a slap in the face to the South Americans, with whom we are trying to enlarge our trade. It will benefit the farmer by adding 5 to 8 per cent to the price of his children's shoes. It will yield a profit to the butcher only, the last man that needs it. The movement is injudicious from beginning to end, in every form and phase. Pray stop it before it sees light. Such movements as this for protection will protect the Republican party into a speedy retirement.

Yours hastily, JAMES G. BLAINE.

Hon. William McKinley, Chairman Ways and Means.

Where is the Blaine this year who can head off the westerners who want their share of protection and foolishly imagine that they can get it by a duty on hides? It is perfectly consistent with the protection system to tax hides, especially as the bulk of the tax would probably go to a few monopoly butchers and ranchmen. But observe some of the effects upon our industries:

The importations of untaxed hides and skins last year were valued at $20,216,528. The goatskins were valued at $10,303,359. The former were mostly converted into sole leather, beltings and such like heavy material, for which our native hides are not thick enough. The goatskins are not produced in this country.

From this raw material we not only manufacture boots, shoes and leather goods for our own people cheaper and better than they are made elsewhere in the world, but we exported finished products of the value of $20,242,756. Without free and cheap raw material this export trade would have been impossible, and our own people, as Mr. Blaine pointed out, would be compelled to pay more for their footwear. The wages paid to our workers in leather last year amounted to $25,542,166.

Protecting the Few Woolgrowers.

Suppose the Dingley duties on wool would give the woolgrowers all the protection claimed and that the price of wool would actually go up the full amount of the duty, which, of course, is absurd. What would be the effect upon the country at large?

Mr. Edward Atkinson, statistician, estimates the annual wool product at $55,000,000 out of a total of $13,300,000,000 produced by all the workers of the country and the persons dependent on the wool industry at 300,000 out of a total population of 73,000,000. The wool duty then means that out of every 240 persons 239 are to be "held up" for the benefit of the other one. This is a sample of what protection does. Of course more than 300,000 persons may sometimes raise a few sheep, but the interests of these others are more those of the consumer than of the sheep raiser, and they would lose more because of increased cost of woolens than they would gain by the increased price of wool.

The protective tariff system is a farce when considered in connection with the farmer or the workingman. Will they ever fully appreciate it?

An Odious Tax.

The tin plate makers wish to boom their business by increasing the duty on imported tin plate, to the injury of the canning industry and other industries that flourish by reason of cheap tin plate. Another blow is struck at business by abolishing the rebate on exported tin cans. Now canned goods exported in cans made of imported tin are allowed a drawback of the duty paid, and thus an export business has been built up in canned fruits, oysters, vegetables, petroleum, etc. Over 4,000,000 tin cans are sent abroad annually, containing oil which competes with that of Russia. When Russia can buy tin plate at $2.70 a box, while we have to pay $3.50 for it, it is evident that our competition will be rendered difficult. Mr. Dingley robs Peter to pay Paul.—Baltimore Sun.

Why We Shiver.

It is true that woolen clothing, underwear and blankets will be out of the reach of people of moderate means when Dingley has his way, but just think how sweet it is to suffer for one's country and to shiver in order that the robber barons may continue to wax fat and contribute to the "legitimate" expenses of the g. o. p!—Louisville Post.

Whose Appetite?

We used to hear much for twenty-five years from the Republican brethren safely stalled at the public crib about an awful "organized appetite," which appetite they described as the Democratic party. They felt it a patriotic duty to disappoint this appetite in order to satisfy their own. The country would be lost if they were not permitted to take their meals in peace at the expense of the Government. During all these twenty-five years the Democratic party went on in season and out of season, met defeat every four years with equanimity, but stuck fast by their principles, whereas if they were an organized appetite they would not have survived one disastrous campaign.

These little facts may be brought out in view of the fact that there are on file in the State Department at Washington no less than 30,000 applications for appointments in the consular service. These come from Republicans. Of course they will protest there is no organized appetite among them. They are not very hungry and very thirsty. But the facts are against them. The Republican party is at all times the party of grab, writ large. The Republican party solemnly resolves that the saints should possess the earth, and with equal solemnity resolves that the saints belong exclusively in the Republican party.

Humbug, charlatanism, hypocrisy, greed and jobbery are the characteristics of the Republican party. It is "an organized appetite" if ever there was one.—Chicago Chronicle.

East Against the West.

The number of sheep in the United States east of the Mississippi declined from 21,179,000 in 1870 to 11,516,467 in 1897 in spite of the fact that the McKinley tariff added one cent a pound to the 1883 tariff on clothing wool. West of the Mississippi the flocks increased from 7,299,000 to 25,302,176 in the same period. The flocks of Montana are now a million head larger than those of Ohio, though when the tariff of 1883 was enacted Ohio had 5,050,541 head and Montana but 405,000. Wool, however, declined after the McKinley bill became a law. It is not surprising in view of these facts that the East cares little for the tariff on wool, since its flocks will dwindle anyhow. It does care a great deal for the chance of exports that free wool gives, and the attempt of the West to levy an excessive duty will be bitterly fought.

Urge Moderation.

Some of the severest criticisms not only of special duties and clauses, but of the whole accursed protective system, come from the protected manufacturers themselves in their struggle with opposing interests. Mr. S. N. D. North, secretary of the Woolen Manufacturers' association, is now and always has been a stanch protectionist. As such he believes that the 70,000,000 consumers of this country are legitimate subjects for plunder and that the manufacturers are the proper persons to enjoy the protection plunder.

The free wool experiment which we have been trying for three years, besides being an object lesson in the way of cheap woolens, has taught the woolen manufacturers that they can make as much or more profit with free wool and moderate protection, which permits people of moderate means to wear real woolen goods, than with high duties on both wool and woolens, which restricts the use of woolens to people in good circumstances. The manufacturers therefore display more than their usual modesty and patriotism in the advice which they are giving to congress. Mr. North is in Washington to voice the manufacturers' patriotism. Here is part of his advice as taken from the Washington correspondence of The Dry Goods Economist:

I am free to say the bill is far from satisfactory to the woolen manufacturers. The chief fault is to be found with the raw wool duties, which are so high that our manufacturers will find themselves sorely embarrassed. It is true the committee has provided compensatory duties which are probably sufficient to offset the duties on raw wool, but the difficulty will be, in my opinion, that the very considerable increase in price which must be made to cover the additional cost of raw material will have the effect of cutting down consumption to an extent that will be disastrous to the manufacturers. I do not contend that the rates on woolen manufactures in the bill are not sufficient to protect us against too severe foreign competition, but the limit of the consumer's purchasing power must control him in buying woolen manufactures, and I fear the rates of the new bill will very materially restrict consumption.

This is practically saying to Dingley, Aldrich and the other servants of the protected manufacturers at Washington:

"Go slow with your high duties and don't try to protect too many. If you let everybody into the protection ring, there will be nobody outside to prey upon and we will have to prey upon each other. Don't make the mistake of taxing raw materials too high. We wouldn't mind it if we could sell our goods and charge the tax over to the consumer. But when the tax is so high that we have to make our prices almost out of sight we have found that we cannot sell so many goods, because the people can't afford to wear clothes—that is, woolen clothes, which are the only ones worth considering because they are the only ones which we manufacture. Our solicitude for the dear American consumer is such that we do not wish to compel him to clothe himself in the skins of beasts, which are neither fashionable nor healthful. Let us not tax him to death. Let us be reasonable and encourage him to live and to wear clothes. By so doing we can keep our mills running and give employment to American workingmen at American wages, which, after all, is the chief object aimed at by us protected manufacturers."—Byron W. Holt.

Political Notes.

For what shall it profit a Kentuckian to be a Hunter if he bag nothing but an indictment?

The report that Russell Sage has come out in a new $6.75 spring suit indicates that we are over the worst of the hard times.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A large majority of the Republican patriots in Washington are now advocating the free and unlimited coinage of appointments.

The sugar trust has not been as polite to the Government as it might have been, but the Department of Agriculture is magnanimously planting tons of beet seed where it will do the most good, and, by and by, when the harvest shall be ready, the trust will be on hand to take the bulk of it.—Philadelphia Record.

Political machines may be made effective for a time, but the only machine which can be depended upon all the time is the people. The officeholder who has the confidence of the people and who is backed by the people needs no other machine. The way to get the confidence of the people is to be frank with them.—Cleveland Leader.

Russia wants more armor plate from the Carnegie trust, and will probably be able to get it at the old price of $225 per ton. The Czar has a most favored nation treaty with the trust, and has made money by it. As a buyer of American armor plate it would be cash in Uncle Sam's pocket to go to Europe and be naturalized.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Judging from the number of distinguished Republicans, who, it is said, will be "taken care of by the President," because they failed of re-election to the House of Representatives or were defeated for some other office, it is quite plain that the present national administration is regarded in some quarters as an asylum for decayed politicians.—New Orleans States.

That Tired Feeling

Afflicts nearly every one at this season. You know just what it means—no energy, no ambition, without spirit, life, vitality. Some men and women endeavor temporarily to overcome That Tired Feeling by great force of will. But this is unsafe, as it pulls powerfully upon the nervous system, which will not long stand such strain. Too many people "work on their nerves," and the result is seen in unfortunate wrecks masked "nervous prostration," in every direction. That Tired Feeling is a positive proof of thin, weak, impure blood, for if the blood is rich, pure, vitalized and vigorous it imparts life and energy. The necessity of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for that tired feeling is, therefore, apparent to every one, and the good it will do you is equally beyond question.

Weak Nervous

"I was afflicted with That Tired Feeling and general debility and had no appetite and my blood did not seem to circulate. I heartily recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I find it is a cure for weakness and unsteady nerves." John C. Seamans, Cortland, N. Y.

A BABY WITH A HISTORY.

Thrown Overboard from a Slaver—Rescued by Children.

The nice, bright, intelligent little fellow seen in the middle of this group has an extraordinary story—a story that well illustrates the romance of the mission field. One day when the tide was out the other 5-ur children were playing on the seashore at Zanzibar, when they picked up a little black baby, dripping wet and half dead. They ran with their find to Miss Mills, a well-known missionary, and it was afterward found that the baby had been thrown overboard from a slave dhow, because he seemed too ill to be worth the slave dealer's while to smuggle ashore. Miss Mills nursed the little boy back to health and strength, and he became the pet of her school.

The Use of Aluminum.

The use of aluminum in the arts does not grow in proportion to the reduction in the cost of the material. A few years ago the price of the metal was from $10 to $15 a pound. It is now sold at from 31 to 32 cents a pound. At that price it is now cheaper than copper or brass for the same purpose, because for a given strength the weight is much less. The consumption of these metals in 1896 was: Copper, 156,000 tons; brass, 30,000 tons; aluminum, 650 tons. The producers of aluminum in order to make a market for the metal have been obliged to discover nearly all of its uses, invent methods of handling it, and build the works for turning out the finished product. Thus far it has nearly displaced nickel in the arts, and it bids fair to eventually displace brass for most purposes, except where exposed to a heat of over 300 degrees. It is largely used for cooking utensils and keeps bright. It is used in laboratories, and for the handles of surgical instruments, not only for its lightness, but because it is not affected by the antiseptics used. It is coming rapidly into use for bicycle parts. Dentists use it for plates for false teeth, and it has been used to replace a broken jaw. One of its latest uses is for lithographic plates instead of stones, cheapening the process. In electrical apparatus it is useful on account of its non-magnetic quality. In Europe it is being used to reduce the weight of military accouterments, canteens, buttons, belt plates, and the like being made of it. The anticipated output in 1898 is 2,000 tons, and in 1900 10,000 tons.

Cycle Artillery.

The following description of cannon mounted on a motor-cycle is given by the Revue du Cercle Militaire, Paris, which gets its information from the Armeeblatt, an Austrian military paper:

"An engine of 16-horse-power actuates a four-wheeled rubber-tired cycle carrying two rapid-fire guns. These two guns, mounted on pivots, one in front, the other in the rear, can each describe a semi-circle, the motion being effected automatically.

"The discharge is controlled by the motor mechanism itself, and can take place as well when the cycle is in motion as when it is at rest. The number of shots fired per minute can be varied from 50 to 700. The cycle carries 500 projectiles for each gun.

"The attendant, seated on the cycle between the two guns, has only to train them and then start his engine. He is protected in front and behind by shields, fixed to the guns.

"The cycle as a whole is also protected against bullets, and even against small artillery projectiles. Besides, the mechanism of discharge, acting automatically, keeps on working, even after the attendant is disabled.

"On a good, smooth road, this cycle can go at a speed of forty-five miles an hour, so that it could distance any other kind of artillery. We can hardly imagine the effect that fifty or a hundred of such cycles would produce when all in action at once."—Translated for the Literary Digest.

WEIGHTY WORDS FOR Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

A BOY'S OWN RAILROAD.

Built the Locomotive, Laid the Track, and Operates It Himself.

Robert M. Tyler, the son of William M. Tyler, has built a perfectly equipped railroad, with rolling stock and locomotive, on the farm of his father at Buck's Hill, a suburb of Waterbury, Conn.

He built the locomotive himself. He surveyed the line, decided upon the grades and curves, and, aided by ordinary labor, made the roadbed, laid the rails, and now runs the engine. It is a real railroad and not a toy—a railroad over which the engine, built by the boy, runs daily, hauls stones, lumber and other materials and farm products, and has an existence with a definite and profitable purpose. Hunters found afield with their dogs take Tyler's road to get a lift toward the hunting grounds, and lots of people have been delighted with an excursion trip over the line.

It was manifest that profit as well as fun awaited the success of a miniature railroad running over Buck's Hill. Tyler, who went to work at it in a very crude, small-boyish way at first, soon compelled his elders to have faith in him as a civil and mechanical engineer and road constructor. Then the necessary cash capital was forthcoming as fast as it became necessary for Tyler to invest in material.

The boy engine-builder very sensibly refrained from attempting to follow the lines of drive-wheel locomotive. Tyler was indifferent to appearances, but bent on practical results. The boy's sensible aim was to save and make money, and not to expend it extravagantly. The engine and boiler and the car on which these are mounted cost not less than $500. The further equipment of Buck's Hill line consists of two cars, each four-wheeled and each having a capacity of 1,500 pounds.

In running the line the boy surveyor humored the topography of the region with which he had to deal, and did not contract for any steep cuts or for any rock work. The stony, gravelly surface was easily converted into a solid bed. The rails used were of steel, and the cross ties were of chestnut. The gauge is twenty-six inches. The grade in its steepest part is 370 feet to the mile. The whole cost of constructing the railway was at the rate of $600 per mile.

THE GERMAN KAISER.

An English View of the Ruler of the Mighty Teuton Empire.

Is the Kaiser going crazy? This question, based on a dozen or more recent imperial acts, is agitating the German public mind to an extent which almost proves the general conviction that something is radically wrong with his majesty.

Something of Charles I., a little of Nero and a great deal of Ludwig II. of Bavaria, appear to form the composite parts of William's particular madness. From the first he borrowed most extreme notions of kingly prerogatives, he imitates the Roman in theatrical display, and the Bavarian in the treatment of his responsible ministers, to mention only one incident. If it were not for the Empress, who by family ties controls "Uncle" Hohenlohe, the good-natured Chancellor, a ministerial crisis would be declared in permanency. Hohenlohe, poor man, experienced the horrors of insanity among his own nearest relatives, and is inclined to be lenient with his "big cousin"—more compassionate almost than his dignity as an old man and experienced, patriotic statesman permits.

Europe, says the London Spectator, is suffering just now from the individuality, rather than from the policy, of the German Emperor. He is displaying a character with which it is most difficult for diplomatists to deal, and which is not entirely consistent with his earlier career. The habit of ruling and the success, or rather the absence of resistance, which in internal affairs has so far distinguished his reign, have developed the Emperor's peculiarities in a most marked degree. He had always a sufficient belief in himself, and showed it in his dismissal of Prince Bismarck, but of late his belief has become exaggerated into a confidence scarcely to be distinguished from presumption. He seems capable of thanking God for a great harvest, and sending Him the Order of the Red Eagle in acknowledgment.

Even his own subjects, who were at first disposed by tradition and habit of mind to welcome another "strong" Hohenzollern, now shake their heads and lament that their Kaiser, who is also their commander-in-chief, acts so completely under the impulse of his own will. They never know what he will do to-morrow. There is no ruling statesman now visible in Germany, for the chancellor is old and deferential; the minister of war accepts instead of advising orders, the finance minister (Dr. Miquel) is a highly intelligent, exceptionally intelligent, instrument of his majesty, and Baron von Marschall, as recent trials proved, though very able and fairly trusted, has to contend against many adverse influences. The Emperor is all in all, he is more determined than ever to play the first role in the political drama, and as his claim is entirely acknowledged within his own dominions, where to speak lightly of his majesty now involves a sort of civil death, he extends it to all Europe and indeed to all the world. It is to be lord of a "world-wide empire" that the Emperor demands, or threatens to demand, from his Parliament such vast additions to the navy.

THROWING THE DISCUS.

A Novel Sport Unearthed from the Antiquities of Greece.

A sport new to modern times has been adopted from the Olympian games of ancient Greece and may become a favorite among athletes of classic tastes. It is said that the pastime of throwing the discus was invented in Persia, and Homer states that it was a favorite diversion of the troops besieging Troy. Originally the discus was of stone, and disks of this character were used along with those of metal down to the latest classical times. Homer represents some of his heroes as contending with a lump of iron perforated in the center for the passage of a handle, the prize for the winner being nothing more or less than the discus itself. Some of the Americans who visited Athens last year are trying to introduce discus throwing among college games. But the matter has not yet passed the theoretical stage. It is time for something new in sport, however, and throwing the discus, combining as it does both strength and skill, is a formidable candidate for public form.

Three Celebrated Horses.

The most celebrated battle steeds of the civil war were Cincinnati, Traveler and Winchester, the favorite chargers of Grant, Lee and Sheridan. When the hero of Vicksburg visited Cincinnati a few months after the close of that brilliant campaign he was requested to visit a dying man who was exceedingly desirous of seeing him. When they met the invalid said:

"Gen. Grant, I wish to give you a noble horse, who has no superior on the continent, as a testimony of my admiration for your character and past services to our country. There is a condition attached to the gift—that you will always treat him kindly."

Grant accepted the magnificent bay, of course, faithfully keeping his promise, and named him Cincinnati. He was a son of Lexington, with a single exception the fastest thoroughbred that ever ran four miles on an American course. The General was offered $10,000 for the horse, as he had a record of speed almost equal to that of his famous half-brother, Kentucky. Cincinnati was a superb and spirited steed of great endurance, Grant riding him almost constantly during the Wilderness campaign and passing from end to end of our long line. The noble horse was retired soon after the close of the war, enjoying "an old age of dignified leisure" on a Maryland estate, where his master frequently saw him, and where he died and received honorable burial in September, 1874.—Outlook.

A Monopoly.

"I've got a great mind," said the young man, "to go West and grow up with the country."

"But you don't know anything about agriculture."

"I know that. But there are one or two sections where there seem to be so many politicians that I believe an energetic man could come pretty near getting a monopoly of the farming."—Washington Star.

Rocked on the Crest of the Waves.

The landsman, tourist or commercial traveler, speedily begins, and not only begins, but continues, to feel the extreme of human misery during the transit across the tempestuous Atlantic. But if, with wise prescience, he has provided himself with a supply of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, his pangs are promptly mitigated, and then cease ere the good ship again drops her anchor. This is worth knowing, and thousands of our yachtsmen, summer voyagers, tourists and business men do know it.

"Aw, old fellah," said Cholly, as he found himself face to face with Willieboy, "aw! I say! I hear you 'ave discharged your man, you know!" "Yaas!" said Willieboy, "I had to do it, don't you know. He quite disgwaced me. Yaas. Disgwaced me, you know. Just fawncy! A wed flower, and I was feeling quite blue that night, you know. So I discharged him. Because wed and blue don't hawmonize, you know. I had to dischawge the creature; he had such howwid taste, don't you know."—Twinkles.

Rattled.

To make a mad dog to order, tie a tin pan to his tail. A man made mad is one who, after suffering ten, fifteen or twenty years with rheumatism, finds that by the use of a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil he is cured. He feels the waste of his life in pain, with the loss of time, place and money, and then reflects that for the expense of 50c. he could have saved all this and lived free of pain; it is enough to make him mad. Most of our sufferings are intensified by delay in seeking relief, and there is much worth knowing as regards the cure of pain that we find out at last only by the use of the best cure. It is worth knowing that for the cure of rheumatism there is special virtue in The Great Remedy for Pain, St. Jacobs Oil, and as so much can be saved by its use, the cost is really nothing.

One of the oldest, if not the oldest, of English firms is that of Richardson, leather manufacturers, of Newcastle-on-Tyne. The predecessors of this firm were leather sellers to the monastery of St. Hilda, which was disestablished at the time of the Reformation.

The New Food Drink.

Half the "coffee" you drink isn't coffee anyway; but even if it were Mocha and Java, the new food-drink, Grain-O, is better. There is nothing in it to hurt, while in coffee there is. The better the coffee—the less adulteration—the more injurious. Grain-O is made from pure grains, has the rich color of good coffee, sets nicely on the most delicate stomach, is fine for children, is nourishing, and keeps nobody awake nights. Drink as much as you please at a late dinner or supper and you don't get up in the morning saying, "Oh, my head, my head!" Try it a week or two and you won't go back to the old beverage. And then the cost—four cups of Grain-O at the price of one cup of coffee. Ask your grocer for a package. Two sizes—15c. and 25c.

Drunk for Twenty Years.

A correspondent writes: "I was drunk on and off for over twenty years, drunk when I had money, sober when I had none. Many dear friends I lost, and numbers gave me good advice to no purpose; but, thank God, an angel hand came at last in the form of my poor wife, who administered your marvelous remedy, 'Anti-Jag,' to me without my knowledge or consent. I am now saved and completely transformed from a worthless fellow to a sober and respected citizen."

If "Anti-Jag" cannot be had at your druggist, it will be mailed in plain wrapper with full directions how to give secretly, on receipt of One Dollar, by the Renova Chemical Co., 66 Broadway, New York, or they will gladly mail full particulars free.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN HER UP.

A Convincing Letter From One of Mrs. Pinkham's Admirers.

No woman can look fresh and fair who is suffering from displacement of the womb. It is ridiculous to suppose that such a difficulty can be cured by an artifical support like a pessary.

Artificial supports make matters worse, for they take away all the chance of the ligaments recovering their vigor and tone. Use strengthens; the ligaments have a work to do.

If they grow flabby and refuse to hold the womb in place, there is but one remedy, and that is to strengthen their fibres and draw the cords back into their normal condition, thus righting the position of the womb.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is designed especially for this purpose, and, taken in connection with her Sanative Wash, applied locally, will tone up the uterine system, strengthening the cords or ligaments which hold up the womb.

Any woman who suspects that she has this trouble—and she will know it by a dragging weight in the lower abdomen, irritability of the bladder and rectum, great fatigue in walking, and leucorrhœa—should promptly commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If the case is stubborn, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., stating freely all symptoms. You will receive a prompt letter of advice, free of charge. All letters are read and answered by women only. The following letter relates to an unusually severe case of displacement of the womb, which was cured by the Pinkham remedies. Surely it is convincing:

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier cured me when the doctors had given me up. I had spent hundreds of dollars searching for a cure, but found little or no relief until I began the Pinkham remedies. I had falling and displacement of the womb so badly that for two years I could not walk across the floor. I also had profuse menstruation, kidney, liver, and stomach trouble. The doctors said my case was hopeless. I had taken only four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and one of the Blood Purifier when I felt like a new person. I am now cured, much to the surprise of my friends, for they all gave me up to die. Now many of my lady friends are using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through my recommendation, and are regaining health. It has also cured my little son of kidney trouble. I would advise every suffering woman in the land to write to Mrs. Pinkham for aid."—Mrs. Emma Pangborn, Alanson, Mich.

The Electric Light of Mowerdom

The pine knot—the tallow candle—the oil lamp—gas—these are stages in the evolution of illumination, which today finds its highest exponent in the electric light.

Similar and no less striking has been the evolution of grain and grass cutting machinery. In 1831 the scythe and the cradle were superseded by the McCormick Reaper. The intervening years have seen many improvements, until now we have that model Harvester and Binder, the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, and that veritable electric light of mowerdom, the

NEW MEDICAL LAW.

The new state medical board of examination has started business under the new law, and will soon be ready to issue license to such physicians as are entitled to them. They say that all who hold diplomas from good Medical Colleges, will have no trouble. But those who have no diplomas, or only such as can be bought at certain so-called medical colleges, will be left out in the cold. They expect to clean out the traveling doctors also.

Greater New York

The governor of New York State has signed the charter of the monster new city which includes New York and all the surrounding cities except those across the Hudson in New Jersey. The combined city, will be made up of five boroughs. These are Manhattan, which is New York proper; the Bronx, which includes the villages and country lying at the north end of the city. The third is Brooklyn; the fourth is Queen's, which includes the country next outside of Brooklyn with its towns; and the last is Richmond, which includes all of Staten Island and the towns on it. (It will be remembered, that Long Island has but three counties, King's, where Brooklyn is; Queens, next to that, and the eastern part of the island, which is Sussex county. Staten Island has always been a separate county, Richmond.)

Each of these five boroughs is divided into ten "council districts." The Mayor will be elected for four years at a salary of $15,000 per annum, instead of for two years at $10,000 as at present. With the exception of the comptroller, who will be elected by popular vote, all muncipal officers will be appointed by the mayor, who may remove at will during the first six months of his tenure.

There will be only one police force, under a bipartisan board of four, as at present. The department of public works is abolished, and street bureaus will replace it, their heads to be appointed by the mayor.

There will be a muncipal legislature of two houses, the council of 28 members elected from designated districts, and the assembly of five members from each of the 21 senatorial districts in the Greater New York. Of course, Brooklyn and Long Island City are names no longer known to the map.

Greater New York covers a territory 359¾ square miles, 32 miles long and 16 miles wide, with an estimated population of about 3,400,000, second only in both respects to London. The first mayor will elected Noy. 2 next.

The Board also passed a resolution to have the country schools of the county begin uniformly Monday Sept. 13, It also passed a resolution in favor of the County Institute being held as usual, the last week of August, or August 23 to 27 inclusive.

Supt. Merica briefly reviewed the progress of the school work of the county during the fourteen years that he has served as county superintendent, attributing in a large measure whatever success has attended his efforts to the progressive spirit and honest purpose of the various school trustees that held office during his long term of service. He has always, he hoped, fully appreciated the honorable and responsible trust they confided to his care and the hearty co-operation they always gave to him, and only regretted that he could not have done more to advance the interest of the schools, and the cause of education in the county in general. He trusted that in the future as in the past the spirit of harmony, justice, wisdom, and the true progress of education would govern all their deliberations, and that the board would give his successor their undivided support and co-operation. This is the last meeting the board will hold under Mr. Merica's supervision.

Aaron B. Richards.

The subject of this notice was born in Genessee Co., N. Y. January 25, 1843, and died at his home in Auburn, Ind., May 7, 1897, his age being 54 years, 3 month and 12 days. His early life was on the farm, but in 1865 he came to Waterloo, this county, and took service with the Lake Shore road. For three years he was night agent, then two years, was day baggagemaster, and then was made station and ticket agent, which position he filled till 1875. Oct. 12, 1870 he was united in marriage to Tillie Leonardson, who died in May 1872. May 15, 1876 he was united in marriage to Sara Belle Buss, who with their four children survive him. In 1880 they removed to Mishawaka where they resided till 1886, when they came to Auburn where they have since resided. The funeral was on Tuesday, May 11, at 1 p. m. at the M. E. church in this city, services being under the auspices of the Oddfellows of which order he had been a member for twenty-one years. The Rebekahs also assisted. The services were largely attended, and were conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. M. Guild, assisted by Rev. W. L. Meese of the same church, Rev. J. D. Brosy of the Lutheran church and Rev. F. C. Colvin of the Presbyterian church. A long concourse of friends and mourners followed the remains to Waterloo where were met great numbers of his old neighbors, and there in the lovely cemetery, with the solemn exercises of his order, he was laid to rest.

Mr. Richards had been for many years an active member of the M. E. church whose people and pastors speak highly of his faitfulness and christian devotion. His neighbors testify to the same high qualtitles of character, and he will be greatly missed in the community. To his wife and young children the blow falls with severest weight, for it took away a loving husband and father from the home which had always been the center of his affections.

To the orders and the neighbors, all these, the bereaved family express the deepest sense of gratitude for their help and sympathy.

AT THE PRISON.

Dr. Nusbaum went to Michigan City, as announced last week, on invitation from the prison officials, to witness the execution of the colored murderer, Henry Jones. C. M. Brown accompanied him, but under the legal regulations could not witness the hanging, though he was present and saw the procession and prisoner as they marched from the cell in which Jones was confined, to the "solitary" in which the execution took place. It is the law, that these executions must take place before daylight on the morning selected. As a matter of fact, this one, was just after midnight. The procession started from Jones' cell at 12:09 and marched about the distance of a block, and on entering the building in which the scaffold was, there was but little delay. There was a prayer by the Chaplain, and at first Jones bowed his head reverently, but soon raised his eyes and looked about the room, apparently unconcerned. He was dressed in a new suit and when they were ready to put the black cap on him, he took off the cap he was wearing, handed it to one of the guards saying, "You can have this, I don't need it any more." When asked if he had anything to say, his first reply was so mumbled as not to be understood and he was asked again, when he answered "No, sir," in a distinct voice. He seemed cool and unconcerned, like one who either was hardened in crime, or who was too dull to realize the terrible situation. When all was ready, Deputy-warden Kinney, sprung the trap, and Jones fell six feet, his feet nearly reaching the floor. Dr. Nusbaum stepped to one side of him, took his right arm and felt the pulse. At first the heart beats were distinct but soon grew more and more irregular, till at the end of 18 minutes they ceased, and he was dead. His neck was broken by the fall. It is claimed that the rope used, cost $15 and two were purchased, in case one might fail. The rope is small and of the best hemp, and soaked in oil to give it strength and make it serviceable for its deadly work. He was cut down at 12:30.

Jones had committed several murders, before, and at the time he killed the man, Thomas, for whose murder he was hanged, he was already serving a 21-year sentence for killing a man. Thomas was one of the witnesses on whose testimony he had been convicted for this crime, at Indianapolis in 1895, and when Thomas came to prison the next year, on conviction of stealing; Jones kept an eye on him. His first chance was one Sunday, last July, when the two men happened to be seated near each other in the prison church or chapel at services, Jones right behind Thomas. Thomas realized his danger and kept an eye on Jones. Just as the Chaplain was closing, Jones stabbed Thomas in the back, with a table knife he had concealed. Thomas got up to defend himself and received two more stabs, but guards separated the men, and were taken out. The Chaplain finished the exercises, without appearing to notice the trouble, and few knew of it till later, as the men were way back at the rear of the large audience. Thomas died next day. Jones was brought to trial at Laporte, but was taken to South Bend on a change of venue. His is the first execution in the prison under the new law. The state allows the warden $50 an execution.

NEW MEDICAL LAW.

The new state medical board of examination has started business under the new law, and will soon be ready to issue license to such physicians as are entitled to them. They say that all who hold diplomas from good Medical Colleges, will have no trouble. But those who have no diplomas, or only such as can be bought at certain so-called medical colleges, will be left out in the cold. They expect to clean out the traveling doctors also.

Greater New York

The governor of New York State has signed the charter of the monster new city which includes New York and all the surrounding cities except those across the Hudson in New Jersey. The combined city, will be made up of five boroughs. These are Manhattan, which is New York proper; the Bronx, which includes the villages and country lying at the north end of the city. The third is Brooklyn; the fourth is Queen's, which includes the country next outside of Brooklyn with its towns; and the last is Richmond, which includes all of Staten Island and the towns on it. (It will be remembered, that Long Island has but three counties, King's, where Brooklyn is; Queens, next to that, and the eastern part of the island, which is Sussex county. Staten Island has always been a separate county, Richmond.)

Each of these five boroughs is divided into ten "council districts." The Mayor will be elected for four years at a salary of $15,000 per annum, instead of for two years at $10,000 as at present. With the exception of the comptroller, who will be elected by popular vote, all muncipal officers will be appointed by the mayor, who may remove at will during the first six months of his tenure.

There will be only one police force, under a bipartisan board of four, as at present. The department of public works is abolished, and street bureaus will replace it, their heads to be appointed by the mayor.

There will be a muncipal legislature of two houses, the council of 28 members elected from designated districts, and the assembly of five members from each of the 21 senatorial districts in the Greater New York. Of course, Brooklyn and Long Island City are names no longer known to the map.

Greater New York covers a territory 359¾ square miles, 32 miles long and 16 miles wide, with an estimated population of about 3,400,000, second only in both respects to London. The first mayor will elected Nov. 2 next.

The Board also passed a resolution to have the country schools of the county begin uniformly Monday Sept. 13, It also passed a resolution in favor of the County Institute being held as usual, the last week of August, or August 23 to 27 inclusive.

Supt. Merica briefly reviewed the progress of the school work of the county during the fourteen years that he has served as county superintendent, attributing in a large measure whatever success has attended his efforts to the progressive spirit and honest purpose of the various school trustees that held office during his long term of service. He has always, he hoped, fully appreciated the honorable and responsible trust they confided to his care and the hearty co-operation they always gave to him, and only regretted that he could not have done more to advance the interest of the schools, and the cause of education in the county in general. He trusted that in the future as in the past the spirit of harmony, justice, wisdom, and the true progress of education would govern all their deliberations, and that the board would give his successor their undivided support and co-operation. This is the last meeting the board will hold under Mr. Merica's supervision.

Aaron B. Richards.

The subject of this notice was born in Genessee Co., N. Y. January 25, 1843, and died at his home in Auburn, Ind., May 7, 1897, his age being 54 years, 3 month and 12 days. His early life was on the farm, but in 1865 he came to Waterloo, this county, and took service with the Lake Shore road. For three years he was night agent, then two years, was day baggagemaster, and then was made station and ticket agent, which position he filled till 1875. Oct. 12, 1870 he was united in marriage to Tillie Leonardson, who died in May 1872. May 15, 1876 he was united in marriage to Sara Belle Buss, who with their four children survive him. In 1880 they removed to Mishawaka where they resided till 1886, when they came to Auburn where they have since resided. The funeral was on Tuesday, May 11, at 1 p. m. at the M. E. church in this city, services being under the auspices of the Oddfellows of which order he had been a member for twenty-one years. The Rebekahs also assisted. The services were largely attended, and were conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. M. Guild, assisted by Rev. W. L. Meese of the same church, Rev. J. D. Brosy of the Lutheran church and Rev. F. C. Colvin of the Presbyterian church. A long concourse of friends and mourners followed the remains to Waterloo where were met great numbers of his old neighbors, and there in the lovely cemetery, with the solemn exercises of his order, he was laid to rest.

Mr. Richards had been for many years an active member of the M. E. church whose people and pastors speak highly of his faitfulness and christian devotion. His neighbors testify to the same high qualtities of character, and he will be greatly missed in the community. To his wife and young children the blow falls with severest weight, for it took away a loving husband and father from the home which had always been the center of his affections.

To the orders and the neighbors, all these, the bereaved family express the deepest sense of gratitude for their help and sympathy.

AT THE PRISON.

Dr. Nusbaum went to Michigan City, as announced last week, on invitation from the prison officials, to witness the execution of the colored murderer, Henry Jones. C. M. Brown accompanied him, but under the legal regulations could not witness the hanging, though he was present and saw the procession and prisoner as they marched from the cell in which Jones was confined, to the "solitary" in which the execution took place. It is the law, that these executions must take place before daylight on the morning selected. As a matter of fact, this one, was just after midnight. The procession started from Jones' cell at 12:09 and marched about the distance of a block, and on entering the building in which the scaffold was, there was but little delay. There was a prayer by the Chaplain, and at first Jones bowed his head reverently, but soon raised his eyes and looked about the room, apparently unconcerned. He was dressed in a new suit and when they were ready to put the black cap on him, he took off the cap he was wearing, handed it to one of the guards saying, "You can have this, I don't need it any more." When asked if he had anything to say, his first reply was so mumbled as not to be understood and he was asked again, when he answered "No, sir," in a distinct voice. He seemed cool and unconcerned, like one who either was hardened in crime, or who was too dull to realize the terrible situation. When all was ready, Deputy-warden Kinney, sprung the trap, and Jones fell six feet, his feet nearly reaching the floor. Dr. Nusbaum stepped to one side of him, took his right arm and felt the pulse. At first the heart beats were distinct but soon grew more and more irregular, till at the end of 18 minutes they ceased, and he was dead. His neck was broken by the fall. It is claimed that the rope used, cost $15 and two were purchased, in case one might fail. The rope is small and of the best hemp, and soaked in oil to give it strength and make it serviceable for its deadly work. He was cut down at 12:30.

Jones had committed several murders, before, and at the time he killed the man, Thomas, for whose murder he was hanged, he was already serving a 21-year sentence for killing a man. Thomas was one of the witnesses on whose testimony he had been convicted for this crime, at Indianapolis in 1895, and when Thomas came to prison the next year, on conviction of stealing, Jones kept an eye on him. His first chance was one Sunday, last July, when the two men happened to be seated near each other in the prison church or chapel at services, Jones right behind Thomas. Thomas realized his danger and kept an eye on Jones. Just as the Chaplain was closing, Jones stabbed Thomas in the back, with a table knife he had concealed. Thomas got up to defend himself and received two more stabs, but guards separated the men, and were taken out. The Chaplain finished the exercises, without appearing to notice the trouble, and few knew of it till later, as the men were way back at the rear of the large audience. Thomas died next day. Jones was brought to trial at Laporte, but was taken to South Bend on a change of venue. His is the first execution in the prison under the new law. The state allows the warden $50 an execution.

—The township trustees or Elkhart county have been buying water tanks for the school houses, at $14.00 per tank. What such trustees need more than any thing else, is an improved "think tank." They also bought a lot of sterilizers mainly we suppose, because the agents "asked them to buy."

—Gen. Blair was over here to-day to get things in shape for the trial of young Fusselman. We understand that he and Mr. Welsheimer, the deputy prosecutor have agreed to have the preliminary hearing before Squire Walter on Monday of next week. The charge is for chicken stealing. It is now claimed that there is a regularly worked chicken stealing over east.

—Steuben Republican:—A new addicion has just been added to the north end of Auburn. The way that town is building out, north and south, looks as though they had one eye on J. Y. W. McClellan and the other on Calvin Husselman—both good men to have on the city council, when Auburn citifies.

* * * * * *

—The Lake Shore north bound noon train to-day was crowded to standing room with students who were returning to Angola to college, and the baggage car was likewise crowded with baggage and bicycles. At Fort Wayne several wheels were taken on, and at the Junction there were nine other wheels chucked in the car. Mr. DeLapp said he would give $1 for them, and they brought forth the keys. If the story is true these men tell, the umbrella menders should be looked after and the authorities should not lose sight of the men who furnished Mr. DeLapp the keys.

—Hon. E. D. Hartman was taken severely ill last evening with acute congestion of the lungs, and was very bad all night. Toward morning, he became easier, and is now inproving. We believe he was to sit as special judge at Angola a part of this week, at least, but we presume will not now be able to go.

—Rev. G. W. Healy went through on the north bound train last evening on his way to visit the old home in Michigan. It happened, that Mr. Cobb was going north on the same train, and as the two are warm friends, they had a good visit. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ralston were also at the train and had a handshake with him. He is looking well, and is here as a delegate from Montana, to the Great Assembly at Warsaw this month.

—While the COURIER never aims to make a fact bigger than it is, it sometimes goes to the other extreme and makes it too small. In speaking yesterday of the Greenler factory, we said their pay roll was thirty. It is really fifty-five. Their total out-put so far is also greater than we supposed amounting to one million and a half of hoops. They are putting on extra help and have to run nights, besides. This is a most gratifying showing for the new plant.

AN OUNCE TO PREVENT IS WORTH A POUND OF THE CURE.

Our wisdom, at best, is not very wise,
  But there are some things which seem to me
To be perfectly apparent to the dullest of eyes,
  That stagger our statesmen, if statesmen they be.

Why build we our prisons with walls high and strong
  Which cost us our millions and millions again
To house up our criminals guilty of wrong
  Fair women and children and strong brawny men.

And leave all the agencies at work day and night,
  Blunting men's senses, and poisoning the souls
Of women and children till their teachings of right
  Are nearly erased from memories scroll.

Dry up the fountain if you'd lessen the stream.
  Of the truth of this motto you can ever be sure
It is pure, simple, science, and not any dream
  "An ounce to prevent is worth a pound of the cure."

Why build the asylums in every land?
  For the thousands insane from Bacchus' domain
When one-tenth of the money in the people's right hand
  Would dry up the fountains, to burst not again

Why build we our school-houses in every town
  And then pay our taxes to run a good school,
With many of our children lounging around
  When a little compulsion would better the rule.

The children to-day will soon be the state,
  Making the laws, and breaking them too
It will then matter much what now is the rate
  Of their attendance at school all the way through.

Then dry up the fountain if you'd lessen the stream.
  Of the truth of this motto, you can ever be sure.
It is pure simple science, and not any dream.
  "An ounce to prevent is worth a pound of the cure.

Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite, complexion and general health.

CONSTIPATION

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

COURT NEXT WEEK.

Court begins here again next Monday. The two juries will be found in to-days COURIER. The cases not already ordered to some other county will be called up, but we cannot say at what date. At least this is what should be done. Of course the DAILY and WEEKLY will give full details as usual.

Decoration Day

Decoration Day is May 30. Let us all get ready to honor the patriotic dead. And everyone, old and young should give that day to their memory We hope to see the other papers of the county urge the universal observance by all classes. This year, there can be no excuse for non-attendance as the 30th is Sunday. Save up flowers and secure some place where you can get them. Brush up the old flags, and arrange the bunting. It is the day the nation remembers her honored dead.

HAD FUN

We didn't say who had fun. Each one can draw his own conclusion. And if he is then in doubt, let him ask Jim Simon. Jim works in the cigar lighter department at Kessler Bros' cigar factory. Yesterday, he was filling the electric coils used, with the usual lampblack paint when Henry Lockwood's little dog came in and he made up his mind to have some fun changing its spots. So he began to put the black paint on the white places, when some one remarked that Mr. Lockwood would be hot about it. This was a phase the painter had not thought of and he at once concluded he was doing wrong and would take it all back. It was a real case of "fast black" and the more he wet it and washed it the better it got. Then he tried gasolene, but failed; tried Garrett's washing powder, failed again; then got a curry comb and curried the poor thing. Still he did not change the spots. But he furnished lots of fun for the other employes. We suppose the pup will go about in borrowed colors for some time like Artemas Ward's pea-green ox. And Jim is now confining himself strictly to one line of work, and thinks of putting up a sign: "James Simon, Coil Painter, Limited."

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, and Commerce, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

The Sales for April.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade says: "The actual sales in April by the leading houses in each line of business in the principal cities east of the Rocky Mountains average only only about 10 per cent. less than in April, 1892, the year of the largest business hitherto, and were 6.1 per cent more than in the same month last year. While speculative business in nearly all lines is small and does not swell the clearing house returns, the volume of legitimate trade shows no corresponding decrease and this fact is one of the highest importance in all business calculations.

"The crop prospects are better for cotton and spring wheat."

Important Orders.

An important order, prohibiting a pension claimant, whose claim has been adjusted favorably or unfavorably, from filing papers for its reconsideration is disallowed, or for an increase of pension, had been issued, until one year from the date of the previous consideration of the case, is contemplated by the Commissioner of Pensions and may be issued soon. The purpose of the proposed order is to lessen the great volume of work confronting the bureau and to enable it to devote most of the time of the examiners to original claimants.

Forest Fires.

Shell Lake (Wis.) special: Forest fires are burning fiercely in all directions and unless rain comes soon many farmers will lose their homes. The cranberry marshes and blue berry brush are all afire and a light crop of each will be the result. Advice from Spooner says fires are raging north and west of that point and clouds of smoke obscure the sun. A big force of men is out trying to check the advance of the red destroyer.

Farewell Banquet to Bayard.

A farewell banquet was given by the American society, in London, to Mr. Bayard, former Ambassador. The company included Ambassador Hay, Mrs. Hay and all the members of the American embassy, and prominent Englishmen. The Lord Bishop of London, in a felicitous speech, proposed the health of the President of the United States. Newton Crane was the toasted guest of the evening.

Sad Day for Boys.

Friday was a fatal day for boys in Evansville, Ind. Fred Meisheimer and Fred Rumpf, two boys each about 12 years old, while riding in a dinkey boat in the river, were overturned and drowned. John Deeble, another 12-year-old boy, while on some sawlogs in the river, fell off and was drowned. Charles Kirves, a 12-year-old boy, fell from a housetop and was fatally injured.

Convict Hanged.

Henry Jones, colored, a convict in the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City, was hanged in the prison for the murder of a fellow convict named Thomas, who testified against him in the trial which resulted in his last sentence to prison. Jones showed no signs of fear at his fate and went to the scaffold without a tremor. The execution was private, as required by law.

Attempted to Wreck a Train.

Cheyenne special: An attempt was made to wreck the incoming Cheyenne and Northern Pacific passenger train by a misplaced switch in the yards at the northern entrance of the city. The train was running slowly and only the engine was derailed. Several Union Pacific brakemen have made confession of the crime.

Affairs in Cuba.

Havana special: The Spanish cruiser, Maria Christina, captured at the mouth of the Mosquito river, four lighters of American construction. They had apparently been used in landing filibustering expeditions. The troops ashore captured sixty-three boxes of cartridges belonging to the filibusterers.

Killed by Tramps.

A farmer named Harris, living five miles south of Waukesha, Wis., on the Mukwanago road, with his wife, were murdered by tramps. A hired man and girl succeeded in escaping, though both were injured. The tramps had been lodged for the night.

Michigan Banker Indicted.

Saginaw (Mich.) special: The Federal grand jury at Bay City has returned seven indictments against Clarence L. Judd for criminal acts in connection with the failure of the First National Bank of East Saginaw. He gave bail in the sum of $5,000.

Wrecked at Sea.

The British ship Traveller, from Sonadays, for Delaware breakwater, was wrecked off the Island of Rogriguez, 330 miles northeast of Mauritius. Three hundred tons of the cargo was saved. Capt. Christie, first officer, and fourteen of the crew died of fever.

Greece Will Fight It Out.

It is said positively that if the powers insist on the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Crete as a condition of mediation, Greece will reply that she prefers war even to extermination.

Found Body, But No Head.

An unknown man with his head cut off was found on the Rio branch of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. He had been run over by a passenger train. He had some war songs in his pocket. It is supposed he was on his way to attend the Grand Army of the Republic reunion.

Wages Reduced 18 Per Cent.

Advices from Upper East Tennessee and Southern Kentucky show that a general strike in all the coal mines in that section will probably occur during the next few days. The cause of the trouble is a general reduction of 18 per cent.

CLOUDS WERE SCATTERED.

Austrian Uses American Rainmakers' Plan to Prevent Storms.

Possibly it was from noticing the unsuccessful attempts made by the would-be rainmakers in the United States to bring down showers when wanted that an ingenious Austrian grape-grower was induced to exactly reverse the American practice. An account of his experiment is reported by United States Consul Stephan at Annaberg. The Austrian owned extensive vineyards situated on the southern slopes of the mountains, in a locality often visited by destructive hailstorms. At first he tried galvanized wire, but this was too expensive, and he decided to install a battery and test the plan of causing explosions to drive off the hailstorms. He erected six stations on prominent mountain summits commanding a territory about two miles in extent. Each station sheltered ten mortars and a corps of volunteers handled them. The practical test is thus described: Threatening black clouds made their appearance on the summits of the Bacher Mountains. At a given signal all the mortars were fired off and the continuous detonations in a few moments caused a sudden reaction in the movements of the clouds. The cloud wall opened up funnel-like; the mouth of the funnel began to rise in the form of consecutive rings expanding gradually until all the clouds scattered and entirely disappeared. No hail nor sudden down pour of rain fell. The same experience was gone through six times last summer and without a single exception proved a successful preventive.

CONGRESS OF PHYSICIANS.

The Fourth Triennial Meeting Is Held at Washington.

About 500 members of the medical profession, among them some of the most distinguished specialists in the country, assembled in Washington Tuesday to attend the fourth triennial congress of American physicians and surgeons, which convened Tuesday afternoon at the Columbia Theater. The congress opened with a business meeting of the Executive Committee, following which the chairman of the committee, Dr. Landon C. Gray, called the general body to order. At night Dr. William H. Welch, of Baltimore, the retiring president, delivered the triennial address, and later a reception was given the delegates by the members of the local society at the Arlington Hotel. The congress is divided into fourteen distinct associations, each of whose presidents is ex-officio vice president of the congress. These associations held daily sessions at their respective headquarters, in addition to the regular meetings of the congress. A large number of interesting and important papers were read and discussed. A statue of the late Prof. Gross, the eminent physician of Philadelphia, was unveiled Wednesday afternoon. The statue is erected in the grounds of the Smithsonian Institution.

EACH THOUGHT THE OTHER DEAD.

Man and Wife Separated in the Johnstown Flood Meet at Roanoke, Va.

A remarkable case of separation and subsequent reunion came to light in Roanoke, Va., Friday. John T. Sharkey, a resident of Buchanan County, Va., decided several years ago that he would go to Johnstown, Pa., to work in one of the factories there. Before going he married a young girl of that county. The couple arrived in Johnstown about one month before the great flood on May 31, 1889, and rented a cottage, where they began housekeeping. In the confusion of the flood they became separated, and each thought the other had perished, until they met face to face in Roanoke. Each of them was caught in the water, but both were fortunately rescued. The recognition was mutual. Explanations followed, and as each during the years of their separation had saved up some money, they decided to return at once to Buchanan County.

Cubans Win Victories.

Havana advices show that the insurgents are active in that province. Tapasta was attacked last week by a force of 400 insurgents and held for an entire day, the Spanish garrison in one blockhouse retiring completely, while the other held its ground and did not fire at the insurgents or disturb them in any way. The Cubans took possession of the vacated blockhouse, looting it of all the arms and provisions they could find, and then set it on fire. The other blockhouse, with a garrison of 300 troops in and around it, kept quiet, no offensive operations being attempted by the Spanish officer in command. The Cubans camped out within half a mile of the Spanish force and plundered the stores of the town without any opposition. La Heiba was attacked by a party from Rodriguez's force the first of the week and the Spanish garrison driven out. There is a small earth fort there and two blockhouses. The Cubans attacked the earthworks early in the morning and carried them by a dashing charge, the Spanish retreating into their blockhouse at the other end of the town. One of these was attacked by the Cubans and three bombs exploded underneath its walls, shattering it badly and killing several of its inmates. The Spaniards surrendered and were paroled by the Cubans. Two insurgent captains, Rafael Mendoza Socarros and Ricardo Varrona Valdez, who voluntarily surrendered a fortnight ago in Pinar del Rio and were liberated under Capt. Gen. Weyler's amnesty decree, have been arrested. They are to be deported in chains to Centa for indefinite confinement.

Dies in an Asylum.

John H. Werts, aged 84, died at Lexington, Ky., Friday in the eastern Kentucky lunatic asylum, of general debility. He formerly was a clothing manufacturer and was once worth over $250,000. He went to Lexington from New York in 1842 and soon became the leading merchant tailor in central Kentucky. Werts never advertised his business, and when more progressive merchants began competing with him after the war his business gradually fell off until it had dwindled to practically nothing. In 1890 the sheriff closed him out. Since then he has been a pauper. The clothiers of Lexington provided for his wants until about a year ago, when he lost his mind and was incarcerated in the asylum. He leaves no family.

Yea, Even the Mormon.

One night last week some religious partisans in Jackson County, Alabama, carried into the woods, stripped and severely whipped two Mormon elders. The elders subsequently appealed to Gov. Johnson for protection, representing that they had been threatened with death if they remained in the State. The Governor has promised to protect them, and has instructed the Sheriff of the county to make them his special charge.

One Hundred Deaths at a French Bazaar.

More than 100 people were killed by fire, and in the panic which ensued, at Paris, Tuesday. Flames broke out in a crowded bazar held for charity in a temporary wooden structure. Included in the list of victims are many members of the French nobility. Some witnesses of the calamity were made insane. Aside from the killed, hundreds were injured.

Reba Worry the Government.

Reports that the revolution in Ecuador is gaining strength have been received at Panama. The force of Government troops, although smaller than that of the insurgents, is fighting desperately, but no intimation as to the probable outcome of the fighting has yet been received at Guayaquil. Reports coming into Guayaquil are to the effect that the Monteneros in all parts of the country are joining the insurgents in large bodies. They have raided many towns and villages in the provinces of Chimborazo and Canar, leaving waste and ruin behind them, and seizing food, stores and ammunition whenever found. In this manner they are slowly making headway. Several priests have joined the revolution and in their church garb are armed and taking part in the fighting. The Government troops have taken several prisoners, among them a few petty officers of the rebels. The New York Herald's correspondent in Punta Arena, Costa Rica, telegraphs that the steamer Newport has arrived there bearing the news that a strong Nicaraguan army, commanded by Gen. Ruting, is marching toward the Costa Rican frontier. The Nicaraguan Government is recruiting men from all over the republic to re-enforce the army. Nicaragua has also sent troops to Honduras to help suppress the revolution there. From all reports from Costa Rica and Nicaragua it seems that the trouble between the two governments is assuming threatening proportions.

DRASTIC PROVISIONS.

Trend of the New Libel Law Passed by the Senate of Illinois.

With but one lone vote to spare the Illinois Senate Wednesday passed the bill repealing the libel law of 1895 and enacting a more stringent statute, similar to the Pennsylvania law. The measure provides a penalty of $1,000 fine or one year's imprisonment, or both, for any person who blackens the character of the dead or the living, and also allows the plaintiff to bring suit in the county where he resides, compelling the defendant to appear there to answer the charge. The latter provision is a departure from the ordinary rules of practice. According to custom, the plaintiff must institute proceedings in the county where the defendant resides. The present law of the State allows publishers the privilege of retraction, to escape exemplary damages.

CHILDREN KILLED WITH A RAZOR.

Two Others So Wounded that They Will Probably Die.

Near Larimore, N. D., August Norman Saturday night cut the throats of four children of Knute Hillstead, a farmer, and escaped. Of the victims, Thomas, aged 13 months, and Oscar, 4 years old, are dead, while Peter and Adolph, aged 15 and 11 years respectively, are not expected to recover. Norman went to the Hillstead home in the evening and asked to be allowed to remain all night. Hillstead was not at home. About 1 o'clock in the morning Norman knocked at the door of Mrs. Hillstead, who failed to respond, and becoming enraged Norman went up-stairs, where the children were sleeping, and attacked them one after another with a razor. Mrs. Hillstead and two small children escaped from the house.

"DELUGED WITH BLOOD."

Turkish Brigade Defeated at Velestino with Frightful Slaughter.

The Athens correspondent of the London Daily Mail says: "Ten thousand Turks attacked the Greek position at Velestino. The firing ceased at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and it is evident that the Greeks have met with a great success. There has been great slaughter at Pharsala, where the battle is proceeding." The Athens correspondent of the London Times says: "Simultaneously with the attack at Velestino the Turks attacked the Greek outposts at Tatar, near Pharsala. It is said that both attacks have been repulsed by the Greeks. Gen. Smolenski says: 'The brigade at Velestino is deluged with blood.'"

Hard Blow Given Arbitration.

The Senate Wednesday by the vote of 43 to 26 refused to ratify the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain negotiated by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote. The rules of the Senate require a majority of two-thirds for the ratification of treaties. Hence four more affirmative votes would have been required to secure a favorable result.

NATIONAL SOLONS.

REVIEW OF THEIR WORK AT WASHINGTON.

Detailed Proceedings of Senate and House—Bills Passed or Introduced in Either Branch—Questions of Moment to the Country at Large.

The Legislative Grind.

During the consideration of the "free homestead" bill in the Senate Monday Mr. Morgan proposed an amendment giving all public lands unoccupied by 1900 to the several States and territories. Mr. Hawley declared this to be a startling proposition, and Mr. Tillman sought to oppose it by a series of questions addressed to Mr. Morgan. Some of the questions referred to the amendment as a proposition to "gobble" and "steal" the interests in public lands. Mr. Morgan in turn made a sharp and sarcastic rejoinder and for a time Senators and spectators were interested in the animated cross fire. After Mr. Morgan had protested against the interruption as a breach of the privileges of the Senate the incident was closed by a statement from Mr. Tillman disclaiming any purpose of being discourteous to the Alabama Senator. The Morgan amendment was withdrawn. Early in the day Mr. Morgan endeavored to secure a vote on the Cuban resolution. It went over, however, at the request of Mr. Hale of Maine, in order that speeches in opposition may be made. The House, by a vote of 124 to 52, approved the postponement of committees until action by the Senate on the tariff. A Senate resolution appropriating $50,000 for the congress of the universal postal union was adopted and Mr. Showalter, the Republican chosen at a special election to represent the twenty-fifth Pennsylvania district, was sworn in.

The tariff bill was unexpectedly reported from committee to the Senate Tuesday and the entire time of that body was taken up in listening to reading of the measure. Changes have been made in nearly every schedule since it was passed by the House. Consideration was postponed fourteen days. The House was not in session.

The Senate Wednesday by the vote of 43 to 26 refused to ratify the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain negotiated by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote. At the conclusion of the proceedings, all of which were in executive session, the Senate refused to authorize the publication of the details. The open session of the Senate was devoted to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was not completed up to the time of adjournment. Mr. Deboe of Kentucky took the oath of office at the opening of the session and was cordially greeted by his Republican associates. The Senate in executive session confirmed the following nominations: Elmer J. Miller, surveyor of customs at Columbus, Ohio; Thomas R. Purnell, United States district judge for the eastern district of North Carolina; William H. Meyer, Indian agent for the Southern Ute agency, Colorado; John B. Wright and John W. Ross, commissioners of the District of Columbia; John McMullen of Maryland, to be an assistant surgeon in the marine hospital service.

The Senate Thursday agreed to an amendment to the sundry civil bill revoking the order of President Cleveland, made Feb. 22 last, establishing forest reservations aggregating 17,000,000 acres. Another amendment agreed to provides for a continuance of the investigation of the condition of the fur seals in Bering Sea. The sundry civil an aggregate of $53,000,000. The House by a strict party vote, all the Republicans favoring and all the Democrats and Populists opposing, adopted a resolution providing that the House should meet only on Mondays and Thursdays of each week until otherwise ordered. It was announced to be the Republican policy to wait on the Senate's action on the tariff bill. Mr. Bailey (Dem.) of Texas made a strong but unsuccessful fight to have the order modified so as to give early and full consideration to the bankruptcy bill. The Republicans replied that they would call up the bankruptcy bill and hold daily sessions on it after Gen. Henderson's return, but, until then the rule should stand. The House then adjourned until Monday.

JOE PATCHEN AT AUCTION.

Famous Pacer Goes to C. W. Marks on a Bid of $15,000.

Joe Patchen, the famous pacer, with a record of 2:03, was sold at auction for $15,000 to C. W. Marks, a shoe manufacturer, Tuesday morning in the Dexter Park horse exchange at the Chicago stock yards. Nearly 5,000 horsemen and spectators packed the amphitheater and cheered the rival bidders in their efforts to win the prize. When David McFeat of Philadelphia, in charge of the Splan-Newgass sale, finally, after twenty minutes of auctioneering, knocked the horse down to Mr. Marks for a sum fully $9,000 greater than that of any sale ever before effected in the stock yards district, the crowd lustily yelled its approval for almost five minutes.

PRESBYTERIAN MEETING.

One Hundredth General Assembly to Convene at Eagle Lake, Ind.

The 109th general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States will meet at Eagle Lake, Ind., May 27. It will be the first time the general assembly has met away from a center of population, and the experiment will be watched by a great many people. Last year the general assembly met at Saratoga; the year before that it met at Detroit. It has gone as far west as Portland, Ore. If the Presbyterians of Indiana and surrounding States, and especially the representatives of the church identified with the Winona Assembly and Summer School, can have their way, Winona, beside the beautiful little lake, will become the permanent home of the assembly.

PRES. STUDEBAKER.

Three years ago the school was incorporated. It is denominational in the construction of its board of directors, two-thirds of whom must be of Presbyterian faith, but other denominations are admitted. It is in charge of Prof. John M. Coulter of the University of Chicago and John M. Studebaker of South Bend was recently elected president.

Four thousand representatives of the church are expected to be in attendance during the ten days the general assembly will be in session. The auditorium in which the meetings will be held is erected on the style of a cyclorama building, and is furnished with opera chairs. It seats 3,000 persons, and 500 more can be crowded into it.

The commissioners of the general assembly are elected by presbyteries and grouped into the convention by synods. There are thirty-one synods represented in the general assembly. These are the synod of Atlanta, the synod of Baltimore, the synod of California, the synod of Catawba, the synod of China, the synod of Colorado, the synod of Illinois, the synod of India, the synod of Indiana, the synod of Indian territory, the synod of Iowa, the synod of Kansas, the synod of Kentucky, the synod of Michigan, the synod of Minnesota, the synod of Montana, the synod of Nebraska, the synod of New Jersey, the synod of New Mexico, the synod of New York, the synod of North Dakota, the synod of Ohio, the synod of Oregon, the synod of Pennsylvania, the synod of South Dakota, the synod of Tennessee, the synod of Texas, the synod of Utah, the synod of Washington and the synod of Wisconsin.

DR. COULTER.

The last general assembly represented 224 presbyteries, 6,942 ministers, 455 licentiates, 176 local evangelists, 1,508 candidates, 7,573 churches, 27,025 elders, 9,174 deacons and 843,716 communicants. The church has had great growth the last year, and it is believed this assembly will show more than one million communicants. There are 43,000 Presbyterians in Indiana, 65,120 in Illinois, 96,461 in Ohio, 30,416 in Michigan and 7,840 in Kentucky, so that the general assembly will meet in the midst of its friends.

ALONG EAGLE LAKE.

Many subjects of importance will come before the general assembly for consideration. It is pretty definitely understood that Gen. Harrison will be elected moderator of the general assembly. It will be the first time in the history of the church that an elder has been chosen to preside. The leading men in the church believe he will consent to serve.

FALL AT THEIR POSTS.

Fifty Firemen Are Overcome in a Fierce Blaze in New York.

In New York, a deadly fire, attended with a loss of $500,000, broke out in the basement of the cold storage warehouse, 161 to 165 Chambers street. One fireman was killed and fifty others were felled unconscious by the deadly fumes of ammonia which assailed them as they entered the building. The firemen's cry of danger was heard on the outside and other companies were ordered in to rescue their comrades. These in turn were also overcome, until Chief Bonner feared he would lose all of his men.

Extra calls were sent out for re-enforcements; surgeons and ambulances were summoned from the hospitals; engine company 27's house, almost directly opposite the blazing building, was turned into an emergency hospital and as fast as the unfortunate men could be located and dragged out into the open air they were carried to house of temporary relief and properly cared for.

A DREAMER.

He is a dreamer, let him pass,
He reads the writing in the grass.
His seeing soul in rapture goes
Beyond the beauty of the rose.
He is a dreamer, and doth know
To sound the furthest depth of woe;
His days are calm, majestic, free;
He is a dreamer, let him be.

He is a dreamer, all the day
Blest visions find him on his way,
Past the far sunset and the light.
Beyond the darkness and the night.
He is a dreamer; God! to be Apostle of Infinity.
And mirror truth's translucent gleam;
He is a dreamer, let him dream.

He is a dreamer, for all time
His mind is married unto rhyme,
Light that ne'er was on land or sea
Hath blushed to him in poetry.
He is a dreamer, and hath caught
Close to his heart a hope, a thought,
A hope of immortality;
He is a dreamer, let him be.

He is a dreamer lo! with thee
His soul does weep in sympathy;
He is a dreamer, and doth long
To glad the world with happy song.
He is a dreamer; in a breath
He dreams of love, and life, and death,
Oh, man! Oh, woman, lad and lass,
He is a dreamer, let him pass.

THE MAN-EATER

Some years ago I was riding with a friend though a street in Lucknow, when, in the middle of the road, we came upon a bloody mass, apparently the remains of a woman, but bruised and lacerated, and crushed almost out of semblance to humanity.

Stopping the buggy, we looked around for some explanation of the tragedy, and then perceived that the streets were utterly deserted of man, woman, child and beast, although a few scared and cautious faces were to be seen peeping from the doors and windows, or over the parapets of the houses.

"There must have been an attempt at a riot, and the soldiers have made an example or two for the benefit of the remainder," said my friend, as we drove hurriedly on.

A few rods further we came upon the corpse of a young man similarly disfigured, and also lying in the middle of the road.

"This is really awful. They must have made the elephants kill him," muttered my friend again, stopping the horse and gazing at the frightful spectacle.

At this moment a man appeared upon the top of an adjoining house, and looked anxiously down the street. To him my friend shouted and he cried:

"Pardon, sahibs, but the boy was my boy, and the house is desolated. By the teeth of Kali, but he has turned this way again. Take care of yourselves, sahibs, he is coming. The man-eater is upon you!"

"The adme-kanawallah! the man-eater! I have seen him. He is a horse with the temper of a tiger and the courage of a man. He belongs to the king, who sometimes sends a slave who displeases him into the stable. They drag the body out with hooks."

As he spoke my friend was hastily turning his horse, while the terrified syce, who had hitherto run beside the buggy, scampered off to the side of the road and disappeared, I know not where.

At the foot of the hill we had just ascended both my friend and I had noticed a sort of park or pleasure ground, surrounded with a high iron fence, its gates standing hospitably open. Towards these gates we now drove at the top speed of our horse, while behind us, on the road, thundered the iron hoofs of our pursuer. Once the sound ceased, and standing up, I looked over the top of the buggy to see if he had left us. But he had only encountered a child, too young to know its danger or to escape it, and when I caught sight of them, the savage beast was shaking the poor little object in its mouth, precisely as a dog does a rat. Another moment and he had dropped it, and was again in pursuit of us. That moment's pause, however, had lost him his prey, for just as he was about to overtake us, we turned into the inclosure, my friend leaped from the buggy, slammed the gates, and shot the heavy bolt securing them.

As he did so the man-eater arrived and hurled himself against the gates with a shock that must have shattered them had they been of wood.

At the sound of his ferocious whinnying and snorting the horse we had been driving trembled and cowered as if at the roar of a lion.

For a few moments the man-eater persisted in his determination to assault us, galloping up and down the front of the inclosure, glancing at the height of the fence, and raining a perfect battery of blows from his iron heels upon the gates. At last, however, convinced of the uselessness of his efforts, he turned with an indignant neigh and galloped off down the road. A little below us an archway had been thrown across from one house to another, and upon this arch a number of troopers stood awaiting the opportunity now presented, for, as the horse, with head and tail erect, and wildly glaring eyes, searching beneath the arch, a rope skillfully thrown settled upon his neck, choked and threw him.

The next day the king ordered the man-eater to be turned into the arena with Burrhea, his finest Bengal tiger.

The arena was a courtyard about 60 yards square, surrounded by buildings, with a veranda below and a gallery above.

The front of this veranda was closed by a heavy bamboo railing, and behind it, in a space just below the royal balcony, the ladies of the harem, or as they are called in Hindoostanee, the purdah-beebes, meaning litreally curtain ladies, as distinguished from the poorer classes of females were allowed to peep as they could at the combat.

The man-eater had been enticed into the inclosure by means of a country horse of small value, to whom he manifested no animosity, but seemed to regard with contemptous indulgence, as a creature not, indeed, of his own kind, but sufficiently near it to secure him from the ferocious attacks he reserved for the inferior race called man.

While the horses sported together Burrhea's cage was brought into the veranda, just opposite the point where the king and his court were now seated; a door in the bamboo railing was thrown open, and the front of the cage raised.

Burrhea, who had been kept without food or drink for the last twenty-four hours, waited for no second bidding, but leaped at one bound from the cage down to the middle of the court yard, lashing his sides with his long tail, and glaring furiously at the horses, while his glossy and beautifully-striped coat shone like satin, contrasting strongly with the frowzy hair of the tattoo, or native horse, and making even the man-eater's well-kept hide look dull and rough in comparison.

Glancing steadily about him for a moment, the tiger commenced stealing slowly toward the horses.

Adme-kanawallah fixed his eyes steadily upon the eyes of his opponent, and not for an instant did he take them off. Standing in an easy attitude, with one foot slightly advanced, his head lowered, his ears flat upon his neck, he awaited the attack, but Burrhea, daunted, perhaps, by that steady gaze, swerved from the direct line of his approach and sidled toward the tattoo, who, paralyzed with fear, seemed incapable of making the least effort for escape or resistance.

Arrived at the proper distance, Burrhea sprang, knocked his victim flat, alighted upon his side, and, with his teeth inserted in the poor creature's neck, greedily drank its blood.

"It will only make Burrhea the more savage," said the king, gleefully rubbing his hands, and the courtiers dutifully assented, exchanging glances of approbation and pleasure before turning to enjoy the further expected sport.

At length Burrhea was satisfied, or else no more blood was to be had, and taking his claws out of the dead animal, and shaking himself as he did so, he began to creep stealthily around the court yard like a cat stealing a march upon a mouse. He made no noise whatever, raising and placing his huge paws as silently as a rose leaf flutters to the ground.

It was not a scene to be forgotten. The king, with his courtiers, both European and Indian, about him in the gaily decorated gallery above, the eyes and figures of the servants dimly seen peeping through the railing of the veranda below, Burrhea making his stealthy rounds, while in the center of the court yard stood the man-eater, slowly turning, as the tiger moved, so as always to keep his eyes fixed upon the glaring eyes of his opponent, his foreleg still advanced and slightly bent, his mane bristling, and his ears now erect and defiant.

The profound silence was interrupted only by the grating sound of the iron-shod hoofs of the horse as he slowly turned in exact concert with the movements of the tiger.

At last, and without the slightest visible preparation, the tiger sprang, cutting the air like a flash of lightning, but the horse was prepared

It had evidently been Burrhea's intention to seize the head and forequarters, but the man-eater was too quick for him, and by a sudden diving motion of his head and shoulders, received his antagonist upon his muscular haunches instead. The claws of the tiger sank deep in the flesh, while his hind feet made a desperate to secure a holding upon the horse's shoulders, but before this could be effected, the man-eater lashed out with his iron heels with a resistless vigor that sent Burrhea sprawling upon the ground with a broken jaw.

The king seeing this, frowned, and gave orders to let the tiger out and turn in another. Another came, but he seemed unwilling to fight. All the efforts of the keepers failed to rouse him. The king was furious.

"Take away this fool of a tiger and bring in a lion!" screamed he, bending over the railing and menacing the tiger with his fist.

The trembling attendants hastened to raise the roors of the railing and cage, and the tiger bounded in with infinitely more alacrity than he had shown in coming out.

There was a brief pause, and then the attendant at the door announced the keeper of the lions, who begged an audience of the king.

"Bring him in!" ordered his majesty.

The lion-master trembling advanced, and prostrating himself, announced that not one of the royol beasts under his charge was in fighting trim, one of them being sick, and the rest just finishing an unusually large repast.

"By the beard of my father, but you shall replace them yourself, wallah!" growled the king, whose ill-humor had reached its height. "Arm yourself with a tulwar and go in and fight the man-eater. Kill him, or he shall kill you."

A profound silence followed this command, which all who heard it understood as a sentence of death against the unfortunate man whose only defense consisted in having been too indulgent to the animals under his charge.

But in Oude to hear was to obey, even more blindly than in the East generally, and the lion keeper, with his face blanched and his eyes rolling wildly, salaamed to the ground and withdrew.

At the same instant a slight noise heard in the woman's gallery below, and as some of us bent over to ascertain the cause, we saw one of the bamboo railings torn from its fastenings and a light figure fill the opening and leap lightly to the ground. It was Numah, a nautch girl, whom the king has just bought from the dishonest nautch wallah, with whom she had agreed to dance for a certain time. Her home, her lover were now lost to her forever, and she sought to save the poor man's life at the cost of her own.

The king saw her as soon as any of us, and an expression of terror crossed his face, but immediately gave way to ferocious satisfaction.

"It is well done, Numah," shouted he, "Go and tell the admee-kanawallah your sorrows and your wrongs. He will console you."

The nautch girl turned and raised her eyes to the royal gallery.

"Death will comfort me, O king," said she, salaaming low, with the supple grace inseparable from her every movement. Then she walked firmly and fearlessly toward the man-eater, who watched intently her approach, and with outstretched neck and tremendous nostrils seemed to question her intentions.

Arrived within arm's length of him, Numah paused and sank upon her knees, crossing her arms and bowing her head as in submission to her fate.

A silence like that of death reigned throughout the place, broken at last by the grating sound of the horse's hoofs, as, cautiously moving them, he approached the girl step by step, and finally stood directly over her, his head grazing her shoulder, eye and ear were evidently alert to satisfy the mind of their master.

"Ma halla! he will not hurt her," exclaimed the king; and indeed the man-eater seemed to have no intention of so doing, for he was now resting his chin upon the girl's shoulder, and whinnying with satisfaction.

Numah, more surprised than any one, raised her head, looked in the eye of the animal, rose cautiously to her feet, and laid her hand upon his mane. The man-eater whinnied again and rubbed his head against her shouled.

An irrepressible burst of applause filled the royal gallery, raised by the European spectators. After an instant's hesitation it was joined by the king.

"Savash, Numah! Bravo, girl!" shouted he, clapping his hands. "You have conquered the conqueror of Burrhea, and shall be rewarded. Nawab, see that Numah receives five thousand rupees and is sent back safe to her home with the horse."

BICYCLING IN THE TYROL.

Even the Mountaineers Have Caught the Fever.

Pete Dailey and his merry men and Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., commissioner of street cleaning in New York City, made a bicycle tour through the Tyrol last summer. Colonel Waring has written for The Century two stories descriptive of his experiences. In the second one, "Bicycling Through the Dolomites," Colonel Waring says:

We found that the bicycle fever had reached even to our landlord who was experimenting with an iron-rimmed wheel over which the saddle was supported by a pair of elliptic springs. L—— tried it, and said it went very well, though not so soft as the "pneu." I lifted it, and did not care to go further. I told him it was too heavy. He said, "Mawknix; muss stärker sein" (That's nothing; you must be stronger). Probably the extra weight of this wheel would not be considered in fixing the load that a Tyrolese peasant would carry over the hills from the fields, and need not be regarded as an obstruction to sport. The wheels here are all much heavier than ours, and much stronger. They can be sent up hill by the tougher thews that grow in this land, and for safety in going down hill they have very effective brakes. The best brake has two pieces of rubber, and about two and a half inches long and three-quarters of an inch square, which are held flat against the two quarters of the tire. It holds very firmly, and its friction does not come on the part that is subject to the greatest wear. It is used, not with a steady pressure, but with successive light squeezes. When one becomes accustomed to it, it gives excellent control to any degree desired—even to holding the machine stockstill under any load and on any grade. Even the usual flat brake has a rubber face which holds better and lasts longer than metal. My American brakes were "not in it" on these hills, as compared with those local wheels which I rode.

The use of the brake is exacted by law in all towns, and it is almost universal on country roads; so is the furnishing of the wheel with a bell, but the better riders in Innsbruck do not use it in the city streets. They say they can make their way safely at a moderate speed, if the people keep on their way, while if they are disturbed and made nervous by a bicycle bell, they are liable to make some unexpected movement that may lead to a collision. I remember a case of mutual dodging at a street crossing in New York, between myself and a lady whom my bell had startled, which came near being annoying. Perhaps the custom in Paris of hanging a little sleigh bell loosely from the handle bar is safer. It jingles all the time, somewhat to the annoyance of the rider; but it has a faint horse car suggestion which keeps the public on the lookout. Nowhere in Europe did I see the brutal quadrupedal "scorching" that is such a nuisance and such a danger with us.

Another device I found to be in very general use in Tyrol. This is a snap-clip for holding the front wheel in line with the machine, so that it may be stood against a tree or any other support without falling. It is useful in pushing up hill with the hand on the saddle. The direction is changed by lifting the hind wheel to right or left. The clip is set or released in a moment.

As we left our lunching place we found the young towheads of the farm standing in mute and respectful wonderment about our wheels. We gave them a bit of a ride, two at a time, and left them enriched with the memory of a sensation they had never before known, and will never repeat—and never will forget.

The Microbes of Rinderpest.

Professor E. Symes-Thompson cently delivered at Gresham College a course of four lectures on "Bacteria and Disease." Referring to the investigations now being made into the cause of the rinderpest in South Africa, he expressed his belief that the microbe discovered by Dr. Eddington at Grahamstown might be regarded as the microbe of rinderpest. Professor Koch appeared to have ascertained that the organisms could be transferred from animal to animal, for instance: The disease produced was much milder than in the case of others. It would probably be found that the inoculation of the less virulent form of rinderpest would render cattle immune to the more virulent form, exactly as vaccination rendered us immune to small pox.—London Invention.

In the Sun.

Scarlet seems the color most conspicuous in bright sunshine, and scarlet flowers are commonest in dry and sunny climates, where their color gives them an advantage in their struggle with other flowers for the attentions of butterflies and other pollen bearers.

SPAIN AND UNCLE SAM

NAVY STRENGTH OF TWO NATIONS COMPARED.

Our Chances on the Sea in Case of War with the Spaniards—The United States Navy Has Some Splendid Ships.

Comparison of Strength.

There has been considerable speculation rife of late as to what might happen at sea if the United States and Spain went to war. Possibly there are those who have an idea that the Spanish naval force is insignificant. Facts show quite a contrary view of the matter. Spain has at the present time 11 armored ships, with 322 guns; 63 unarmored ships, with 306 guns; 2 armored gunboats, with 12 guns; 40 unarmored gunboats, with 267 guns; 2 dispatch vessels, with 8 guns; 10 training and store ships, with 10 guns, and 79 torpedo boats. The total number of guns on board the vessels in the Spanish navy is 960, ten of which weigh from 40 to 80 tons, 110 from 20 to 40 tons, 286 from 4 to 20 tons, and 554 under 4 tons. Of the torpedo boats, 60 are over 100 feet in length, and are provided with torpedo catchers and every other valuable device known to modern naval equipment.

The most formidable ship in the Spanish navy is the Pelayo, of 10,000 tons burden, which was constructed by French shipbuilders about ten years ago. She represents the most formidable advancement along the line of naval warfare accomplished during the period that has elapsed since the American civil war. Her ram is of the most powerful variety, and her battery consists of two 12 5-10 inch rapid fire guns, which practically constitute her broadside. Then there is a secondary battery of a dozen smaller guns and six torpedo tubes. The Pelayo is more powerful than any vessel in the United States navy, so far as armament is concerned. She is provided with a steel waterline belt eighteen inches thick at the maximum, and has a speed of about sixteen knots an hour. Another superior craft is the armored cruiser, Emperator Carlus V., with a tonnage of 9,100. She carries two eleven-inch guns in barbettes ten inches thick, eight 5½-inch rapid fire guns, and four four-inch rapid firers, together with a powerful secondary battery of rapid fire six and three-pounder guns.

DARK—SPANISH FLEET. WHITE—UNITED STATES FLEET.

THE WARSHIPS OF SPAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

Her protective deck is six inches thick and her sides are partially plated with two-inch steel. She is the newest of the Spanish fleet of any considerable size. There is in the Spanish navy also one of the finest types of the modern armored cruiser. It is the Infanta Maria Theresa. She represents a fleet of eight cruisers of her own sort which fly the Spanish flag. Her armament consists of two 9 45-00 guns in barbettes and ten 5-10-inch rapid firers. For protection she has a belt at the water line twelve inches thick along the central body of the ship. Twelve inches is the thickness of the barbette armor.

As opposed to the Pelayo, our navy has wonderful battleships in the Iowa, the Indiana and the Massachusetts. These two latter warships have each an armament of four 13-inch and four 6-inch guns, and are of 11,000 tons displacement, as compared with the Pelayo's 10,000. The Oregon, another monster, has a very thick plate of side armor, which constitutes its superiority. The cruiser New York is a prototype of the Carlos, while its companion warship, the Brooklyn, is a little more than equal to either. This vessel carries eight 8-inch and twelve 5-inch guns, and is infinitely more modern than even the famous New York. In a sea fight, it is the opinion of experts, counting in the Maine and the Texas, with their twelve 6-inch guns, their foot-thick turrets, and over 13,000 tons displacement, we should be able to put up a hard naval fight under all circumstances.

There is one point of advantage we have over Spain, and that it is our rams and monitors. While every modern warship is possessed of a ram, we have in the Katahdin a vessel built for nothing else but sinking her prow into an unlucky foe. The Katahdin is not a very big vessel as warships go, for her tonnage is only 2,200, but she could knock the spots off the best warship that was ever constructed, armored or unarmored, if only given half a chance. Then there are our five double-turreted monitors, of which the most powerful is the Puritan, of 6,000 tons. About half her size, are the Terror, the Amphitrite, the Monadnock and the Miantonomah. Their armor is 11 inches thick and their guns are 10-inch pieces. Of course the monitor is pre-eminently a coast defender. In smooth water and for harbor work this craft is unsurpassed.

As opposed to Spain in general naval equipment, we have 33 armored ships, with 681 guns; 33 unarmored ships, with 551 guns; 28 unarmored gunboats, with 262 guns, 1 dispatch vessel, with 10 guns; 36 training and store ships with 112 guns, and 27 torpedo boats. As against the 960 guns on board of vessels in the Spanish navy, the United States has 1,640 guns, of which 64 are from 40 to 80 tons, 188 from 20 to 40 tons, 317 from 4 to 20 tons, and 1,080 under four tons.

If worst comes to worst and our warships were inadequate in point of numbers, we could call on our big liners for aid. Of course it would not take much time to make unarmored cruisers out of them, and so far as speed is concerned, there is nothing in the Spanish navy or our own, either, for that matter, which could touch them. Spain has one big liner upon which it could draw—the Compania Trans-Atlantic, whose thirty-two steamers have a gross tonnage of more than 100,000.

To defeat Spain in a sea contest would, it will be seen from the facts given, be a task that differs widely from child's play. If Uncle Sam and Don Spaniard really come to blows it will be a duel each of the combatants in which will have a foeman worthy of his steel.

A TEXAS UNIVERSITY.

It Will Be a $2,000,000 Affair Under the Auspices of Presbyterianism

The semi-centennial of the admission of Texas into the Union occurred on Feb. 13, and a movement has been on foot among the Presbyterians of the country to erect a memorial of the occasion. It was decided to found the Texas Presbyterian University, and on Feb. 19 the institution was incorporated under the laws of the State with a subscribed endowment of $10,000 and 100 charter members, among them being some of the most prominent men of Texas. When $100,000 is subscribed a site will be selected and the money will be applied to the endowment fund which has been fixed at $2,000,000.

Both sexes are to be admitted on equal terms. The trustees are forbidden by the charter to contract any debt, and the majority of them, instead of being clergymen, must be business men. They are elected by the charter members from among themselves, and must be communicants of the Presbyterian church, but the university will be subject to no church court. The Bible is to have first place in the curriculum, the study to be continued throughout the course, concluding at graduation with the last chapter of Revelation. The standards of the Presbyterian church will also be taught, the catechism, confession of faith, form of government and history. The classical, scientific, literary, fine art and musical departments shall be second to none. There will be physical and athletic departments and a labor course for students who cannot pay for tuition. Rev. W. H. Clagett is president of the Board of Trustees. He is a noted preacher whose lectures on "Spiritualism Unmasked" have made him well known throughout the country.

A GRANT MEDAL.

It Commemorates the Completion of the New York Monument.

The American Numismatic and Archeological Society has issued a medal to commemorate the completion of the Grand monument. The medal is in bronze, is two and one-half inches in diameter and bears on the obverse, the bust of Gen. Grant and the seal of the society. The portrait committee of the society, after careful deliberation and research, selected for the medal design, the portrait which appeared in the Century Magazine for December, 1884, accompanying that publication's series of war articles. It is also the one which Gen. Grant accepted as a correct representation of himself as he was when in his prime about the time of the battle of Shiloh. On the reverse of the medal appears a true picture of the completed monument.

In issuing the Grant medal, the society follows its custom in commemorating noteworthy events, among the medals it has heretofore used being the Lincoln medal in 1866, the Washington medal in 1883, the Columbus medal in 1893, and the Muhlemberg medal in 1896. Gen. Horace Porter, who was a member of Gen. Grant's staff during the war and intimately associated with him in after years, has pronounced the portrait on the medal an excellent likeness of the great commander, and the Grand monument committee, represented by Mayor Strong, Gen. Porter and Elihu Root, have given their approval of the medal and have adopted it as the official medal of the occasion.

BIRTHPLACE OF SPIRIT RAPPING.

Country Home in New York State Where the Fox Sisters Won Fame.

Prominent believers in spiritualism recently held a convention at Rochester, N. Y., in honor of the forty-ninth anniversary of the birth of modern spiritualism. Many people believe that

WHERE SPIRITS FIRST RAPPED.

Rochester is the birthplace of spirit rappings, but this is an error. The real birthplace was Hydeville, Wayne County, a few miles from Newark. The "spirit rapping" phenomenon began in March, 1848, in the family of John D. Fox at that place. After a while the raps occurred only in the presence of the two sisters, Margaret and Kate. The family having removed to Rochester, the raps accompanied them, and new phenomena, including clairvoyance and the movement of ponderable bodies without appreciable agency were developed.

In November, 1849, the Fox girls appeared in a public hall, and the phenomena were freely manifested and subjected to many tests. In May, 1850, the Fox girls arrived in New York, the alleged spiritual manifestations became the subject of extensive newspaper and conversational discussion. Their faces were published far and wide. "Mediums," through whom they were said to occur, sprang up in different parts of the country, and were multiplied by hundreds and almost by thousands.

Blackboard Spelling.

The revival of the old-fashioned spelling school has been tried in some localities, but only to prove that it does not, as a rule, reach the poor spellers; they stay away from it—they are not wanted in a spelling match, says the North American Review. The spelling school was for the glorification of the good spellers. It did something, no doubt, for depraved brain cells before such mysteries were ever heard of in connection with spelling books—before physical inertia could be charged to weak valvular heart action, and temper to microbes, and all the rest. The spelling school belongs to a past dispensation, says my friend, but it suggests what might do much for orthography, if the blackboard were made a conspicuous feature, and the attention concentrated upon the reading and writing of sentences, of which the following might be an example: "Mr. Wright, the wheelwright, does not write rite rightly," with helpful stories, occasionally, like that of the teacher who wrote upon the board the three words, "Boys, Bees, Bear," asking the children to construct and write a sentence in which these words would be used intelligently, one boy giving at once: "Boys bees bear when they goes in swimming."

Soapsuds on the Waves.

Some experiments have recently been made which show that soapsuds will reduce a sea almost as well as oil. This was first tried on the Scandia, an English steamer, in a storm on the Atlantic. Having no great quantity of oil, the master dissolved a large quantity of soap in water, which was discharged over the bow. The effect was nearly instantaneous, the height of waves being so diminished that the vessel could be managed without difficulty.

Captain Le Gall, of the French steamer Senegal, sailing the Adriatic, was struck by a squall and used soap and water with the same result. He used three kilogrammes of soap dissolved in seventy liters of water. The solution when dripped over the bow made a quiet space about ten meters wide, preventing the waves from breaking over the vessel.

The Home of Dyspepsia.

San Francisco seems to be the natural home of dyspepsia. Physicians there say that ten out of twelve of the inhabitants suffer from indigestion. The only explanation suggested is the fact that the climate allows fruit and vegetables to be had almost the year around, so that there is not the enforced change of diet that residents of other regions have.

CHANGES IN TARIFF.

DINGLEY MEASURE HAS BEEN REMODELED.

The Senate Committee Brings In a Report Showing Many Modifications in the House Bill—Will Not Be Retroactive.

Measure as Amended.

The tariff bill, as reported by the Senate Committee on Finance Tuesday, is a very different measure from that which passed the House, and the members of the committee intend to make still further amendments as soon as they have time to prepare them. Among these will be a broad reciprocity clause as a substitute for that which appears in the House bill. The duty on tea and the additional tax on beer are intended to be temporary, and for the purpose of raising revenue.

Senator Aldrich presented the bill to the Senate. The time for the bill to take effect is made July 1, 1897, instead of May 1, as provided in the House. The sugar schedule is wholly rewritten in the interest of the trust. The word bituminous is stricken out and all coal made dutiable at 75 cents per ton, with a proviso added that the duty on coal and shale shall be 60 cents per ton, and on coal slack, or culms, 15 cents per ton, when imported from any country, colony or dependency that does not impose upon coal or coal slack or culms higher rates of duty than those named in this proviso.

The Senate has increased the internal revenue duty on beer by changing section 3339 of the revised statutes to read as follows:

Until Jan. 1, 1900, there shall be paid on all beer, lager beer, ale, porter, and other similar fermented liquors, brewed or manufactured and sold or removed for consumption or sale within the United States, by whatever name such liquors may be called, a tax of $1.44 for every barrel containing not more than 31 gallons; and after Jan. 1, 1900, there shall be paid a tax of $1 per barrel on every barrel of such beer, lager beer, ale, porter, and other similar fermented liquors.

The present rate is $1.

The retroactive clause of the Dingley tariff bill is stricken from the Senate bill. The entire House provision relating to reciprocity has been stricken out and the following section substituted:

That whenever any country, dependency or colony shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation of any article or merchandise from such country, dependency, or colony, and such article or merchandise is dutiable under the provisions of this act, then, upon the importation of any such article or merchandise into the United States, whether the same shall be imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether such article or merchandise is imported in the same condition as when exported from the country of production, or has been changed in condition by manufacture or otherwise, there shall be levied and paid in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed.

The net amount of all such bounties or grants shall be from time to time ascertained, determined, and declared by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make all needful regulations for the identification of such articles and merchandise, and for the assessment and collection of such additional duties.

The House provision in the tariff bill keeping in force the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty is stricken out, the effect being indirectly to abrogate the treaty and impose the same duty on Hawaiian sugars as is imposed on sugars from other countries.

The provision in the House bill on distilled wines is stricken out and the following substituted:

Still wines, including ginger wine or ginger cordial and vermuth, in casks or packages, other than bottles or jugs, if containing 14 per cent. or less, of absolute alcohol, 30 cents per gallon; if containing more than 14 per cent. of absolute alcohol, 50 cents per gallon. In bottles or jugs, per case of one dozen bottles, or jugs, containing each not more than one quart, and more than one pint, or 24 bottles or jugs containing each not more than one pint, $1 per case; and any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles or jugs shall be subject to a duty of 5 cents per pint or fractional part thereof, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles or jugs; provided, that any wines, ginger cordial, or vermuth imported containing more than 24 per cent. of alcohol shall be classed as spirits, and pay duty accordingly. And provided further, that there shall be no constructive or other allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage on wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits. Wines, cordials, brandy and other spirituous liquors, including bitters of all kinds, and bay rum, or bay water, imported in bottles or jugs, shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles or jugs in each package, or duty shall be paid as if such package contained at least one dozen bottles or jugs; and all such bottles or jugs shall, unless otherwise specially provided for in this act, pay an additional duty of 3 cents for each bottle or jug. The percentage of alcohol in wines and fruit juices shall be determined in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury shall by regulation prescribe.

Lumber and Wool Changes.

The lumber schedule is changed by adding after the word timber the words "Hewn, sided, or squared and round timber," and the duty fixed at the rate of 1 cent per cubic foot as in the House bill.

The rate of $2 per ton on all sawed boards, etc., is retained, but when planed on one side, the additional rate is made 37 instead of 50 cents per 1,000 feet board measure; when planed, tongued, and grooved the additional rate is made 70 cents per 1,000 feet board measure instead of $1; if planed on two sides and tongued and grooved $1.05 per 1,000 instead of $1.50.

The House proviso for an additional duty of 25 per cent ad valorem upon lumber imported from any foreign country which imposes an export duty is changed so as to add the amount of the export duty instead of any fixed sum.

Placed on the free list are poplar and other pulp woods, heading bolts, stave bolts and railroad ties.

Many and important changes were made in the wool and woolen schedule. First-class wools were reduced from 11 cents per pound, as provided in the House bill, to 8 cents per pound, and second-class wools from 12 to 9 cents, whereas the duties on wools of the third class were raised.

The dividing line in this latter class was placed at 10 cents value, wools under that value being made dutiable at the rate of 4 cents per pound instead of 32 per cent ad valorem, as in the House bill.

Wools valued at more than 10 cents per pound were placed at 7 cents per pound instead of 50 per cent ad valorem.

The wool growers failed to secure all the changes they desired in classification, but it is understood that the rates fixed on the wools themselves are satisfactory to them.

C. A. O. MOCLELLAN, PRESIDENT
CHAS. MOCLELLAN, CASHIER.

THEY ARE WISER NOW.

It is laughable to see the democratic papers that supported McKinley last fall, weeping and wailing because the only thing we are likely to get out of this administration is a higher rate of tariff taxes. The Chicago Chronicle is one of these and now hear how badly it feels over McKinley's misconduct:

But here is an example of the pathetic kind that puts a very different face upon the miserable game of tariff humbug and deception:

Representatives of organized labor go to Washington with a memorial addressed to the president, cabinet and congress. In this document the memorialists say: "Multitudes of our working people—American citizens—at this hour are suffering humiliating poverty and countless privations and look to you for speedy relief. Last fall they were promised hopeful legislation and and they expect it from you without unnecessary delay."

Do McKINLEY and REED and the rest say this is unreasonable? Do they say it is unreasonable to expect them to supply abundance where now is destitution by a mere act of congress?

Let them recall the fact that last summer and fall they themselves were going about the country howling calamity with the lung power of so many locomotives. Let them recall the fact that they themselves were then picturing the condition of working people in darker colors than the chosen representatives of those people now use. Let them recall the fact that they were laying all the blame for the distressing situation upon the democratic party. Let them remember that they promised the immediate return of prosperity if their party should be restored to power.

Having recalled to mind how they sought to instill into the minds of the workingmen a superstitious belief in the sovereign power of an act of congress to turn adversity into prosperity, want into plenty, let them pause and read again the cry of the toiler.

"With industry half paralized, trade stagnant, values depressed and shrunken, with enterprise stifled and the productive power of labor palsied, with our commerce listless on the seas and our immense resources blighted, we bid you haste the return of better times. * * * * * *

We urge on you the necessity of legislative relief. The destitution among the honest, proud and industrious people of our land, though half hidden, is ever increasing and becoming more and more appalling. The hopes they had are fast turning to gloomy despair * * * We assure you the millions are now in no dispositiow to be trifled with. They are fast becoming desperate and deep are their mutterings of discontent. They desire to realize some of the prosperity so freely promised on the stump six months ago."

Perhaps the politicians who were so free with their promises on the stump are not touched by the pathos of all this. Perhaps they are incapable of perceiving that it is despicable to instill into credulous minds the belief that congress can give work to the idle and abundance to those who work by a legislative trick of taxation. But some of the expressions used in this memorial of organized labor may suggest to them that such trifling is dangerous and that considnrations of personal safety, if nothing higher, forbid the raising of false hopes and the popularizing of gross delusions.

FIRE AT GARRETT

Last evening about nine o'clock, fire was discovered in Clevenger's barn, and it had so great a start that nothing could be done to stop it or even to save anything. The building was a total loss, but the worst feature was the loss of the Doctor's valuable pacing horse, Rigmore. It was a sorry sight to see the blackened remains of the poor beast in the hot ruins of the fire. No cause for the fire is given and many believe it was set on fire.

The horse was a very valuable one, being considered worth about $5,000. It was insured for $700, and there was $350 insurance on the building The building was a new one costing $700 and contained a new carriage etc. When the fire was first discovered, it was past all help, and the whole town already light with the blaze. The fire department, however came up promptly, and worked as never before. But they could do but little except to keep the flames from spreading.

a course of Ayer's Pills the system is set in good working order and a man begins to feel that life is worth living. He who has become the prey of constipation, does not realize the friction under which he labors, until the burden is lifted from him. Then his mountains sink into molehills, his moroseness gives place to jollity, he is a happy man again. If life does not seem worth living to you, you may take a very different view of it after taking

JOHN AND EDITH

Will Russel Together Down Life's Rugged Pathway.

This morning early there were upon our streets a neatly dressed young couple, and from the attire of the lady, everyone suspected that they were to be married soon. They came last night to the Glazier and the man registered as John Russel. They were assigned to a room and remained there for the night. This morning after breakfast was over, they went to the court house. The lady remained at the west entrance while her affiancied procured the license. The COURIER reporter entered the clerk's office at about the same time and heard Clerk Long propound the necessary questions to him. He said his intended had been a resident of the county for about three years and gave her name as Edith Airhart. We then interviewed Mr. Russel and he wanted us to keep it quiet for three weeks. But he soon changed his mind and thought it would be a nice thing to see his name in print. He was not as easily interviewed as newly married people usually are and all we learned was that they expected to make their future home at Decker, Ind., a town in the south part of the state. He then joined the lady who was waiting at the door and we then tried to pursuade him to go to the Methodist parsonage and have the Rev. Guild officiate, but they thought a justice would do it up alright and we directed them to the office of Squire Walborn, who performed the ceremony and not until then, though they both occupied the same room during the night, were they man and wife. It was no doubt, a long, weary night for the young man to sleep sitting in a chair with his feet upon another, while his wife-to-be snored calmly in bed. Such is life.

MORE PRISONERS.

Sheriff Stroh has still another addition to his family at the jail. Wednesday three were brought over from Garrett. A man named Bailey and a woman named Greenwalt who have been figuring over there as man and wife, were found not to be. So they were arrested. The other is a man named Hemingway, who is accused of taking money.

Scott's Emulsion

is made up of the most essential elements that go to nourish the body. Where the appetite is varying or lacking, it increases it, and where digestion is weak, it aids it to perform its function in a more vigorous way. It enriches the blood, makes healthy flesh and cures chronic coughs and colds by making it possible for the body to resist disease. Our friends tell us "IT WORKS WONDERS" but we never like to over-state the merits of our remedy even when it has been tested and tried for over twenty-five years. If you will ask for it, we will send you a book telling you more about the subject than we can put in a few words.

Go to your druggist for Scott's Emulsion. Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

We Must Pay Higher

Nearly every merchant now, will tell his customers that goods will soon be higher, on account of the higher rates in the proposed new tariff bill. This will likely be the effect of a raise in the tariff rates. It goes to prove what we have always claimed, that the consumers pay the duty and not the foreigner. And was it only to make prices of the things we use higher, that people last year elected McKinley? It would seem, so, as there has been no other step taken, or talked of

The new tariff bill had 1212 amendments made to its various sections by the senate, after it had left the House. Now the House will have to act on all of these. And when all is done, and it becomes a law, the chances are it will be by no means as fair or desirable a law as the present one. But it will make a few men rich, and many pay more for what they use.

Tea is put on the taxable list by the new law. Tea was put on the free list 1833, if brought over in U. S. ships, but in 1861 the war tariff, known as the Morrill tariff put a duty of 15 cents a pound on it. Later, this was raised to 25 cents, but in 1872, it was again put on the free list, and has been free ever since.

A duty on tea is purely a revenue duty. There is no "protection" in it, as we raise no tea in this country. What has became of those campaign speeches of "protection for protection's sake?"

The reason there has been no duty on tea and and coffee, for so many years, is because these are considered articles of prime necessity to the common people.

DAVID H. DOVE.

UNDULY EXCITED.

The editor of the Dispatch is unnecessarily excited, in fact is "in a state of mind" over the mere little fact that we published an article written by an old soldier, about the matter in controversy over at Butler. This we had a right do. Quite a number of other papers published it, including the Butler Herald, the Garrett Herald and the Fort Wayne Journal. Perhaps other papers were guilty of the same offense. And and all did this without thinking it would incur the wrath of the man who every week does exactly the same thing, except he gives no credit. But not a word was said against the course of any other paper but the COURIER. This gives it the appearance of personal spite. But we feel under no obligations to make any apology. As to the truth of the matter set forth in the article, it is well known, and no one has yet tried to point out a falsehood in it. Even the immaculate Dispatch has not pointed out a word that is false. Nor has it, nor can it, point to an item that is "libelous and scandalous" unless the truth told about things is such.

We can assure our badly rattled contemporary that "Old Soldier" is genuine. The writer of that special served between three and four years in the rebellion, is a member in good standing, in the G. A. R. He is a republican, and was never in a hospital, and what is very unusual, does not get a pension. He was in some of the hottest battles of the war, and two of the greatest charges, he was the first man over the breast works. From this it would appear that the childish attack, on him by the Dispatch was very silly and not a little venomous. "A soldier should bear with a soldier's faults." But our own opinion is, that "Old Soldier" did no wrong. If any class of our citizens has earned a right to his opinions and judgment, and to express them in decent terms, it is the veteran who offered his life for his country in the honor of her danger.

As to the more personal attack on the editor of this paper, it is not worthy of notice. Whatever may be the opinion a man of such a sort holds of us, it is not of the least interest in this office. We leave our own case with the public that has known both of us for so many years. So, he can go on and "renovate" to his heart's content. The chances, are, however, that if Mr. Gordon is not in his second or third childhood and has no softening of the brain, that he will, on reflection, be thoroughly ashamed of what he has said in this matter.

Out of Jail.

Saturday's Daily.

Mrs. Forrest who was put into jail two or three days ago, as an insane person, got tired of restraint yesterday and walked out without saying good by or leaving her address. In fact her address is still a mystery. It was this way: When the sheriff's people took dinner up to her room, they gave it to her, and went out, apparently forgetting a rather usual prosecution in jails, that of locking the door. Everything was quiet enough till some one went up to the room to get the dishes on which her dinner had been served, when they found the room empty. She had evidently put on her things and walked out. Of course, there was be gun a brisk hunt at once, and the sheriff and his deputies have been scouring the country ever since, but have found no trace,

Mrs. Sarah Forrest is the wife of W. R. Forrest, and their home is between Waterloo and Ashley, where they have lived many years. Mr. Forrest is blind or partially so.

Brought Her Back.

Monday's Daily.

Mrs. Forrest, the insane woman, who escaped from the jail Friday noon, was brought back Sunday. It appears that when she left town she jumped into some one's wagon, and so escaped easily. It is not known where she staid that night, but Saturday night, she reached Aaron Moore's, near Moores Station, and asked to remain over night. They allowed her to do this but along in the night they heard her get up and dress. She came down stairs and put on Mr. Moore's rubber coat and wanted to go on her journey. It was raining hard, and they with some difficulty persuaded her to stay. The next day, word was sent the sheriff and she was brought back to town.

A. B. RICHARDS DEAD.

A. B. Richards, who was reported very sick yesterday died last evening shortly after nine o'clock. His illness was very brief. The evening before, he had been at church to attend prayer meeting, and then seemed in as good health as usual. But after retiring he was taken sick when Dr. Sparling was called, and remained with him a great part of the time through the night and next day. But he continued to grow worse, and at about eight last evening all hope was given up. He soon after began to fail rapidly and at 9:05 he breathed his last.

The funeral will be at the M. E. church Tuesday, May 11, at 1 p. m. and interment in the cemetery at Waterloo.

The funeral was arranged for Tuesday, to give time for distant relatives to reach here, as to-morrow, being Sunday, travel is delayed.

He was a member of Auburn Camp, No. 73, of the Grand Fraternity of Philadelphia, and was insured on the annuity plan for $400 a year. So Mrs. Richards will receive an annual income of $400 during life and widowhood, and during the minority of the children.

I can cheerfully recommend your colic cure to be the best. Mrs. F. H. Rock," Sold by Fischler & Son, 25c.

WANTED AN INDEX.

Attorneys are brimful of the funny experiences of the early days of the bar in this part of Indiana. Though not exactly in point, we reproduce one of them.

Judge McClellan relates that some twenty years ago, when he lived at Waterloo, he and Gen. Blair had to go up to "Mudsock" in Steuben county to take depositions in a case they were both interested in. The work was not completed that day, and they had to remain over night. Now, there was no hotel in the place in those days, and so they secured lodgings in private family. Everything was home-like and cosy, and they passed a comfortable night. In the morning, while waiting for breakfast, they were asked to join in family worship. And this particular family, made a special point in scripture reading in connection with the morning prayer. They had several bibles, and each of the guests received one. The chapter to be read was announced by the head of the family, and each member including the guests, was to read a verse by turns. At once there was a struggle to find that chapter. The members of the family soon had it located and were ready to read. Not so, the guests. They were "out of practice" a little. After a brief delay, Judge McClellan had stumbled onto the place, but Gen. Blair was still turning over the leaves in hot haste. He was getting excited and a little nervous, when one of the family, a young lady, volunteered to help him. The right chapter was soon found, and worship proceeded without a hitch, to the close. A substantial breakfast followed, and the two attorneys went away to resume their work. At last it was done, and they got into their buggy and started home. Neither seemed inclined to talk much, and for five or six miles they drove on in silence. Suddenly Gen. Blair, who had seemed to be in deep thought, blurted out, "Why in h——l don't they have indexes to their bibles?" And both gave it up.

THE NEW TARIFF.

Funny things, these tariff laws. When they want to get your vote or go a little deeper into your pocket, they smilingly tell you that "the foreigner pays all the tariff tax." But now comes about all of New England, where they make so many boots and shoes, and is making a fierce fight against the proposed duty on hides. They say it will add five to ten cents on the cost of the leather in a pair of shoes. How do they reconcile that with their assertion that the foreign dealer pays the duty? Who should care whether hides remain on the free list where they were put in 1872 or be taxed as they were before that, if the foreigner pays it?

It looks as if the Dingley Bill would, after all, take about as much time as other generaly tariff bills. The Walker bill of 1846 was debated 15 days; the Mills bill, 41 days; the bill of 1883 was discussed more or less for two years, and at last they had a commission of the men to be benefited most, to help them understand the thing; the McKinley bill took 44 days; the Wilson bill 93 days. The Dingley bill passed the House in a few days, but has been in the senate now about a month.

CLEMENS WOLF.

WIDNEY-WEIGHT.

When the north bound Lake Shore train came in last night, J. Morris Widney stepped out of the car accompanied by a handsome young lady. He completely succeeded in surprising his many Auburn friends by introducing her as Mrs. J. M. Widney. The ceremony which joined them in the bonds of holy matrimony was performed at 7:00 o'clock Wednesday morning and the fortunate lady was Miss Florence Weight, of Frederickstown, O. Mr. and Mrs. Widney will be at home at the beautiful farm just west of the city. The COURIER joins with their many friends in congratulations.

CHILD LOST.

This forenoon a white haired little girl, a mere baby, was noticed wandering along up North VanBuren-st. It was crying as if its little heart would break. Charles Bartels was working on the lawn in front of Albert Robbins' residence and took charge of the little wanderer, and did all he could to soothe it. It was too small to talk and could not even tell its name, and there was no way to do but to give it care till someone should come and claim it. So he took the little waif home where Mrs. Bartels did all she could for the child, and under her kind care, the little one partly recovered from its fright. After half an hour or more, a lady came hurrying up there and joyfully claimed her child and took it home. It was Mrs. John Cool, who live across west of the Kiblinger factory. The child had started up town with Geo. Chapman's little boy and girl, and the mother supposed it would come back with them. But it seems, it kept on up north instead turning east on Seventh, as the two others did. When Mrs. Cool noticed its absence, she hurried all over her locality but got no clue till Leila Baker told of a little stray one having been seen near her home. Of course the Cool household is happy.

If Clocks Could Talk.

If clocks could talk what a lot of queer stories would be given to the world! What a tale the mantel clock in the parlor could tell—of courting and quarreling and kissing and making up. What a lot of dinners the dining room clock has seen eaten, with never a mouthful for itself. And the dainty French clock in my lady's boundoir—how many secrets it must know. To be sure well behaved clocks hold their hands before their faces, but they must see everything just the same.

OUR BIG INDUSTRY.

The Greenler Hoop Factory As Seen by the Courier.

The DAILY took a birdseye view yesterday, of the great Greenler factory at the south end of town. We had seen the outside before, with its yards and sheds full of finished work, its stacks on stacks of hoop coils, and its grounds covered with logs. But no one has a full idea of the character and magnitude of this industry till he sees it fully at work in all its departments. We were fortunate enough to find one of the officers, B. C. Robbins "at home," and keeping him on the "near side" of the dangerous machinery we went through in "regular order." By regular order, we mean that we followed a big log from the mill yard as it went through the factory and reduced from an unsightly and not very valuable object, to a finished product, a staple article on the market.

A big chain elevator first draws the log up a chute and it stops at a big cut-off saw that cuts it into the proper length for hoops. The logs are cut any length to work up this way with the least waste. After a length is cut off, it is rolled to the carriage way and onto the carriage where it is sawed into boards 1½ inches thick, if suitable for hoops. If it is not suitable, as is sometimes found, it is cut into quarters or similar shapes and then put aside for stave bolts. These are sent along and delivered to men who sort them, cut into proper lengths, the ones to be used for staves being sent down one chute, while slabs and such old pieces go down another. Hoop boards are sorted and if one needs worthless pieces taken off, it is taken one side, where a machine edges it down properly. All boards for hoops are sent down to the steam boxes, of which there ten. The men on this lower floor open a box to get out this steamed lumber, and there is an outrush of vapors, and heat that seems a little risky on first experience. The boards are so hot that the men draw them out with an iron hook. This board is delivered to the man who feeds the cutter. T[illegible] a big machine, working [illegible] fashioned one used to c[illegible] fore people learned he[illegible]n, only it is much [illegible] boards are soft wit[illegible] easily cut, and the long[illegible] so made drop from the knife a[illegible]rate of 175 a minute, and fall into the care of a man who sorts them rapidly, passing the good ones back to other men, tossing to the right such ones as are imperfect, but from which shorter hoops may be cut, and worthless prices go to the other side for waste. This man must be skilled, both as to the rapidity with which the eye scans the rapidly falling pieces, and the judgment to be instantly exercised as to what purpose each is best fitted for. But he does it without a thought of hesitation and apparently makes no mistakes. The lath-like little boards are then sent to the machines that plane them and bevel their edges. They go next through the machines called the "pointers and lappers." These equalize them as to length, point one end to a true angle by cutting off the edges on each side, and make the "lap," at the other end by sloping off the flat side like a thin wedge. These finished strips are then put into vats of water kept boiling with steam, and after boiling a half hour are taken by the man who coils them. He jabs them, one after the other, rapidly, into a rotating machine that will take about ten into a coil, when a nail driven through the last end of the last one, fastens the coil, which is released, and then falls, rolling along a chute into the next room. Here they are exam'ned, and if a defective hoop is seen in the coil it is extracted and a perfect one forced into its place. The coils are then piled up on the yard to dry, and when dry are ready to ship. From the time the boards are taken from the steam boxes, till the coils are piled on the yard, they are hot, and must be handled largely by the aid of mittens.

The timber separated from the hoop timber, will as before noted, be used for staves. Large quantities of this sort are being piled up, and soon they will have a stave cutter, steam, boxes, etc, for working these up. This will add to the establishment, and at least fifteen more men will be needed, bringing their total force up to about seventy men. They will also, then, buy logs smaller than those used for hoops, as they will make good staves, and utilize so much more of otherwise valueless timber. The Company has has bought vast amounts of logs, all over the county, and many car loads from other points.

The company have nearly closed an arrangement to furnish fifteen million of their hoops to the great sugar trust for use in making sugar barrels. In fact the Greenler Co. deals largely in large orders to jobbers.

They now have nearly a million of hoops in the yard, some dry enough to ship, and so on to the wet ones recently piled up. It will not do to ship them till dry, as they are liable to mold and rot.

During winter most of the logs were brought in by farmers, but as farm work started up, this stopped and the company had to secure teams to haul for them. They got all the teams they could here, and have several from other points, at Garrett and Ashley, making twenty-one in all, now helping to haul for them. In many cases they have their own men, also to do the cutting, as farmers are too busy.

The average cut each day is about fifty thousand, though they could, by rushing, cut a good deal more.

And finally, this promises to be one of the most desirable factories Auburn and DeKalb county ever had. It not only employes a large force of men, but it buys its material of the people in this part of the country, leaving a good deal of the money wish farmers, for timber not heretofore of much value, and giving employment to many men a part of whom are not necessarily skilled mechanics.

A WATCH STORY.

Kendallville Sun.

Two years ago this spring, Robert Ross, who lives near Collamer was ploughing in a field when he lost his watch. It seems that he dropped it into the furrow and covered it up. The watch had long since been forgotten. The other day he sent his hired man out into the same field to plough. After having ploughed for some time, he uncovered watch which seemed to be in a fair condition. He took it to the house and gave it to his employer, who immediately recognized it as his own.

Mr. Ross wound up the watch and it commenced running. It keep as good time as it ever did and does not seem to be any worse for having been exposed to the storms, heat and cold of two winters and two summers.

WIDNEY-WEIGHT.

When the north bound Lake Shore train came in last night, J. Morris Widney stepped out of the car accompanied by a handsome young lady. He completely succeeded in surprising his many Auburn friends by introducing her as Mrs. J. M. Widney. The ceremony which joined them in the bonds of holy matrimony was performed at 7:00 o'clock Wednesday morning and the fortunate lady was Miss Florence Weight, of Frederickstown, O. Mr. and Mrs. Widney will be at home at the beautiful farm just west of the city. The COURIER joins with their many friends in congratulations.

CHILD LOST.

This forenoon a white haired little girl, a mere baby, was noticed wandering along up North VanBuren-st. It was crying as if its little heart would break. Charles Bartels was working on the lawn in front of Albert Robbins' residence and took charge of the little wanderer, and did all he could to soothe it. It was too small to talk and could not even tell its name, and there was no way to do but to give it care till someone should come and claim it. So he took the little waif home where Mrs. Bartels did all she could for the child, and under her kind care, the little one partly recovered from its fright. After half an hour or more, a lady came hurrying up there and joyfully claimed her child and took it home. It was Mrs. John Cool, who live across west of the Kiblinger factory. The child had started up town with Geo. Chapman's little boy and girl, and the mother supposed it would come back with them. But it seems, it kept on up north instead turning east on Seventh, as the two others did. When Mrs. Cool noticed its absence, she hurried all over her locality but got no clue till Leila Baker told of a little stray one having been seen near her home. Of course the Cool household is happy.

HUNTED GOLD.

And Found Death and a Watery Grave.

Buenos Ayres special: United States Minister Buchanan has begun an investigation to find out if possible what has become of the American sailing vessel Joseph L. Leubat, which, it is feared, has been lost somewhere between this port and Terre Del Fuego. The vessel, which was commanded by Capt. T. H. Connors, and had on board Moses Y. Ransom, a wealthy American, and several prominent young men from Cleveland, Ohio, left this port in January on a search for gold. The Leubat is a small vessel, and the fact that nothing has been heard from her has given rise to the fear that she has been lost. Minister Buchanan has undertaken the investigation at the request of the American relatives and friends of those aboard the Leubat, who are anxious to ascertain as much as possible regarding the movements of the vessel since she was last seen. Mr. Ransom is a man of considerable wealth and is a close personal friend of Senator Mark Hanna of Ohio.

TURKISH FORCES

Execute Movements Which Foreshadow an Attack on Greek Positions.

Athens special: Advices received from the headquarters of the Greek army at Domokos, announce that the Turkish forces are executing movements which are believed to foreshadow an attack upon Greek positions. It is reported that the Turkish left wing has evacuated Almyros and is now moving towards Pharsalos, and it is further stated that Gen. Smolenski commanding the Greek right wing has re-occupied Almyros and has restored telegraphic communications with Greek headquarters. Unless the rearward movement of the Turks is the result of the action of the powers, it indicates that the Turkish Commander-in-chief is again concentrating his troops to make a general attack on the main Greek stronghold.

Woman Murderer Hanged.

Frederich W. Hoellman was hanged at Paxton, Ill., for the murder of Mrs. Weibke Gedde. He is known to have killed at least three other women. Hoellman held a dress rehearsal a few days ago and was photographed on the gallows on which he was hanged. He hoped to sell enough of the pictures to pay for sending his body to Grand Haven, Mich., and have it buried beside the remains of his wife. After being photographed Hoellman rehearsed the speech which he had prepared for the gallows.

Seven Men Killed.

The tipple at the Pinkney, Tenn., ore mines, about twenty-five miles from Florence, Ala., fell, killing seven men and badly wounding several others. Communication with Pinkney is cut off and full particulars cannot be had. Physicians have left Florence for the scene of the disaster.

A New Senator.

After a long struggle, lasting for months, the Florida Legislature has succeeded in electing a United States Senator, in the person of Stephen R. Mallory. He was a member of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses from the first Florida district.

Sawmill Disaster.

A sawmill boiler exploded on Reelfoot River, several miles from Tiptonville, Ky., killing Ed Patterson and Dink Hodges, white, and two colored men.

Work for Young Voorhees.

James Paxton Voorhees has been commissioned by Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, widow of the late Senator, to make a model for the statue of her late husband.

Escapes the Gallows.

Frank Stada hanged himself at the Maxwell street station house, Chicago. He was charged with killing Anton Chalaupka.

Scuttled the Ship.

San Francisco special: The steamer Australia, from Honolulu, brought word that an attempt had been made to scuttle the ship Indiana, from Hilo to New York, laden with sugar. An auger hole had been bored through the bottom and three of the crew, who were suspected, have deserted. The cargo was damaged, but the ship was saved.

Work of an Incendiary.

The Thunderburg Mills at New Carlisle, Ohio, were fired by an incendiary and destroyed. Loss, $50,000.

EASTERN.

Gov. Black of New York has signed the so-called anti-trust bill. The bill applies to foreign as well as domestic corporations, requiring annual reports as to the amount of their capital stock and the proportion actually issued. Gov. Black also gave a hearing on the anti-scalper bill. It is understood he will sign the measure.

Officials have had a nice question of internal revenue law put to them on account of the burning of the ship Francis off the coast of New Jersey. On the ship were 300,000 gallons of California wine and 29,000 gallons of California brandy. On the brandy there is a tax of $1.10 a gallon. The brandy was being transferred from a bonded warehouse in San Francisco to one in the East, and Lachman & Co. and others, who owned the brandy, gave bonds that they would deliver it to a bonded warehouse in the East. Having failed to do so, they are technically liable for $32,000. It is a question for the commissioner to determine, and, as it is not known whether any of the brandy was saved from the fire, Lachman & Co. will be compelled to file a complaint.

The will of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton was filed for probate at New York and proves a great surprise. It has been generally supposed that when Theodore Tilton and his wife separated the latter was provided with an income that would comfortably keep her for the rest of her days. It was not known that in addition to this income she received a bulk sum which, combined with what subsequently came to her from her own family and what she saved made up a modest fortune. This was invested in Brooklyn and New York real estate, which has increased materially in value. The bulk of her estate will go to her daughter and a goodly share to the religious sect presided over by the Rev. Malachi Taylor. From the day of her trouble, when her name became a household word all over the civilized world, Mrs. Tilton had not looked at a newspaper.

WESTERN.

An election was held at Cairo, Ill., at which it was decided to issue $30,000 in bonds for a new high school building.

In a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Illinois the indeterminate sentence law is declared to be constitutional.

At Uniontown, Pa., Laughead & Madesette's large planing mill plant was destroyed by fire. Loss, $55,000; insurance, $25,000.

The Humphrey bills were slaughtered in the Illinois House Wednesday. By the tremendous vote of 121 yeas to 29 nays the enacting clause to Senate bill 258, which extends street car franchises fifty years, was stricken out, killing the measure beyond all hope of resurrection. It was a victory that even the most sanguine leaders of the opposition had not dared expect. The corporation forces were utterly routed.

A meeting of Western "Baker claimants," who, as descendants of Peter Baker, claim title to millions of dollars' worth of property in Philadelphia, was held in Kansas City, Mo., Monday evening. Ten "claimants" were represented. Capt. J. E. Morris, of Emporia, Kan., presided, and Prof. E. H. Logan, of Toledo, Iowa, acted as secretary. A committee was appointed to visit Philadelphia and investigate the record in the case.

Wild rates on iron ore have been established at Cleveland at 60, 50 and 40 cents, but it would not be at all surprising to see any of these low figures reduced, as owners of boats that are moving seem ready to accept almost any price in their efforts to secure down-bound cargoes. The 70-cent contract reported, refers only to one boat, and as far as can be learned this is all that has been done as yet in contracts from the head of the lakes, aside from the boats of the ore companies.

Four posses are searching for the three prisoners who escaped from the Prescott, A. T., jail Monday, shooting two officers in their flight. Lee Morris, the young assistant district attorney, shot by the prisoners, died. His death has greatly inflamed public feeling against the prisoners, who will probably be lynched if caught. This feeling is intensified on account of the passage by the Legislature of a law which virtually acquits all murderers where the crime is committed prior to the passage of the law. From forty to fifty murders have been committed in that county during the last six or seven years without extreme punishment.

Patrolman Oscar Christenson of South Bend, Ind., was murdered in cold blood Tuesday night by tramps, and the central police station Wednesday held over one hundred hoboes in an effort to determine the tramp or tramps who committed the murder. The South Bend police department was notified of the breaking open of a Lake Shore and Michigan Southern freight car near Elkhart, and the local police were instructed to watch for the robbers. As the west-bound freight crossed Michigan street Christenson was there, and Asa Miller of Elkhart and a tramp called "Boots" jumped off. The officer chased "Boots" eastward on to the commons, and had gone about a hundred feet when he was shot and killed instantly. The shots apparently came from the moving freight train. Miller was caught, but "Boots" escaped.

Early Wednesday morning at San Francisco, fire broke out in the tannery of A. B. Patrick & Co., and two hours later there was little left but ruins. The loss to plant and stock is estimated from $400,000 to $425,000, with insurance of $265,000. The buildings destroyed numbered ten, four of which were two-and-a-half story frame structures and one a five-story building. The others were one-story sheds. Almost simultaneously five tenement houses on Telegraph Hill were burned. The families occupying them barely escaped with their lives, so rapidly did the flames spread in the ramshackle wooden houses. Loss about $75,000. Another blaze destroyed four cottages on Wisconsin street in South San Francisco. Loss $5,000. An explosion of gas in the grocery store of D. Bordorl, 1020 Bryant street, wrecked the building and injured a number of people, including the proprietor, and did damage to the extent of over $4,000.

WASHINGTON.

John Sherman celebrated Monday the seventy-fourth anniversary of his birth, and that evening the magnificent residence of the Secretary of State on K street was the scene of festivity and rejoicing in honor of the event. The reception was attended generally by the official and unofficial members of Washington society. Secretary and Mrs. Sherman are counted among the most delightful entertainers in the official set.

The State Department received a dispatch from United States Consul Little at Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras, stating that the revolution has come to an end. He furnishes no details of the events surrounding the collapse. The last heard officially at the department from Honduras was that the revolutionists were in force at Puerto Cortez and that the Government had been obliged to declare that port closed and was moving with troops upon the place.

A map of the United States, with a broad red stripe running across it from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will soon ornament the walls of the office of the Secretary of Agriculture in Washington. This map, and particularly this stripe, will interest two great classes of citizens of the United States, the farmers and capitalists. Said Secretary Wilson: "We have supplied in the last few weeks 20,000 farmers of the country with sugar beet seed for experiments during the coming season. They are scattered through practically every State north of the extreme southern line of States. The people as far south as the Carolinas, Tennessee and Texas believe that they can grow sugar beets successfully. And we are quite willing to give them full opportunity to make that test everywhere. If they succeed in extending the beet sugar territory down to the very line of the cane sugar area, there ought to be no difficulty in producing in the United States all of the $100,000,000 worth of sugar for which we are now going abroad every year."

FOREIGN.

The Peruvian Government will cease the coinage of silver and will not permit the importation of any silver coin. Director Preston of the United States mint was officially advised to this effect.

It is announced that Baroness Hirsch is the anonymous donor of the $187,500 received by the committee of the Paris charity bazaar, the scene of the terrible fire. This sum, together with the proceeds of the first day's sale, $9,000, exactly equals the receipts of the bazaar in 1896, thus enabling the committee to distribute its funds to charitable purposes as before. The baroness, it is added, made this gift in order to commemorate the anniversary of the death of her husband, which occurred April 21, 1896.

A radical London weekly paper of great circulation announces in its labor column the receipt from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, of "a strong condemnation of the Roman Catholic labor organization known as the Knights of Labor." The paper goes on to say: "He calls it a 'moribund concern,' guilty of many acts of perfidy toward labor, and says it has 'combined with unfair employers to resist the efforts of workingmen's unions which were fighting for union wages and union conditions.' Mr. Gompers characterizes the organization and its action as 'desperate, contemptible and unscrupulous.'"

The Athens correspondent of the Associated Press learns, on the very best authority, that Greece has made a written application to the powers through their representatives at Athens with a view of obtaining mediation. All the representatives have promised in their replies to use their best offices, except the German minister, who has merely acknowledged the receipt of the note from the cabinet. The porte is inclined to support the powers, with a view to the facilitation of negotiations, but it declines to consent to an armistice, on the ground that this would enable Greece to reorganize her forces. It is said Turkey will not attempt to secure Grecian territory, but will insist on a heavy indemnity.

Advices from Madrid say: It is officially stated that the Government can see no grounds to listen to the arguments of the Madrid press or the opposition politicians and has determined to allow Gen. Weyler to remain at the head of the forces in the field of Cuba, and at the same time to continue to act as governor general to carry out the reforms gradually, as he may deem the circumstances and conditions of the colony permit. Gen. Weyler will also be allowed to determine after complete pacification of the island the conditions on which political exiles will be permitted to return to the colony or how their treatment shall be modified in the Spanish fortresses and penal settlements on the coast of Africa, where about 2,000 Separatists, or Autonomists, are at present detained by virtue of decisions of the colonial authorities without trial of any kind, but simply as suspects. In official circles it is stated that there is no idea of proclaiming amnesty yet.

IN GENERAL.

Vancouver, B. C., dispatch: Owing to the great pressure brought upon the Government by opponents of the act to prevent American citizens from securing mine licenses in British Columbia the bill has been vetoed. Before it had passed its last stage it was found that it would be the death knell of mining in this country.

The Bell Telephone Company won the case brought against it by the United States to annul the last Berliner patent. This decision has the effect of continuing the control of the telephone by the Bell company for seventeen years from the date of the last patent, which was granted in 1891. The Government asked to have the patent of 1895 set aside on the ground that the delay of thirteen years in the patent office was fraudulent and through the fault of the telephone company, and that the patent issued in 1880 covered the same ground on which the new patent was applied for in 1891. The United States Supreme Court, in its opinion delivered by Justice Brewer, held that there was no evidence of corruption or undue influence. Justice Harlan dissented from the opinion. Justices Gray and Brown, it was announced, took no part in the case, presumably because they were interested.

The annual spring visitation of tramps has apparently come upon the country. Reports from different parts of the United States show that, instead of being peaceable and lazy, they have become desperate and lawless. In many sections they have formed organizations, selected leaders and united in an effort to secure a good living at the general expense of the community that has the ill luck to be chosen as an abiding place by the tramps. Indiana, particularly the northeast portion of the State, is partially terrorized. Barns are burned, farmhouses looted and isolated settlements placed at their mercy. Fights between citizens and tramps are of frequent occurrence, but the vagrants, though often baffled, beaten and jailed, refuse to move. Freight cars are broken into and valuable contents taken and sold to whoever will buy, the proceeds going for liquor or into a general fund. In New York and New Jersey fights between railroad men and tramps desiring to steal a ride or plunder a car are not infrequent.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

A Week's Proceedings in the Halls of Congress—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—An Impartial Resume of the Business.

The National Solons.

On Monday Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota, at the head of the Senate conferees on the Indian appropriation bill, announced his intention to present the report of the conferees about 3 o'clock; but Mr. Morgan's Cuban debate held the floor until after 3 and then the Senate went into executive session and adjourned. The amendment to the Indian appropriation bill as proposed by Mr. Allen (Pop.) from Nebraska and adopted by the Senate was as follows: "That the Secretary of the Interior shall, within sixty days after the passage of this act, establish and thereafter maintain at the city of Omaha, in the State of Nebraska, a warehouse for Indian supplies, from which distribution shall be made to such Indian tribes of the West and Northwest as the Secretary of the Interior may direct." The House nonconcurred in this proposition and appointed Sherman of New York, Curtis of Kansas, and Allen of Mississippi conferees. They, after conferring with Mr. Pettigrew and his Senate associates, agreed upon an amendment to the amendment which extended from sixty days to one year the time within which the Secretary of the Interior was to transfer the Indian distributing warehouse from Chicago to Omaha, and adding a proviso that the city of Omaha should furnish a suitable building for the purpose, free of cost, to the United States.

The Morgan resolution favoring recognition of Cuba was up in the Senate Tuesday. Senators Morrill and Caffery spoke in opposition. Senators Lodge and Foraker advocated deferring the question until further information could be secured from the State Department, and Senators Mills and Allen urged the immediate passage of the resolutions. The debate went over. During the day Senator Kyle, rising to a question of privilege, disclaimed having sought committee places from Republican Senators. A partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to. The consideration of the Senate amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill was finished by the House and the bill sent to a conference. President Cleveland's forest reservation order was the subject of much debate, and the House voted not to concur in the Senate amendment to annul the order with the understanding that the conferees should arrange an amendment which would have the same effect.

In the Senate Wednesday the sugar investigation of 1894 was recalled by the introduction of a resolution by Mr. Allen of Nebraska reciting the circumstances of the investigation, the refusal of Elverton R. Chapman to testify, his conviction in the courts as a contumacious witness and the present efforts toward his pardon. The resolution proposes that Chapman be brought to the bar of the Senate to purge himself of contumacy as a prerequisite to pardon. Mr. Allen sought to secure immediate action on the resolution, but it went over on objections from Mr. Gallinger of New Hampshire and Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts. Mr. Morgan of Alabama made a statement relative to his resolution on Cuba. He said the Committee on Foreign Relations had considered the question of referring the resolution to the committee and had not reached an agreement. The committee desired, however, that the resolution go over, with a view to having a statement of facts laid before the Senate; the resolution went over. A resolution by Mr. Butler of North Carolina requesting the President for information relative to the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad was presented and went over. The Senate bills for a public building at Deadwood, S. D., to cost $200,000 and one at Indianapolis, Ind., to cost $1,500,000 were passed. The immigration and the kinetoscope bills were reached, but went over on objection. The House did nothing.

The Indian appropriation bill was disposed of by the House Thursday, with the exception of the provision for opening the Utah gilsonite lands. The conference report, which establishes an Indian warehouse at Omaha, ratifies the lease of the Seneca oil lands and adds one judge to the Indian territory courts, was adopted by a vote of 54 to 47. After a long period of calm the Senate was agitated, first by a discussion of the Senate sugar investigation and then by a preliminary skirmish on the tariff bill. But nothing definite was accomplished. A lot of postoffice nominations were confirmed.

Don't Put Coin in Your Mouth.

It is possible to catch a whole string of diseases through holding money in the mouth. A scientist says that a man who carelessly puts a penny in his mouth subjects himself to greater danger than if he were exposed to the bitterest weather without clothing. Scientists who have been testing coins find that, as a rule, the germs that find lodgment on their faces are powerless to harm human beings unless they are able to penetrate the skin and get into the blood; but in cases of consumption and one or two other of the more deadly maladies, the organisms may be given a foothold by being inhaled into the lungs. In cold weather there are frequent cracks and small abrasions on people's lips, and there, of all places, the germs find the best opportunity to reach the blood. Shopkeepers who are in the habit of handling coppers should be careful to wear gloves if their hands are cut or scratched.

The Diamond.

The diamond has been described as consisting of an enormous number of separate molecules, swinging to and fro among themselves at a rate of some millions of vibrations a second, all in action together, and quivering with the shocks of impact. Without a microscope which would magnify a million times, we cannot see this action; we can only believe it. The cause of the diamond's extreme hardness and impenetrability is said to be that when a steel point is pressed against it the active molecules batter that point with such vehemence and rapidity that it cannot get beneath the crystalline surface. When cutting glass the molecules of the diamond drive the molecules of the glass before them, or mow them down as men are mowed down by a Maxim gun.

A Rabbit-Loving Cat.

In Oglethorpe County Mr. Ben Dillard caught a rabbit and took it to his house. A cat, stealing an opportunity, carried it to her bed of kittens and adopted it as one of her family. She nurses and cares for bunny as lovingly as if it was one of her own offspring and the happy family are living together in apparent peace.—Atlanta Constitution.

DEFEAT OF HUMPHREY BILLS.

Culmination of a Bitter Battle in the Illinois Legislature.

The defeat of the "Humphrey bills" in the Illinois Legislature was the culmination of the bitterest and most sensational legislative fight in the history of the State. For months every paper in Chicago, and almost all the leading papers of the State have been waging war on these measures, which aimed to vest the power of granting street railway franchises in Chicago to a State commission and to extend the franchises of the present companies fifty years. It was openly charged that the street railway companies of Chicago had raised a corruption fund of nearly $1,000,000 and were offering fabulous bribes to legislators. Mass meetings have been held in Chicago almost every night for the past month, denouncing the bills, at which Mayor Harrison, Alderman Harlan and prominent men in all parties have taken a leading part.

Great excitement on the stock exchange greeted the announcement of the defeat of the measures. The initial quotation for West Chicago was 102, and it sold as low as 94, showing a decline of 8 points from the opening to the lowest quotation. The close was only ½ point above the lowest quotation of the day.

The West Chicago street railway has a capital stock of $13,189,000. When the Humphrey bills passed the Senate the stock sold as high as 107. When the bills were defeated in the House it sold 13 points under this quotation.

The Chicago City Railway has a capital stock of $12,000,000, divided into 120,000 shares. From the last preceding quotations there was a decline of more than 10 points in City Railway in the bid prices to-day.

Putting together only the three principal companies gives the following as the loss in values:

North Chicago	$1,320,000
West Chicago	1,318,900
City Railway	1,200,000
Total	$3,838,900

Y. P. S. C. E. CONVENTION.

Program for the Annual Gathering at San Francisco.

The local committee having in charge the preliminaries for the sixteenth international Christian Endeavor convention, which will be held in San Francisco July 7 to 12, is leaving no stone unturned to insure its success. Applications for hotel accommodations are pouring in daily, and arrangements will soon be perfected. The program for the convention promises to be one of the best ever provided. Its chief features are as follows:

The convention will open Wednesday night, July 7, with meetings in eight of the largest churches in the city and one meeting each in Oakland and Alameda. Thursday morning simultaneous welcome meetings will be held in Mechanic's and Woodward's pavilions. In the afternoon twenty or more churches will be used for denominational rallies. Friday morning practical addresses and open parliaments upon the fundamental principles of Christian Endeavor will be provided. The afternoon will be given up to a "school of methods" in the various churches. "Christian Endeavor Fellowship" will be the general subject for Friday evening. Saturday morning the State secretaries are to be heard from in a symposium on the topic "How May We Make the Committee Work in Local Societies More Effective?" There will be an open-air demonstration on Vanness avenue, after which the delegates are to be given an outing by the local committee. Sunday there will be three meetings of great importance, one for men only, another for women only and one for ministers and church officers. Monday will be devoted to the evangelistic and missionary influences of Christian Endeavor. The junior rally, one of the most important features of the program, will be held in the afternoon, and the closing sessions of the convention will be held in the evening.

TO KILL GRASSHOPPERS.

Professor Bruner Will Go to Argentine for the Purpose.

Prof. Lawrence Bruner of the University of Nebraska is soon to go to the Argentine Republic in South America for the purpose of putting an end to the scourge of grasshoppers in that forward country.

PROF. BRUNER.

For the past nine years Argentine has been eaten up by the insects and the Argentine farmers appealed to the Government. A commission of leading business men in Buenos Ayres was appointed to look into the matter. It was decided that the first necessary step was to learn as much as possible about the insects' mode of life and thus discover the best means of wiping them out.

It was agreed that to do this a grasshopper expert was a sine qua non and the American minister, Mr. Buchanan, was consulted. He referred the matter to Washington and the committee on agriculture unanimously decided that Prof. Bruner was the man.

Prof. Bruner is an old student of the saltatory insect that ravages the territory west of the Mississippi and he will go to the fields of Argentine ably equipped to fight it. A year will be spent in looking over the ground, and then the battle will begin. Ample funds will be at the disposal of the commission under which Prof. Bruner will work, and if money and scientific skill are of any avail the grasshopper will be banished from the pampas of Argentine.

MAINTAINED A NUISANCE.

National Head of Salvation Army Indicted in New York.

Frederick De La Tour Booth-Tucker has been indicted by the New York grand jury. It is charged that he is maintaining a public nuisance in the Salvation Army barracks.

Booth-Tucker is the head of the Salvation Army in the United States. Some time ago complaint was made to the Board of Health that the peace and quiet of the neighborhood contiguous to the Salvation Army barracks were disturbed by the singing, shouting and music carried on by the members of the Salvation Army and their auditors. The indictment was found under sections 322 and 385 of the penal code, and the penalty for the offense is one year's imprisonment, a fine of $500, or both.

THE PILGRIMS.

"Whither, pilgrims, whither bound Passing slowly with no sound?"
One by one they journey by,
Gliding, gliding silently;
Slowly, slowly, dim and gray,
Hold they on their ghostly way.

"Hither, children, making May
Of the solemn autumn day,
Who were they but now went by
While the dead weeds gave a sigh?
Who the pilgrims, dim and gray,
Stopped and looked upon your play?"

"We have wandered many hours
Here where some one hides the flowers;
We heard laughter in the grass,
But we saw no pilgrim pass."
Whispers one,—pale-cheeked is she,— "Shapes went by; they beckoned me."
—John Vance Cheney in Century.

MISS LATIMER'S ASSASSIN.

There was a man hanged under mob law in Southern Ohio several years ago. It was the first incident of the kind that had ever occurred in that part of the State, and the people thereabouts were naturally greatly excited over it. The man's crime had been a heinous one. He had shot down in cold blood, and without the slightest provocation, two women and wounded a third. The rest of the women and children were wrought up to a high degree of frenzy, and even after the desperado was hanged the sight of a strange man was enough to send them into spasms of terror.

Perhaps the person who suffered most acutely at the time was Miss Ellen Latimer. Miss Ellen was well-to-do. In her younger days she had spent two seasons in "society," in the nearest city, and in the top drawer of her bureau was a satin-lined rosewood box filled with costly jewels and other mementoes of that happy period. Then there was her silver; her knives and forks were the best in the country and her spoons couldn't be matched anywhere. In addition to that she always kept a little ready money on hand. All things considered, a villain who had plunder for his object could not find a more profitable victim than Miss Latimer.

Besides, Miss Ellen's mode of living was a regular standing invitation to ill-disposed persons to come and do their worst. Her sole companion was Harvey Hempstead, a half-witted boy of 12, whom Miss Latimer, in the goodness of her heart, had taken from the poorhouse when he was a little fellow and brought up as a sort of social experiment. Miss Ellen and Harvey lived in the red brick house that had sheltered the last three generations of the Latimers. It was a very lonesome place, being situated on the edge of a large field at the end of a lane that extended fully a quarter of a mile back from the main highway. Miss Latimer had often been urged to take some one into the great house for her protection, but even after the shock attendant upon the shooting and subsequent hanging she stolidly refused to do so on the ground that she couldn't afford to be bothered.

"I dont deny that I'm afraid," said Miss Ellen one day to her married brother, who had earnestly implored her to do something to insure herself against danger from possible robbers, "but I really think that Harvey and I are better off as we are. You can't trust anybody nowadays. I wouldn't dare to have even a hired girl around, and if I undertook to allow one of the farm hands to sleep on the place I'm sure we would be murdered before morning. There's Pat Henning, for instance. He's been doing chores around the house and barn for more than two years, yet I'm as afraid as death of him. The only really easy moment I have is when I see him lock the stable door at night and strike out across the field toward his own home. Harvey is 12 years old and strong, and nobody would touch a hair of our heads without our giving him a lively tussle. No, thank you, brother, I dont want anybody here but Harvey."

As the months passed and nothing further transpired to break the monotony of existence in that neighborhood Miss Latimer's fears gradually subsided, and she remarked that "she guessed it would be a cold day when another woman killer set his foot on that soil." But that hopeful view of the case was not shared by Harvey. Harvey Hempstead was a boy who said little, but who, when his weak mind was once set on any particlar subject, never ceased thinking of it. He had never expressed himself very freely on the question of the hanging, but for all that not a day passed that he did not expect to receive some caller on evil bent before the night came, and he made preparations accordingly. That was the first thing he thought of when one Wednesday morning in May, Miss Latimer announced her intention of going to the neighborhood village to spend the day.

"S'posin' he comes to-day—to-day—to-day, while I'm alone—alone—alone," lamented Harvey, in his drawing, disjointed way.

"Who?" demanded Miss Ellen, sharply.

"Somebody like him that was hanged—hanged—hanged," faltered Harvey.

"Nonsense," returned Miss Latimer. "That's a thing of the past. You mustn't think of such stuff. If you get lonesome you can get one of Pat Henning's boys to come over and stay with you."

Patty Henning had brought the horse and buggy around to the door and Miss Latimer climbed into the vehicle and drove away, leaving Harvey looking after her through a swirl of apple blossoms. The brown horse jogged leisurely down the lane and out into the highway. The air was redolent with the perfume of billows of apple blossoms in the orchards that lined the road and the scent of newly upturned earth. Miss Latimer had passed up and down that same thoroughfare a good many times in the last twenty years, and often under similar conditions, but somehow the flowers had never seemed so fragrant, the air so balmy, nor the sky so blue. She could remember but one other morning when all the elements of nature had conspired to produce so fair a scene and that was many years before when she had ridden over the same road—but not alone.

It all came back to her that bright May day with startling vividness. She could see him as plainly as if he were then at her side. She met him the first season she was in "society." She was young and pretty then, and he made no effort to conceal his admiration for her. Throughout those happy months she spent in the city he was her devoted admirer and when she came home in response to a call from her sick mother, he soon followed. He stayed a week, and it was arranged that he should come again in autumn for their marriage. She drove him over the smooth yellow road to the railroad station one radiant morning in May.

That was the last time she saw him. She never even heard from him directly, but three months later the news came through a natural friend that he had married a girl in a Canadian town whither he had gone on business

Many times throughout the ensuing months Miss Ellen assured herself that her love for the man was dead, but as she drove slowly toward the village that spring day twenty years after their last meeting the flood of recollection that surged over her heart brought home the truth that affection such as she had given cannot die and that in her loveliness and loneliness she had lost the very essence of life.

In the meantime Harvey, being installed housekeeper at Latimer place for the day, set about his duties. He busied himself in the kitchen and cellar for an hour or more, then went into the woodyard and began to bring order out of the chaos of stovewood, which Pat Henning had split the day before. That done he went around to the porch, and, sitting down in the shade, rocked his long, lanky body slowly to and fro until the shifting shadows warned him of the approach of noontime. Then he started into the house to prepare luncheon. Just as he stepped over the threshold he heard the clicking of the latch of the front gate, and, turning quickly round, he saw a man coming down the path. The man was a stranger, with a black beard, black clothes and a black straw hat.

"Good morning," he said politely.

Harvey's tongue was benumbed and he could not answer.

'Is Miss Latimer in?" asked the stranger.

Harvey's voice was returning by degrees and he said, "No," very faintly.

"Will she be here soon?"

"No, not till night—night—night," quavered Harvey.

To the boy's dismay the man sat down on the edge of the porch and began to fan himself with his slouch hat.

"That's too bad," he said in a tone of genuine regret, "but I'll wait till she comes if I have to stay a week. I must see her. My boy, I'm hungry. Do you think you could get me something to eat?"

Like a flash Harvey's ordinarily dull mind conceived the situation over which he had secretly pondered for many months and with equal agility the few rays of his concentrated intelligence planned a way out of the difficulty.

"I guess I can," said Harvey, forgetting in his enthusiasm to repeat the final word of his sentence

In less than an hour after the black-whiskered man had eaten his luncheon he had fallen asleep on the sofa in the sitting room. As soon as his deep, regular brething announced that he had fallen into a stupor from which he could not be easily aroused Harvey quickly pushed the narrow couch into the long dark closet that ran far back under the stairway; then locking the closet door, he took up his station beside it and impatiently awaited the arrival of Miss Latimer. It was 5 o'clock when that lady came home. Harvey heard the wheels when she turned into the gate and went out to meet her.

"Miss Ellen," he said in an awed whisper, "he ca-ame."

"What are you talking about?" queried Miss Eileen.

"That man came to steal your silver. He wanted you, too—too—too. He said he'd have you if he had to stay a week—week—week," and his voice arose in a shrill treble indicative of the excitement under which he was laboring.

Miss Latimer let the reins slip from her nerveless fingers and regarded the boy through a film, which sudden fear had quickly brought before her eyes.

"My goodness, Harvey," said. "And not an officer in the neighborhood. Which way did he go? He'll come back to-night and kill us, sure."

Harvey shook his hand. "He didn't go," he said with unusally rapidity. "He's in the clo-o-oset. I put him to sleep with a dose of laudanum—"

Miss Latimer did not wait to hear the termination of the series of "laudanums" but drove around to the barn and unhitched and stabled the horse.

"Now, Harvey," she said, "hurry right over to Pat Henning's house and tell him to fetch the Sheriff as quickly as possible. "I'll stay here and watch the closet door till you get back."

Harvey needed no second bidding. Pat Henning had just started over to the Latimer place when he neared the little cottage.

"There's a man up there come to shoot Miss Ellen" he shouted, as soon as he turned the corner of the house. "Go for the Sheriff—Sheriff—"

Neither did Pat Henning wait to hear the end of the command. He caught the gist of Harvey's communication, and in an incredibly short time he had saddled his own sorrel mare and was off for the county seat, only stopping on the way to tell friends, or, perchance, strangers, whom he happened to meet that there was another desperado in the community and that he had assaulted Miss Ellen Latimer. Pat Henning was barely on the way when Harvey started across the fields at a steady lope. He reached the house none too soon, for, the effects of the sleeping potion having worked off, the man who was imprisoned in the closet was emphatically demanding his release, and Miss Latimer was beside herself with fear. She had taken refuge in the back yard, but even there the threats and entreaties shouted out by the prisoner were distinctly audible, and it was plain, not only to her and Harvey, but to the neighbors who soon began to drop in, that her situation was critical. They held a consultation, and it was decided that it was best for no one to venture into the house until after the arrival of the Sheriff.

It was almost 10 o'clock when that worthy accompanied by his deputy, Pat Henning and three other men whom he had picked up on the way rode pell mell up to the front gate, and, hastily dismounting, stalked bravely toward the house. At the Sheriff's urgent request Miss Latimer continued to rusticate in the back yard until the trying ordeal should be over and the would-be assassin carried away in chains. She was surprised by the shouts of the men within, when the prisoner was dragged forth from the closet and the handcuffs clapped on his wrists. Then she watched for them to ride away, but for some reason they still lingered. She could hear the stentorian voice of the Sheriff raised in the noisy altercation with another person, whose voice was too low for her to distinguish either the tones or the words. Presently the officer appeared in the doorway. She could see by the light of the lantern he carried that he was flushed and vexed about something.

"Miss Latimer," he said, advancing toward her, "this man insists upon seeing you a moment. He says there has been a grievous mistake and that if he can ony speak a few words to you everything will be all right. You needn't be afraid. His hands are bound Will you come?"

"Certainly," said Miss Latimer.

She took Harvey's cold hand in hers and the two followed the Sheriff into the house. The prisoner was sitting dejectedly on a low chair near the closet door. His head was bent, and only his profile was visible as she approached him. But there was something in the very air of the man that made her start and clutch Harvey's hand more and more tightly. She stood before him and he looked up. A smile passed over his bearded face. She leaned on Harvey for support then; but quickly mastering her emotion she signified her desire to speak with her assassin alone. Harvey discreetly looked out of the farthest window.

"Ellen,' he said, meekly, "I wasn't expecting such a reception at this after the lapse of all these years. I wasn't counting on being locked up as an assassin."

"No," she returned calmly. "Neither was I counting on your running away as you did twenty-one years ago You are worse than an assassin. You murdered my heart. You—"

She was on the point of breaking out a torrent of reproach and scorn, but in an instant she seemed to be riding over the yellow road again with him by her side and the fragrance of the rich, dark earth rising round them like an incense. The sudden transition of thought brought with it a corresponding change of heart, and the love thrills of the morning pulsed through her veins suffusing her comely face with becoming blushes. She drew a step nearer and laid her hands on his shoulders.

"Why did you come back, John?" she asked, softly.

He attempted to take her hand in his, but those useful members being for the time incapacitated for duty he only looked the eloquence his tongue could not utter alone.

"Why?" he repeated. "Because I love you."

"And was that the reason you left me?"

"Ellen, Ellen, be just—"

"As you have been?" she remarked.

"As you alone know how to be," he went on. "I've been an idiot and a rascal. All men are if you'll give them half a chance. It's their nature. I didnt know my own mind. A man never does. Ellen, I haven't a word to say in my self-defence except that I love you. Neither have I a word to utter against the woman I married. She was a dear, good wife. But I love you and always have. Ellen, you'll have to be good to me. Haven't you tried to keep me by taking me prisoner?" he added facetiously.

"Do you know your own mind now?" She meant her voice to be very severe, but it sounded like strains of sweet music instead.

"Take these handcuffs off," he thundered, "and I'll show you, I'll kill that rascally boy of yours."

"I know it," wailed Harvey, whose ear had caght the final threat. "I knew he was an assassin—assassin—"

"Hush, Harvey," said Miss Latimer.

She stopped down and kissed the man's dark, wrinkled face—and, oh, what a tender kiss it was! Then she went to the door and called the Sheriff.

"I find there has indeed been a mistake," she said. "This gentleman is an old friend who called in my absence. Harvey drugged him and locked him up. I'm sorry to have troubled you. You may free his hands These bonds are needed no longer."

"It was a mistake—mistake—mistake," echoed Harvey, who stood by her side.

There was much disappointment at the Lattimer plate that night over being cheated out of a possible lynching, and even after the prisoner was freed the people still lingered, hoping that something would turn up, after all. Miss Latimer and her lover did not heed them. Long after midnight the two sat by the window, through which the apple blossoms were drifting on the night wind ever and anon and talked over the past and future. Harvey did not take the persistence of the neighbors so affably, however.

"It's all a mista-a-ake," he shouted from the kitchen door. "You'd better go home—home—home."

And at length they went. Pittsburg Press.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS RAISING FUNDS

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR young people are very much on their mettle these days. They are turning their faces longingly toward the sunset—every hopeful mother's son and daughter of them all. In every town and hamlet, city and countryside of the nation Endeavorers abide.

The young Endeavorers want to come together in a grand convention, and earnestly, even if incidentally, they long to visit California, the El Dorado of their dreams. Pity 'tis that with such brotherly love and friendly longing should be mixed the sordid necessity of counting the cost. Money, prosaic, unchristian dollars, and a goodly number of them, must buy the right to participate in that convention—at least in the flesh.

Where there is a will there is a way—for bright and enthusiastic young folks to raise a sum with which to traverse a continent and back again, with incidental joys galore. The schemes, both individual and collective, for raising money to pay expenses to and from that convention would fill several fat volumes. Of course Endeavorers are unselfish. That goes without saying. That is the reason that so many of them go to California next July. It is another exemplification of the "united we stand, divided we fall" theory. Not every member of each of the thousands of societies can even dare to dream of attending. Every member, though, can "bear a hand" and help to make it possible for the society to send one delegate, and perhaps several.

DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK.
President of the Christian Endeavor Society.

The ways of raising money to send delegates are as numerous and as varied as the societies themselves. Young folks are perhaps somewhat alike the world around, but certain it is that the plans adopted in various localities have a flavor of the soil, and might furnish opportunities for the students of sociology to deduct some wise conclusions. In New Hampshire, for instance, the method of procedure is decidedly characteristic, and ruggedly simple. The plan is this: Cambridge has, or believes it has, 100,000 people, and any quantity of local pride. The Endeavorers want to send as many delegates as possible, so they are selling votes. To vote for a delegate costs but 1 cent, and each one of those 100,000 inhabitants will be asked to vote as early and often as his disposition prompts or his finances permit.

Many young people have friends who would gladly contribute a part of their expenses, and this arrangement makes it possible to do so in a delicate and inoffensive manner.

Endeavorers of Iowa and other States of the great West have apparently tried to outdo each other in bright ideas for raising funds. The societies of the town of Decatur have found an original and enterprising way—perhaps the cleverest yet reported. The Endeavorers gave a sort of modified church fair, which served the double purpose of creating an interest in the convention and providing funds for the use of delegates. The entertainment was called "A Trip to California," and the population turned out en masse to see it. Booths represented the various points of interest along the route. They were most artistically gotten up, and curios and souvenirs were offered for sale. Peanut venders, candy men and the objectionable "news agents" offered their wares, doubtless with their accustomed measure of insistence. As for refreshments, they were offered on the exquisite dining-car basis, or might be partaken of at station lunch counters, with the customary difficulties thrown in.

Good aunties and uncles from the country, bashful brides in gray gowns, conductors and all the characters supposed to present themselves in the course of a railway journey were impersonated. Red men of the plains threatened, but did not scalp, and after running the gauntlet of events and dangers, the experimental travelers were landed in a delightfully improvised San Francisco, where, presto! charming young Christian damsels in Oriental costume welcomed them to an expurgated edition of Chinatown.

The real San Francisco, by the way, had best be up and doing, and getting its face washed and its hair brushed for that same Christian Endeavor convention.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Masooria, in far India, has been perhaps most farsighted of all in preparation for San Francisco's convention. Dr. F. E. Clark, president of the society, has been visiting Oriental countries and organizing branches made up of young Christians of many one-time heathen nations. The Masoorie people were busy with their plan, however, before Dr. Clark went to visit them. They wrote him in Boston of a marvelous block and gavel which were being wrought for the convention. They are of native woods inlaid with silver, and of rare workmanship. Dr. Clark will be duly presented with the graceful offering, and will bring it with him when he goes to San Francisco and so completes his journey around the world.

BISHOP BOWMAN.

The Patriarch of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishop Thomas Bowman, the patriarch of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is spending the evening of his life with his daughter in Evanston, Ill. He will continue to wear the mantle of ecclesiastical authority, to be the senior member of the administrative counsel, to act as adviser and a chancellor. He and the denomination will celebrate his eightieth birthday in July. His place in the episcopacy will be honorary rather than active—the activity being advisory and relieved of the trying labor of the direction of the conferences. He will remain on the bench of the heads of Methodism—the distinguished reward for as wonderful a half century of religious work as any man ever gave to any church. This work compassed the globe, penetrated China and Japan in advance of civilization, touched Norway and Sweden, left monuments in Germany, Italy and Mexico, built churches in India and dedicated sanctuaries in every State and Territory in this country. The story of his life embraces more than comes to one average man in ten thousand.

The Bishop preached his first sermon when he was 21 years old. His first charge was a horseback mission seventy miles long and his annual salary was $100 cash, from which was not deducted the hospitality of the Methodists along the ride and the fitful donation parties which were forced upon him. The Bishop has dedicated more than 1,200 churches during his work. There is only one other minister in the denomination who has come near to this long list, and he is Dr. Ives, and Dr. Ives has made the dedication of churches a specialty.

HON. A. P. EDGERTON.

HIS SUDDEN DEATH AT HICKSVILLE, OHIO.

Distinguished in all that Makes Men Great, this Citizen, this Statesman was Called to His Long Home—Brief History of His Eventful Life.

A Great Man Gone.

Hon. Alfred P. Edgerton, formerly of Fort Wayne, Ind., ex-Congressman and formerly a member of the National Civil Service Commission, to which he was appointed by President Cleveland in his first term, died at his residence in Hicksville, Ohio. He underwent a surgical operation some time ago, but had apparently recovered. His death was not expected.

The Hon. Alfred P. Edgerton, a notable citizen of Fort Wayne, who has been prominent in the political history of Indiana and Ohio, was born at Plattsburg, Clinton County, N. Y., January 11, 1813, the eldest son of Bela and Phoebe (Ketchum) Edgerton, who were married at Plattsburg March 24, 1811. Mr. Edgerton, after graduating from the Plattsburg academy, removed to Ohio in the spring of 1837. In 1845 he was elected to the Ohio State Senate from a large territory which embraced nearly ten of the present northwestern counties. He immediately took an active part on the side of the Democratic minority, and showed himself a master of the important financial questions which were the subject of discussion in the Senate by the ablest men of the State. Becoming prominent by a debate with the Whig leader, he was mentioned as a candidate for the Governorship of the State, and he was alluded to by a leading Democratic journal as "an able and talented statesman, while faithfully adhering to sound Democratic principles, his unimpeached private character, high sense of honor and sterling integrity as a gentleman, have commanded the respect of the most bitter opponents." So even and consistent has been the long career of Mr. Edgerton that this early expression regarding him, may still be truthfully quoted as an estimate of his character. In 1850, after a brilliant career in the State Senate, he was elected to the United States House of Representatives, and re-elected in 1852. He was second on the important Committee of Claims during his first term and Chairman of that committee on his second term. On the floor his arguments commanded the respectful attention of his associates. From 1853 to 1856 he held the important position of Financial Agent of the State of Ohio at New York. In 1856 he was chairman of the committee on organization of the Democratic National Convention held at Cincinnati, and subsequently he was one of a committee selected by the Legislature of the state of Ohio to investigate the frauds upon the State Treasury. In 1857 Mr. Edgerton removed to Fort Wayne, but retained his citizenship in Ohio until 1862. He became lessee of the Indiana canal, associated with Hugh McCulloch and Pliny Hosgland, in 1859, and held the position of general manager of the division from the State line to Terre Haute until 1868. In January, 1868, he was nominated by the Indiana Democratic State Convention for Lieutenant Governor, Thomas A. Hendricks being at the head of the State ticket, which was defeated, it will be remembered, by 861 votes. Other political positions he filled prior to the latter date were those of delegate to the Baltimore convention of 1848 and the Chicago convention of 1864, but since 1868 he has not taken an active part in politics. In 1872 he was tendered the nomination for Governor of Indiana by the O'Connor Democrats, but declined to endorse that movement. He was for many years a member of the School Board of Fort Wayne, and resigned that position to accept the appointment of Civil Service Commissioner tendered him by President Cleveland. This office he held until 1888. The latter position, like all others, was filled by him in a manner satisfactory to his party, and his constituents, with whom he has always been popular. In private life Mr. Edgerton was an accomplished and genial gentleman, and was held in high esteem by the whole people.

PROBABLY A LIBEL SUIT.

The following special appeared in the Sunday Journal:

"DeKalb county's muddle has probably reached its first libel suit. The Butler Record made a scandalous and untruthful attack on Commissioner Isaac Gunsenhouser this week accusing him of receiving more pay for his services than the law allowed, when in fact he had drawn two terms salary in one. The article was uncalled for and no one knows why the attack was made as it will only result in making Mr. Gunsenhouser more popular. The Record man wants Mr. Gunserhouser to wait until he apologizes before he commences suit and he may do so, but the raw attacks that this paper has been making on public men and others has led people to remark quite often that it was a wonder that he did not get into trouble."

COURT.

Work in court began Monday, and things are under full headway. Chas. Crew is master of cermonies in the court room as usual. Rob McDougal is in charge of the grand jury reception room while Prosecutor Davis and F. L. Welsheimer are the committee on invitations for the same. All are experienced hands and make everybody feel at home whether they want to or not. There was yesterday a pretty full attendance of attorneys. From Waterloo were Gen. Blair, C. M. Phillips, W. H. Less, J. F. Shuman and W. XX. McDonald. From Butler were A. J. Baxter and C. J. Coats and from Garrett, L. Covel, Mr. Sharpless and Mr. Mounts. The attorneys were yesterday arguing whether an attachment would stick on an allowance for damages made by court in a case of breach of promise. We believe the breach of promise case has not yet been decided, and therefore no damages have been awarded. But the case is to come up, and the lady may get a judgment in her favor, and the parties who desire to attach the prospective cash stand ready to hook on. So this preliminary skirmish became necessary. It is the case of Gibson vs Leffin.

EPWORTH GUARDS.

The Epworth Guards will drill in full uniform Saturday night at the Armory. The new swords for the officers will be here and a fine entertainment will be given. Major Kuhlman will make a presentation speech and Milo Calkins will furnish some music. The admission of 5 cents will be charged, the proceeds to go toward buying real guns for the Guards. They will be pleased to see a large attendance

HE TRADED

Ike Likens was in the city yesterday and traded off a pony to a Mr. Thompson who formerly resided near Moores, but who is on his way to little Rock, Ark., going via the overland route. Mr. Likens started home and just as he was on Seventh-st bridge his new horse took a sudden fit and fell as if dead. One thill was broken and after some time the horse was helped up and taken across the bridge and allowed to graze on the green grass. Mr Likens felt he had the worrst end of the bargain and offered $2 to any one who would take the horse out to the woods and kill it. But no one wanted the job. So he hitched up and started on his journey homeward.

A SIMPLE TIRE REPAIR.

Punctures in the well known Morgan & Wright tire are mended about as easily as a man would close a hole in his finger with a bit of court plaster. Inside of the inner tube of the tire lies a long strip of patching rubber, like this:

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture into this inner tube, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, like this,

the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, like this:

Very simple, but—now every rider should remember these two "buts," or he will fail:

Before injecting cement, pump up the tire. If you don't, the inner tube will be flabby, like this, and the cement will not get inside of it, where the repair strip lies.

When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

A Subtle Distinction.

"Dear me," remarked one girl, "her parents must be very much displeased with her engagement to that musician. It is even worse than I thought."

"On what do you base your opinion?"

"They used to refer to him as a violinist. Now they say that he plays the fiddle."—Washington Star.

For Herself Alone.

She—Do you love me for myself alone, dearest? He—Of course I do. You don't suppose I want your mother about all the time, do you?—Judy.

ICE CREAM.

Good, pure ice cream is a real luxury in hot weather. I have built and equipped a plant for the manufacture of this luxury and will furnish the citizens of Auburn a strictly first class article. I have one of the best herds of Jersey cows in Indiana and can furnish better cream than can be made where the milk is produced from common cows. I have been asked by many of my customers to sell this cream from my wagon. I would be pleased to accomodate my customers in this way but cannot do it. I have arranged to have my cream sold by the following business men in Auburn:

Baxter Bros; Robbins & McCord, Davenport, druggists, and at Green's candy kitchen. Please come and leave your orders with either one of these firms for any quanity. I do not wish to retail cream at any time or price. Please give your order to either of the firms named and your order will be filled promptly. I solicit a share of your patronage.

CAL HUSSELMAN.

FLOWER STEALING.

It does seem as though anyone whose taste led them to admire flowers would be above stealing them. But you can never be sure of a thing of this kind. Off and on for several years residents of Auburn have lost flowers by some parties, who took them at night. They were usually flowers of the choice kinds that had cost the owners some time and money. This time it is Dr. S. B. Johnston who has suffered. He and his wife have always and still have fine tastes and success in flower raising, and have now and then suffered losses of choice plants. This time they were hit pretty hard. Saturday night twenty choice tulips were taken from their grounds, and last night a number more disappeared in the same way. The Doctor and his wife are proud of their fine flowers and enjoy them greatly. It is to be hoped the thieves will be exposed and brought to justice.

"DON'T GET SARCASTIC"

"We've Done Business With Village Attorneys Before."

The above was the reply made to City Attorney C. M. Brown, at the council chambers, last evening by two boys representing a rug firm, when Mr Brown was questing them concerning their rights to canvass in the city in direct violation of the law. These men struck town yesterday and at once began convassing, but were stopped by Marshal Potter. They have a form of a lease, which has been gotten up with the intention of avoiding the license charged for such venders. They rent the rugs and accept monthly or weekly payments and in a certain length of time by paying one cent additional the rug becomes your property. In the language of councilman Hines. "We don't believe there are any people in Auburn who are fools enough to sign such a lease." Our merchants sell better rugs at lower prices, and why people should bind themselves up to a foreign concern with such an unreason able contract is a mystery.

WRITERS' PRIDE.

The Delight Felt by Dickens, Charles Mathews and Haydon.

Dickens has told us of the keen emotion that overcame him on seeing in print his first "effusion," as he styled it, which he had dropped stealthily one evening at twilight, with fear and trembling into a dark letter-box in a dark office up a dark court in Fleet street, and how when it appeared next morning he went for half an hour into Westminster hall, "because my eyes were so dimmed with joy and pride that they could not bear the street," says Chambers' Journal. Charles Mathews, the elder, describes the delight with which he gazed on the first proof of his translation of "The Princess of Cleves," which appeared by monthly installments in the Lady's Magazine, as "boundless" and how he fancied the eyes of Europe were upon him and that the ladies who subscribed to that periodical would unite in calling on the editor to insist in "C. M." declaring himself. Poor Haydon has left a vivid record of the flutter of elation with which he greeted the result of his having dropped his little composition into the letter-box of the Examiner. "Never," he writes, "shall I forget that Sunday morning. In came the paper, wet and uncut; in went the paper knife—cut, cut, cut. Affecting not to be interested, I turned the pages open to dry and to my certain immortality beheld, with a delight not to be expressed, the first sentence of my letter. I put down the paper, walked about the room, looked at Macbeth (a print on the wall), made the tea, buttered the toast, put in the sugar, with that inexpressible suppressed chuckle of delight which always attends a condescending relinquishment of an anticipated rapture till one is perfectly ready. Who has not felt this? Who has not done this?"

—Miss Smiley, and Mrs. Eugene Iddings, of Kendallville, were here Saturday evening calling on friends, including, Dr. Buchtel, Mrs. Ward and her daughter Mrs. Ehlers, and Mr. and Mrs. Barns. Loveland, shipping clerk at Jackson's factory, will, the coming month, wed Miss Nora the estimable daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Knaub. They have our congratulations in advance."

In writing yesterday of the duties of the marshal, we omitted one of the most important. He must make monthly reports in writing as to poll tax road work, money received for license, and as to all other matters that come through his office. This is a wise provision and should be strictly lived up to, not only the marshal's first year, but all his other years. He can secure and retain the confidence of the people by living up strictly to the rules of business

BUTLER.

Clyde E. Shoulb, of Reading, Cal. has come to Butler to make it his future home. He was born here in '76, and has lived in California nearly all his life.

The new town officers have organized and things are moving along in the old channel, just as if there had never been an imaginary battle fought about nothing by the Auburn and Ft. Wayne press. Great are political nothings.

The eighth anniversary of the Epworth League, of the M. E. church last Sunday evening. The exercises were interesting and instructive.

Continous rains are proving quite detrimental to farming interest in so far as getting out spring crops. The wheat has improved nearly forty per cent in appearance in the last thirty days, and grass scarcely ever looked better in the middle of May.

The County Sunday School convention which convenes at Spencerville June 6, promises to be of more than ordinary interest.

Our factories are going a little slow on account of the lateness of the season, and bad condition of the roads.

J. A. Campbell was recently called to Angola to testify in an action instituted by Dr. Clay, of Mich., against the Connecticut Insurance Co. The insurance had been contracted for subject to the approval of the company, and the property burned before the company had opportunity to act upon the application. The case was very holty contested, and resulted in a verdict for the company.

Dick Abrams, Butler's notorous ex-convict was arrested last Saturday for drunkenness, and fined $10 and costs amounting to $30, and failing to pay he was put in the calaboose for safe keeping until he could be handed over to the sheriff. During the night he obtained a stick of wood, pried off the bars of his prison and escaped. All are glad, and hope he will stay away.

—G. S. McCord has stuffed and mounted the four-legged chick we spoke of, at least as well as could be done to a bird so young. It shows distinctly the two bodies joined at the breast, from which point the one neck and head rise. Each pair of legs is well developed, and stand so as to look as if two chicks were coming toward each other. Altogether it is a queer freak of nature.

—Chester Hoisington and wife have parted. Yesterday she took her household goods, and moved into the north rooms of the Moody Hotel, and will make her own living. When he came from his work at noon she was gone, and he it is said, went to her and tried to have her return. But she would not, as she claims he has been cruel to her, even to the extent of striking her. She is said to be a worthy, industrious woman, and if so, will have no difficulty in finding employment.

Don't thin your blood with sassafras or poison it with blue-mass; but aid Nature by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills for constipation, biliousness and stomach and liver troubles. They are purely vegetable. Davenport, the druggist.

—A dose that is always seasonable is a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator, the "King of Liver Medicines." It keeps the liver active; the bowels regular; prevents Biliousness; and promotes digestion. In fact helps keep you well. "I have watched it's effects in families where I have practised, and find it admirable; both alterative and tonic in its action."—Dr. T. W. Mason, Macon, Ga.

R., for a number of years as conductor and by saving and profitable investments has accumulated considerable means. —The new electric light dynamo has arrived and is being put in shape at the plant. It is one of the latest inventions in electric dynamos, and the best on the market. The COURIER happened at the plant last night and witnessed the starting up and turning on of the lights. To go there when the plant is running properly, one does not get an idea of the speed it requires to run the dynamos. But we watched Alt Moody turn on the steam and we thought the engine was running at its best, but it had fairly started. But as more steam was applied, and the speed became greater, the distant dim lights could be seen and as the speed increased, the lights did likewise until they were at their best.

—The Greenler factory is putting up a new office in the angle formed by the Wabash tracks and the Fort Wayne wagon road. It is a neat little structure, and is a convenience they have needed.

—Geo. Bender and family came up today from Fort Wayne and will visit friends a few days, here and in the country.

—J. F. Shuman, of Waterloo, was here to-day. He will be in Indianapolis about all next week attending to matters connected with the Winslow estate at Waterloo, he being one of the administrators.

—The DeKalb folks have returned from the G. A. R. meeting at Richmond. Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Silver and Mrs. Lochner, but Mrs. Cowan stopped off at Decatur. We believe only two men went from our county, Editor Willis and Editor Minor.

—D. B. Martin, Manager of Passenger Traffic of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, is a firm believer in artistic advertising for railroads, and is already taking steps to place the B. & O. at the top in this respect. He is going to take full advantage of the scenic beauties of the line, and probably an entirely new series of photographs will be recured.

—The Butler Record, like many other well-meaning papers, goes wild without a proper study of the question. For instance it says Commissioner Gunsenhouser had no right to draw $84 pay, as $31.50 is all the law allows. Quite way off. The law allows them $3.50 a day, and Gunsenhouser had worked 24 days before drawing any pay. Hague and Bateman had worked 9 days each since drawing pay. That gave them $31 50 each. All three bills were correct.

—The Baltime & Ohio Railroad Company has arranged with Pullman's Palace Car Company for new equipment of observation parlor cars for use during the summer months between Pittsburg and Washington and Wheeling and Washington. These cars are new and will be the first of this style to be used on the mountain divisions of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT:—It is a terrible accident to be burned or scalded; but the pain and agony and the frightful disfigurements can be quickly overcome without leaving a scar by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Davenport, the druggist

—The Butler Herald clips from the Clipper, that Marion Willis has been having trouble over our bicycle ordinance. Nothing of the kind ever entered Mr. Willis' mind. When will our exchanges learn that any item found in the Clipper is unreliable unless it may be the many they re-write from their exchanges.

—J. S. Dodge, who has just been elected State Commander of the G. A. R. was at one time editor of the Butler Record. At that time he was plain "Dr" Dodge. Since then he has become a lawyer and when he was making campaign speeches last year he was rated as "Col" Dodge. Now, he is quoted as "Gen." Dodge. His rise in rank has been very rapid

Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite, complexion and general health.

CONSTIPATION

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

Sweet Mamie was a fair young thing,
But her papa was gamey;
And when he heard the doorbell ring
He softly said: "Now Mamie,
He's got to leave by half-past ten!"
(Sure, he was not to blame; he Was getting rather tired by then.)
"Yes, dear papa!" said Mamie.

But when it got to half-past ten
This cool young man who came, he Stayed on, just like the other men,
And pale and wan grew Mamie.
There came a voice chock full of sand—
She thought it said, "Obey me!"
She up and told the young man and—
He said goodbye to Mamie.

Now, Mamie, as she went to bed,
(She went, though, all the same!)
She sobbed and wished she were dead—
So mortified was Mamie.
Then she stole up to papa's door
Before she said her lay-me—
Alas! That noise was papa's snore,
And, oh, how mad was Mamie!

TWO BAPTIZED.

The Church of God people last evening held feet washing and communion services at their church. The meeting was largely attended. After the services at the church, the congregation repaired to the creek near the Seventh-st. bridge and Mrs. Harvey Croy and Miss Laura Hostetler were baptized by Rev. Bloyd. There had quite a large audience assembled here and the services were very impressive. The moon had just arisen and it was almost as light as day.

SPORTS AND FADS OF OUR PRESIDENTS.

GROVER CLEVELAND will go down in history as the duck-hunting and fishing President. During his last four years in office he went duck hunting 100 times and "bagged" over 4,000 feathered fliers.

But other Presidents, says the San Francisco Examiner, have had their sports or fads. George Washington conducted the largest stock farm known in his time at Mount Vernon. He owned 8,000 acres of land, and upon 4,000 of it raised fancy stock. He bought all the finest horses in that part of the country, and originated the "thoroughbred" system. John Adams left Harvard in 1755, the best trout fisherman in his class, and so firmly did this sport cling to him that after his presidency he retired to Braintree, Mass., to spend the remainder of his days "along stream." His vacations, though infrequent while in the White House, were passed fishing along the Potomac's shores, then wooded and wild. Thomas Jefferson, a rich man's son, was an accomplished violin player. So fond was he of this accomplishment that when pressed with work he would resolutely put away his violin lest he be tempted to play it. James Madison went through Princeton in two years and came out so delicate from the strain that he was never able to join the sports of other men. He took refuge in gardening, and raised the finest roses ever grown and the sturdiest cabbages.

The pen of James Monroe was so mighty that it vanquished all else. Writing came first, last and all the time. During his eight years in the White House he took no vacation at all, devoting all his spare time to pen driving. He was the only President who believed in "all work and no play." John Quincy Adams was so fond of dancing that during his ministry to the Netherlands he lamented long and loud upon his inability to attend social functions. He was too poor to return them. Never a man was more at home in the ball room, and it was his delight to escape the affairs of state and arrange a minuet or spend an evening where there was sprightly music.

Andrew Jackson was the first athlete produced by the United States. He was passionately fond of wrestling and was a bully with those of his size. He amused himself running, even while in the White House, and at boxing was such an enthusiast that he imported gloves and paraphernalia from England. Martin Van Buren inaugurated fashionable driving at Washington. He was too great a politician to leave the capital to hunt or fish, but he would take long drives with political friends.

William Henry Harrison was noted for his dinners as far west as the Pacific coast, and that in 1800 was a long way off. He was appointed Governor of the territory of Indiana by John Adams, and during his three or four holdings was famous for his dinner parties. Every visiting delegation was sumptuously entertained by him at the "Log Cabin" on the banks of the Wabash. President Tyler had two amusements. One was the keeping of slaves whom he managed on the broad, generous, strict and able plan of the baronial estates of the days of Bruce. His other recreation was the raising of peaches, the most magnificent specimens of which came annually from Sherwood Forest. While President Tyler kept the fruit industry uppermost he had a soft spot for all agriculturists who sought office. Zachary Taylor would hurry through an annual message and close a congressional session sooner than forego a practical joke. He liked to play cards, but even here could not refrain from the practical joke, which made him unpopular at the euchre table. Franklin Pierce was the most noted philanthropist of the day. Losing his family early, he devoted his spare time to endowing worthy institutions and lecturing—without cost—for public benefit. New Hampshire is filled with monuments of his vigorous and lifelong philanthropic campaign, which he did not allow to slumber during his presidency.

James Buchanan had a trick of slipping away from Washington to the woods, where he enjoyed himself shooting. He went monthly and brought home fine bags of game. His summers were spent hunting, during which he got not only game for dinner but health for the President.

Abraham Lincoln, the man without an education, was so passionately fond of poetry that he carried scraps of it in his pockets to read at odd moments. When at ease for an hour he would sit and repeat verses, the favorites being Oliver Wendell Holmes' "Last Leaf" and "Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?" His sentimental nature needed no other fund of joy. Grant's recreation while in the White House was billiards. He bought a very good table, and cleared out a corner of the conservatory to make room for it. When tired he would play billiards; and when supposed to be "away for the afternoon," taking a trip somewhere, he was driving the balls with his sons, one of whom now has the table. Hayes is remarkable for the recreation he did not take. Billiards, wine and fast horses were his abhorrence. His recreation while in the White House was in such limited poultry culture as he could carry on in the White House inclosure and at his summer home, a pastime taken up as a livelihood afterward.

President Arthur's amusement was unquestionably banquet giving, and he carried it out to the death. He was the greatest connoisseur of wines that ever entered the White House. He was a magnificent entertainer, and when not pressed with work he banqueted his friends. Benjamin Harrison loved the Adirondacks with his out-door life. He liked Cape May, near the sea. His recreation was and is to commune with nature, and from her he gets his inspiration as well as his rest. William McKinley has no settled fondness for sports. He loves to ride horseback, and he has three carriages for his wife.

THEODORE A. HAVEMEYER.

Through Hard Work He Became One of the Sugar Kings of the Country.

Theodore A. Havemeyer, who died in New York recently, was known throughout the country as the sugar king. All his life he had been identified with sugar refining and amassed an immense fortune in the business.

Mr. Havemeyer was born in New York City 58 years ago. He was one of the four sons of Frederick C. Havemeyer, who first established sugar refining upon a thorough basis in this country. Like all of his brothers young

THEODORE A. HAVEMEYER.

Theodore started out to master the trade, and by dint of hard work he acquired a thorough knowledge of every branch of the business. For twenty-five years he worked as hard as the humblest laborer in his father's refinery nine hours every day and lived on $50 a month. On the father's death, with his brother, Henry O., who had also mastered the trade, he succeeded to the business. While Henry O. devoted himself to the financial management of the concern, Theodore looked after the practical workings of the establishment. Under the firm name of Havemeyers & Elder they became the largest sugar refiners in the country if not in the world. Theodore was a prominent figure in the organization of the American Sugar Refining Company, in which his brother is president, while he filled the office of vice president. This gigantic corporation has virtually controlled the price of sugar in the markets.

Mr. Havemeyer was prominent in the social life of New York and was famous as an entertainer. He was a member of about all of the leading clubs, possessed handsome residences in New York and Newport, R. I., and a beautiful country place at Mahwah, N. J. He took a deep interest in athletic sports and always encouraged outdoor exercise. At the time of his death his wealth reached in the neighborhood of $20,000,000.

As a Matter of Policy.

Unless she is of an unusually generous nature, the young wife will have no rivals in her husband's affections. When to an instinctive jealousy is added the feeling that she owes his people no loyalty, she does not hesitate to point out the various defects in their characters. Constant dropping will wear away a stone; continual detraction from the lips of the woman he loves best cannot but have a demoralizing influence on the respect a young man feels even for his nearest relatives; and when respect is gone the beauty of filial and fraternal love is gone too. The day may come when he will once more see with his own eyes; but the mischief is then beyond remedy, and nothing can wholly restore the old harmonious relations. We may agree, then, that for policy's sake, if a higher motive is impossible, a family should endeavor to give a hearty welcome to the girl who has become engaged to their son. Yet what shall we say you a girl who does not reciprocate honest kindness loyally? All right-minded people must feel indignation and contempt for conduct so base. A girl is bound by every tie of duty and seemliness to pay special honor to parents and the family of her lover, and a young man is equally bound to honor his future wife's relatives. Happily, we believe that this mutual kindliness and cordiality is much more common than it was. The majority of husbands cherish most friendly feelings toward their mothers-in-law, and there are numerous cases where the husband's mother is honestly loved and respected by her son's wife. This is as it should be, and we sincerely hope that kindness and courtesy among relatives-at-law may speedily become universal.

The Day of the Red Terror.

January 27, 1306, was the famous "Day of the Red Terror," described by medieval chroniclers. The dawn was clear and beautiful, but shortly before the sun rose the heavens became obscured in a strange red blaze. It hid the sun and the crimson glare fell upon the earth like the reflection of some great conflagration. Terror filled the hearts of mankind everywhere. The churches of Europe were filled the whole day long. Anchorites and hermits came from their retreats and cried aloud that the Day of Judgment was at hand. In the afternoon and evening some people declared they could see angels and devils battling in the air and that the blood of the conflict rained upon the earth. However, about midnight the red pall disappeared before a wind and the panic-stricken people recovered their senses.

The Empress of Austria.

The Empress of Austria is not in good health, and is obliged to forego the long early morning walks which have been her delight and a trial to the ladies in waiting. She has worn black ever since the death of her son, the Crown Prince Rudolph, and has given away all of her jewels except the crown jewels. The Princess Rudolph is a gifted handsome woman, but she and the Empress are not the best of friends. The Princess Elizabeth, her little daughter, is a very interesting child, and as fond of mountain climbing as her mother.

CAUSED TONGUES TO WAG.

Elliot F. Shepard's Marriage the Society Sensation in New York.

Elliot F. Shepard's marriage to Mrs. Esther Potter continues to be the society sensation in New York. Young Shepard is a grandson of William H. Vanderbilt. He is a beardless youth of 20, while his charming bride is 27 and was a fascinating widow when young Shepard first met her some months ago. It is already settled that the marriage was a love marriage. It is even hinted that the heart-broken mother has forgiven the son in the hope that the last sheaf in his harvest of wild oats has been sown, but the bride and groom have not been received in the ancestral palace in the Murray Hill neighborhood. They do not expect to be received there for some time, and to save themselves from the shafts of the curious they sailed for Europe, to be gone as long as they please. The bride, before her first marriage with Mr. Potter, who died five years ago, was Miss Esther Wiggins, of Greenport, L. I. Her father sold groceries, vegetables, nails, ice and molasses, and all the other necessities which are carried by the corner store. She was the belle of the town. She was so pretty that it is told that yachtsmen sailing the sound used to run into this port, ostensibly to get ice, actually to see Miss Wiggins. She helped her father behind the counter. Shepard will have enough money to be indifferent to opinion. He has his allowance of $2,000 a month, and is an heir to millions.

Earthquakes.

It has been noticed on various occasions that different animals have shown signs of uneasiness or fear without apparent cause, and that a few minutes afterward an earthquake shock has been felt.

People who have had the opportunity of taking note of this peculiarity in countries where earthquakes are frequent are well aware of its significance, and always prepare for a seismic disturbance. It is advanced, in explanation of this sign of fear, that animals are able to perceive things—such as very slight movements—which escape the eye of man; animals see these premonitory signs and know what to expect, whereas man goes about his business quite unconscious of what is about to happen.

In Japan it is usually the pheasants—very numerous in the classic land of earthquakes—which give the first danger signal; they cry out and rush about in characteristic fashion, and in a few minutes the shock is felt. Other birds and animals, such as fowls and dogs, also give warning signs.

What the Doctors Say.

Avoid all narcotic medicines, when possible. About the most harmless of the efficacious alleviants of nervousness is a three-gain pill composed of the valerianates of iron, quinine and zinc, taken every three hours.

Persons afflicted with boils will find relief by taking a good dose of Rochelle salts before breakfast, several times a week. A one-fifth grain of sulphide of calcium taken every three hours is also suggested as a remedy.

Stings are often relieved and cooled by the use of diluted or pure vinegar. In such serious cases of snake bites, however, the internal administration of ammonia and other stimulants is relied on. Externally, the wound may be burned with some caustic—always by a doctor.

One of the most invigorating forms of bathing is the cold sponge bath taken in the morning before breakfast. Persons who do not react readily after such a bath, such as the very young, the very old, or those who are seriously weakened by disease, should not practice it. For a person of average health, however, the cold bath is an excellent tonic.

Physicians recommend yawning. The stretching of the arms and breastbones which accompanies a hearty yawn, with the expansion of the lungs by the deep inspirations, forms splendid morning and evening exercise, and the most perfect chamber gymnastic exercise for people generally, and especially for all those who are troubled with their breathing.

Dobell's solution, a mixture that is much in favor with nasal catarrh sufferers, should be used with an atomizer several times daily. Any person can prepare it on the following formula: Take one-half dram of pure carbolic acid, two drams of bicarbonate of soda, two drams of borax, one-half ounce of glycerine and enough distilled water to make one pint.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Knowledge.—Man has a thirst for knowledge as natural as his thirst for water and a curiosity as natural as his appetite for food; the more he knows the greater the thirst.—Rev. C. W. Gullette, Methodist, Cincinnati, O.

Pulpit Truth.—It is no part of the preacher's business or commission to deceive men. Better even that his words should wound to the quick than that he should soothe the soul with a lie.—Rev. J. W. Riddle, Baptist, Philadelphia, Pa.

The House We Live In.—The house of character in which we are to dwell in heaven must be built upon the rock of earth. It must be able to withstand the floods of false reasoning and the storms of selfish passion.—Rev. John Goddard, Swedenborgian, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Pain.—Pain is pain. I do not think much of the pain I shall have a million years from now. It is my pain to-day I would be rid of. It is the hell on earth that hurts. When we dispose of that there is no possible danger of any other.—Rev. M. W. Reed, Independent, Denver, Colo.

Discontent.—We are living in perilous times; grave problems confront the church; men are doubting its efficiency; the whole complexion of church life seems to be undergoing a marked change. Restlessness, discontent, seem universal.—Rev. C. M. Simpson, Methodist, Philadelphia, Pa.

Moses.—Moses was not a poet, but a historian. In his last four books he tells us what he did or what he saw, while in the first he gives the history of the three patriarchs of his people, the memory of whose doings were yet sufficiently fresh.—Rev. John Scully, Catholic, Philadelphia, Pa.

Eternal Life.—To all men, everywhere, Catholic, Protestant, Jew or Pagan, God promises eternal life to the men who are seeking for eternal life, provided they seek it, not by forms and ceremonies and creeds of externality, but by patient continuance of well doing.—Rev. Lyman Abbott, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Tragedy of Death.—Every death is a tragedy. There are moments of terror and an earthquake in the experience of every man who has to die. In the case of the unbeliever, it is a tragedy of uncertainty, of fear, of darkness. To the believer it is a tragedy of hope and of joy.—Rev. A. C. Dixon, Independent, New York City.

Spiritual Suicide.—Many people commit spiritual suicide. They quarrel with their family or their neighbors, and thus annihilate their own happiness. A nagging wife may turn any home into a hell on earth; an irritable and unreasonable husband wreck an earthly paradise of a home.—Rev. W. B. Partridge, Baptist, Cincinnati.

Human Driftwood.—Every person is a king in his own little domain, and each person's life is maintained in a degree by his being insular. Human wrecks are simply moral driftwood. People do not begin by going wrong. They begin by doing right wrongly. They are chips of the wave.—Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York City.

GAVE $6,000,000 TO GREEKS.

George Averoff, of Paris, and His Donation to the Army Fund.

The announcement is made that George Averoff, of Paris, has given to the Greek war fund the sum of $6,000,000. M. Averoff is a Greek and a multi-millionaire. His sympathies are decidedly with his own people. He was instrumental in reviving the Olympian games, giving 1,000,000 drachmas toward the expense of the restoration of the Stadion, and at the outbreak of the trouble with Turkey offered to provide 40,000 uniforms for the Greek troops.

George Averoff was born in Metsova, Epirus. He is 68 years old, and a descendant of an illustrious family. His real name is George Avieros, but having resided long in Russia, he changed his name to Averoff. He went to Moscow when a boy of 17 and worked in his uncle's firm as a clerk. Upon his uncle's death he inherited half a million dollars. As a provisioner of the Russian troops in the Crimean war he made enormous profits. After the close of the war he emigrated to Egypt. His donations to Greece for the construction of public buildings aggregate $9,000,000. His real estate property is estimated to be about 90,000,000 francs. In his will, already made, he makes the Greek navy his legal heir.

Leaving Italy.

Italy broke its record of emigration in 1896, the number of persons leaving the country being 306,093, three-fifths of the number intending to stay away permanently. Sixty-eight thousand persons came to the United States, 75,024 went to Argentina; the others went chiefly to Uruguay and Brazil. For the first time the number of Italian emigrants exceeds that sent out by any other European country during the year.

A man has a good many rights he is never allowed to mention.

CRISP FORMS OF THOUGHT.

SOLOMON AND TUPPER TWISTED TO SUIT A MODERN TRADE.

The Wisdom of the Sages and the Wit of the Masses, Even the Work of the Missionaries, Are Grist in the Mill—They Are Poached Upon by Authors and Advertisers.

Whether Solomon invented all his proverbs, or gathered them from many sources with a nicer sense of permanent worth than Mr. Tupper exercised in his later compendium, is and ever will be an open question. Solomon's copyright ran out long before Tupper's time, and both are now poached upon with impunity by all classes, from authors to advertisers. But, taken by themselves, proverbs well repay careful study. Students of ethnology find in the proverbs of the different races the clearest proofs of their real characteristics, for they are the shrewdest and yet most intimate expressions of their daily life.

Judged by the comparison of these homely sayings, it will be found that all nations are of one kindred, possessing common needs, common aspirations, and seeking similar reliefs from toil and labor. On the dustiest shelves of our libraries may be found collections of all the proverbs of the different nations, quite a large proportion of the work having resulted from the interest which missionaries have taken in their earnest studies of the uncivilized peoples whom they seek to instruct. That the shrewd sayings of the Scotch or the bright nits of the Irish should be carefully collected gives little cause for surprise; but a collection of Abyssinian proverbs, of those of the Tamil language, of Icelandic lore, of the Sanscrit, South Sea Islands, Chinese, and Hottentot Solomons does excite curiosity. The missionaries have found it a pleasant as well as a profitable task. It delves deep into the idioms of the language, tells with unerring accuracy the mental tendency of the people, and by introducing the foreigner into the inner thought of both home and trade shows him the real life of those who adopt them as every-day expressions.

It is impossible to read the well-collated proverbs of the Chinese without realizing that a home life exists in that flowery kingdom which rivals that of many more civilized countries. No Solomon, no descendant of Abraham, could eclipse the trade proverbs of the Chinese. They touch on trade with a keenness and thoroughness which proves them to be masters in that school. The baser life of the Hottentot, the loose morals of the fellah, the independent spirit of the Briton, are all crystallized in their national proverbs.

In England and many other countries it was formerly very usual for a tradesman to select some proverb as his motto, and thus post his principles plainly over his shop door. It remained, however, for an American house to appropriate the proverbs of the world en masse and use them for their own advancement. New Yorkers who ride on the elevated roads, or people who in less favored localities still jog along in the slow street cars, are familiar with the blue and white proverbs which proclaim the merits of Sapolio to the world. Every omnibus in London and almost every "tram car" in England is similarly adorned.

They made their first appearance on the Broadway omnibuses, were gathered out of over 4,000 pages of the world's collections, and twisted to suit the case. Many of them are beyond easy recognition in their new dress, many are entirely original, but these are also printed between inverted commas, which lends a glamour of antiquity to them. To-day we are told that over 20,000 of these blue cards are displayed in public conveyances carrying over 6,000,000 passengers daily.

Condensed thought generally requires padding to make it intelligible to the masses, just as the stomach of the horse must be distended with hay to make the oats digest readily; but with proverbs it is quite otherwise. Their popularity is only reached because they have passed muster as being clear to every mind. They tell their story with a directness and brevity which pleases the public, as the dictionary did the old Scotch woman—"They air braw stories," she said, "but unco' short." Turned to tell the practical story of Sapolio, they often acquire new interest. Who reads the advice, "Be patient and you will have patient children," without an innate respect for the advice which follows, not to fret over house cleaning, but do it easily with Sapolio? And who can repress a smile when the Sapolionic artist pictures the patient father and the impatient twins defying the proverb? But the mother will be back sooner if she follow the advice. Our familiar "The pot calls the kettle black" takes a new interest in its Italian form. The pot says to the pan, "Keep off or you'll smutch me." The universal toil of the world finds expression in the Catalan phrase, "Where wilt thou go, Ox, that thou wilt not plough?" Almost all nations possess a proverb which declares that "if you forbid a fool a thing, that he will do," and with confidence in the good will of the public the advertiser of Sapolio puts it in this form:

"Forbid a fool a thing and that he will do." So we say for variety: "Don't use Sapolio—but then you're not a fool."

"A touch of nature which makes all the world akin" springs out of the quaint thought that "A needle, though naked itself, clothes others." Who can hear it once and ever see a needle without recalling it? Who fails to recognize the picture it suggests of the aid given to the poor by the poor, and of the help which is everywhere gained from the humblest of assistants?

What can be more practical than the statement that "a handsaw is a good thing, but not to shave with," which naturally suggests the proper use of Sapolio.

Slang never can be confounded with proverbial phrases. It seems universal, but it is merely a local form used to express a transient but popular idea. Years ago, when a general rush at hotel keeping resulted in many failures, the slang ran: "He's a very good man, but he can't keep a hotel." All such phrases are local and temporary. They do not survive—indeed, rarely possess merit enough to reach a second year without evident decline in popularity. We have noticed that none of the advertisements of Sapolio make use of slang, and probably for this reason.

Naturally many of the best proverbs used in this connection relate to household cleanliness, and all the original ones are framed to that end. "Dirt in the house builds the highway to beggary," deserves recognition, despite its origin. Household sayings, in the sense of four-walled buildings full of furniture, are quite lacking in many Eastern tongues. We believe that no reference to clean housekeeping can be found in the Koran or even in the Bible, except that of the woman who swept the house to find her lost coin. Shakspeare rather slights the subject, but whether because it was not deemed important in that intellectual but dirty age or because he soared to grander things, we will not discuss, but the England of to-day well says of home, "The cleaner 'tis the cosier 'tis," and our American advertiser improves the opportunity to add that humble homes made bright with Sapolio are better than tawdry palaces. Alas, for the thoughtlessness of the man who forgot to ask whether his bride used Sapolio. The Scotch proverb records his case: "Ye hae tied a knot wi' your tongue ye winna loose wi' your teeth."

TIMING BIG PROJECTILES.

How Their Initial Velocity Is Calculated in Tests.

To the layman one of the interesting features in a big gun test is the method by which the initial velocity of the projectiles is calculated. When he hears that the modern high-power guns often expel a shot at an initial velocity of 2,000 feet a second, a rate that if sustained would mean a mile in three seconds, he realizes the difficulty of calculating the speed. An ordnance officer must have accurate knowledge of the velocity of a projectile that he may predict its range and penetration and determine the accuracy of the gun. It is a comparatively easy matter, however, with the new instruments to calculate accurately the initial velocity of a projectile, and any one who is fortunate enough to visit Sandy Hook when big guns are being tested may see how it is done.

Two open frames are set up 150 feet apart in front of the gun. Wires are stretched back and forth across these frames, making a screen through which the shot must pass. The wires in each screen form a complete electric circuit, which includes also an electric battery and an electro-magnet. The projectile, after leaving the gun, flies through the wire in the first screen, interrupting the circuit and releasing the armature of the magnet. In a space of time so small as to be hardly conceivable the projectile has covered the distance between the two frames and pierced the wire in the second, interrupting its electric current and releasing the armature of its magnet as in the first case. The interval between the drop of these two armatures represents the time spent by the projectile in traveling 150 feet. This time is indicated by the chronograph in the laboratory near by. Wires run from each screen to the laboratory, which is fitted up with batteries and switchboards. The armature of the first electro-magnet is an iron rod about three feet long, which is suspended vertically. This rod falls when the first screen is pierced. The armature of the second electro-magnet is placed a little below the first, and when it is released it acts as a knife, and, striking the side of the falling rod, makes a slight mark. The distance of this cut or mark from the end of the rod indicates the distance through which the rod has dropped while the projectile is passing from one screen to another. This forms the unit for the calculation of the projectile's velocity in feet per second. New explosives and high-power guns have increased the initial velocity of projectiles wonderfully in the last few years. Projectiles may be expelled now with a force that will make them effective at a range far beyond ordinary eyesight.—New York Sun.

Portrait on His Hand.

In 1891 or 1892, if my memory is not at fault, the eighth wonder of the world was born at Roseberg, S. C. The freak in question was a baby, born into the family of Clark Osborn, a well known merchant of the town above, and the oddity was a natural portrait in the hand of the little one. Those who made a critical examination of the baby's hand as soon as the curiosity was discovered say that the portrait on the tiny palm was that of a child apparently about 3 years old. The features were clear cut and distinct and appeared to be those of a child lying sound asleep. The delicately tinted lips were partly open, showing four pearly teeth; the eyes were tightly closed and the cheeks were full, red and natural.

When the mother first discovered the miraculous imprint on her new-born darling's hand she fainted, owing partly, it is said, to the fact that the portrait was an excellent likeness of the face of her little 3-year-old daughter, who died about two months before.

Tobacco and Weight.

A medical journal has made some careful investigations among the colleges of New England, which enabled it to state that students who do not use tobacco gain weight, height and girth of chest from 10 to 24 per cent. faster than those who chew or smoke. The development of the lungs, if this authority is correct, is especially retarded by the tobacco habit.

Mr. J. Clayton, in a communication to Nature, refers to careful measurements he has made with sycamore, elm, oak, ash and beech trees, from which he has discovered that they all contract in girth during a frost.

"Papa," said a boy, "I know what makes people laugh in their sleeve." "Well, my son, what makes them?" "'Cause that's where their funny bone is."—Spare Moments.

Good Looks.

There are more wrinkles in the face of a baby monkey than there are in that of an old baboon. And speaking of wrinkles, more of them can be wrought out in a fair, young face by neuralgia than will be found in that of an aged person. Constant pain will shrivel, and neuralgia neglected will plow its furrows deep. It not only wrinkles, but takes the bloom away and gives the skin a dull and yellow look. St. Jacobs Oil is a prompt and sure cure for neuralgia, and it should be used, as while it soothes and cures, it smooths out the tracks of pain and leaves the skin healthy and fair again; besides it rids the sufferer of much torment and restores a happier disposition. Good looks come only with good health, and health is found in the absence of pain.

Reciprocity.

In its simplest sense, the term "reciprocity," as used in politics, signifies that the United States will grant commercial favors to nations which grant similar favors to us in return. When another nation is willing to exempt our products from a protective or prohibitive duty, we will, in turn, exempt from taxation such of its goods or manufactures as we may need in this country for our own use.

college and was given a fellowship in 1853. He has held all the most important offices in the college, examiner, vice president and president. He was elected to the headship of the institution for three successive terms, an honor that is by no means common. In 1893 Mr. Bryant was selected to give the Hunterian oration. That year was the centenary of the death of the famous surgeon and Mr. Bryant had for his auditors the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. At the present time Mr. Bryant is the representative of the college in the general medical college. At the last election of members for the college council he was re-electd at the head of the poll.

A Dangerous Lethargy.

The forerunner of a train of evils, which too often culminate fatally, is inactivity or lethargy of the kidneys. Not only is Bright's disease, diabetes, gravel, or some other dangerous integral disease of the organs themselves to be apprehended, but dropsical diffusions from the blood, rheumatism and gout are all traceable to the non-removal from the blood by the kidneys of certain impurities. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters depurates the blood, renders the kidneys active and prevents their disease.

A Valuable Rat's Nest.

While workmen were engaged last week in demolishing a barn on the Thompson property in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., they found under the roof a rats' nest which was made of greenbacks. The money had been badly torn and chewed, but most of it, if not all, is redeemable.

Prof. Thomas F. Thompson, who now owns the property, says the money was probably hidden under the barn floor some years ago by his father, Robert Thompson, who began to act queerly in 1889, and became possessed of a fear of banks, lawyers and corporations. After that he carried his money about him. He seldom, if ever, allowed any one but himself to visit the barn. Mr. Thompson Sr. died Sept. 18, 1893, and Prof. Thompson's mother lived until December last.

By her will the estate, which consisted of $3,000 and the house and land, was to be divided equally between Prof. Thompson and his brother. The Professor took the house and his brother the money. In equity the money found in the rats' nest belongs to Prof. Thompson. The Professor is a blind musician and has composed a number of pieces.

The total amount of money in the rats' nest is thought to be about $1,000. It is in $5, $10 and $20 bills.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Vagaries of Russian Juries.

The most incredible stories are told of Russian jurymen. Thus the foreman of a jury declared he would not send a poor fellow to prison because it happened to be his (the juryman's) birthday. Another jury had agreed upon a verdict of guilty, when the church bells began to ring. They revised their verdict because a holiday had begun. A burglar was allowed to go free because the man whom he had robbed had refused to lend him money. This, in the opinion of the jury, was a direct incentive to crime.

A Free Translation.

This little story is told by Max O'Rell: "A boy, translating at sight in class, came across the phrase, 'Calmez-vous, monsieur.' He naturally translated this by 'Calm yourself, sir.' I said to him: 'Now, don't you think this is a little stiff? Couldn't you give me something a little more colloquial? For instance, what would you say yourself in a like case?' The boy reflected a few seconds, and said, 'Keep your hair on, old man.'"

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OF INDIANA DEPARTMENT.

Soaking Rainstorm Mars the Pleasure of the First Day—Gov. Mount and Staff of Forty Participate—J. S. Dodge of Elkhart Chosen Commander

Veterans in Reunion.

Richmond was crowded with the Grand Army boys in attendance upon the eighteenth annual encampment. They took the town, and nothing was too good for the visitors. The headquarters train arrived Tuesday afternoon from Indianapolis, and was met at the depot by the members of Sol Meredith Post.

The plentiful decoration of bunting received a soaking, and much of it looked badly "frazzled." Everything was thoroughly soaked, and the whole was a great disappointment to the people of the city, who had set their hearts on outdoing any city in the State that had ever entertained the encampment. The rain also caused trouble at the depot, where the people who came in were compelled to stand and wait until they could be cared for. This resulted in a jam, but the reception and transportation committees did their work well, and the depot was emptied soon after the trains had pulled out.

The official program began Tuesday evening with a meeting of the council of administration. At the Pythian Temple the Ladies of the G. A. R. had some degree work. This was previous to a public reception given at the Westcott by the local members of the W. R. C. and the Ladies of the G. A. R. There was no program carried out at this event, but it was simply for the renewing of old acquaintances and the making of new ones. At the Phillips Opera House, George H. Thomas Post of Indianapolis conferred degrees on a Richmond candidate. This was witnessed by a large number of members of the organization, visitors from various parts of the State being especially anxious to see it on account of the reputation the post has for excellent work.

The department officers of the W. R. C. and the Ladies of the G. A. R. arrived Tuesday and were received in good style.

The Ladies of the Grand Army were conspicuous in the best room in the Westcott. They are small in numbers, but they are always to the front.

Major Clarkson, commander-in-chief, arrived from Cincinnati and attended the reception. The reception was a great success. The hotel was thronged with people for two hours. Short speeches were to have been made by Gen. Wallace and Commander-in-Chief Clarkson, but there was no opportunity. The attendance was unusually large, thanks to Col. Ford of the Pennsylvania for the one-cent-a-mile rate.

The business session of the encampment began Wednesday morning. Fully 10,000 people were in attendance. In connection with this meeting was held also the fourteenth annual convention of the Woman's Relief Corps, the fourth convention of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the annual meeting of the Loyal Legion. At the business session of the Grand Army an address of welcome was made by Mayor J. S. Ostrander and a response by Gen. Lew Wallace. Commander H. M. Caylor presented his annual address, and reports submitted by the assistant adjutant general show the active membership to be 19,500. There were 300 deaths during the year and six more posts disbanded than were formed. Major T. S. Clarkson of Omaha, commander-in-chief, was present and made a brief address. Columbus secured the encampment for 1898.

The parade occurred in the afternoon, and was one of the finest in the history of the department. Gov. Mount and his staff of forty members participated. In the evening four camp fires were held, at which the chief speakers were Gen. Wallace and Gov. Mount.

The encampment came to an end Thursday. The most important matter was the election of officers, which resulted:

Grand Army—Commander, J. S. Dodge, Elkhart; senior vice, John W. Tingle, Richmond; junior vice, J. D. White, Lafayette; chaplain, Rev. A. Murphy, Greensburg; medical director, F. W. Warford, Cicero; delegate-at-large, Gen. Lew Wallace.

Woman's Relief Corps—President, Mrs. Mary Travis, Crawfordsville; senior vice, Mrs. Mary Swain, Richmond; junior vice, Mary Edwards, Shelbyville; chaplain, Mrs. Rachel Kenyon, Westfield; treasurer, Jennie Hutchinson, Crawfordsville; secretary, Blanche Gould, Crawfordsville; counselor, Mrs. Mary Sims, Frankfort; instituting and installing officer, Alice Waugh, Tipton; delegate-at-large, Kate Stormont, Princeton.

Ladies of the G. A. R.—President, Mrs. Con Graves, Lafayette; senior vice, Lucy Coleman, Elkhart; junior vice, Mary Newman, Richmond; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Frary, Warsaw; counselor, Mrs. Etta Toby, Logansport.

Loyal Legion—Commander, Gen. Lew Wallace, Crawfordsville; senior vice, Will Cumback, Greensburg; junior vice, C. E. Briant, Huntington; recorder, Col. Z. A. Smith, Indianapolis; treasurer, Horace McKay, Indianapolis; chaplain, Rt. Rev. William Corbe, Notre Dame; chancellor, Elder Cooper, Evansville; registrar, John E. Clelland, Indianapolis.

In the Grand Army a report was made condemning Montgomery's school history on account of alleged inaccuracies regarding the civil war and demanding that the State Board of Education reject it. The Ladies of the G. A. R. voted against consolidation with the W. R. C.

The State encampment is the event of the year in the life of hundreds of old soldiers. For weeks they talk of it and take the earliest train to the city where the meeting is held. This year was no exception, or, if an exception, it is that the interest was greater. The streets were early thronged with hundreds of old men wearing some military emblem, but always the badge or button of the G. A. R. Many wore corps badges. Of these there are thirty odd. To the present generation they have no significance. But the veteran who sees the acorn over the heart of a comrade knows that the wearer belonged to Thomas' old corps, the Fourteenth, and was at Chickamauga. If the insignia be a diamond with a cartridge box in the center, he knows that the wearer belonged to the Fifteenth corps. If the insignia be the trefoil the veteran knows that the wearer was with Hancock in the Second corps, and that the Nineteenth and Twentieth Indiana wore it. During the war every man knew that his corps did the most fighting; now the old man is certain that his corps put down the rebellion. The old men were as excited and gleeful as boys. They told of the past, lived in it, revised its history. But how the years are telling on them! The man who said that 20,000 of them in Indiana would go to fight for Cuba should have seen them, and taken note of the effect of years as they tried to march; but few of them could keep step to the time of music.

A fatal accident occurred at the residence of George Osborne, a farmer near Bourbon. His niece, Miss Wilson, was putting down a carpet. There was a shotgun in the room and the 9-year-old son of Mr. Osborne picked it up to carry it into another room, when it was accidentally discharged

Lucy Havens of Laporte, is said to be the largest girl of her age in the country. She is not yet out of her teens and weighs 275 pounds. She makes her home in the County Infirmary, not from choice, but because she is too unwieldy for domestic service.

Gov. Mount has telegraphed a pardon to Thomas Callihan, a life prisoner at the Michigan City prison. The pardon was issued on receipt of a dispatch from the Warden saying that Callihan was dying and the pardon was sent with the proviso that should he recover he is to be returned to the prison.

At the residence of George Osborn of Bourbon, his neice, named Wilson, was putting down carpet. There was a shotgun in the room, and the 9-year-old son of Mr. Osborn picked it up to carry it into another room, when it was discharged and the entire contents entered the head of Miss Wilson, only a few feet away, killing her instantly.

Joseph Rupert and John Wright, prominent and wealthy farmers of near Corydon, engaged in a quarrel over a small matter, during which Rupert seized a hoe and struck Wright a powerful blow on the head, crushing his skull, and causing instant death. Rupert was arrested and will be arraigned in Corydon for murder. There is talk of lynching him.

A freak of lightning visited I. N. Sanders' house in Evansville the other day. It struck the roof, bounded to the eaves, then down the corner of the house. In the parlor sat two children playing mandolins. A leg of one of the chairs was knocked out and also a leg of a table. The children were stunned. The lightning then jumped out of the house and went to the barn on a clothes line.

Seven years ago Perry Ervin of Columbus, Ohio, disappeared from home and no trace of him could be found. His parents recently learned that a young man of that name was located at Chesterfield, a small hamlet just east of Anderson. Investigation resulted in their finding their long lost son. He was working on a farm in the employ of Arthur Hudgell. He has been taken home.

Mrs. Julia Falk, a widow, of Huntington, has been awarded $5,000 damages in her action against the city of Huntington by a jury in the Wabash Circuit Court. January 25, 1895, Mrs. Falk fell on a board sidewalk at Huntington, sustaining severe injuries. This is the third heavy verdict against Huntington in damage cases that has been rendered in the last eighteen months in the Wabash Circuit Court.

The killing of Patrolman Oscar Christiansen ascribed to tramps terrorizing South Bend is now attributed to Lake Shore Detective James Mullaney of Chicago, who, with Detective Jack Carney, has been watching for car thieves. Carney admitted that Mullaney had shot Christiansen by mistake as a tramp, as the officer wore a mackintosh over his uniform. Mullaney does not deny the allegation, and is in jail under $7,000 bonds, charged with murder and manslaughter.

Harry Kistler and Edward Nolan, young men, were visiting Scott Kistler, who lives on a farm near Logansport, when a storm came up, recently. They were all seated at the table eating dinner when a bolt of lightning struck the boys. Nolan's head was split open and he died soon afterward. Kistler was terribly injured. After he was brought back to consciousness he became a raving maniac. He is not expected to live. The farm house and family were injured but slightly.

A monster gas well has been completed on the Poor Farm, four miles of Hartford City. Trenton rock was struck at the depth of 886 feet, which makes the shallowest gas well in Indiana. Its estimated output is 2,000,000 cubic feet per day—the largest gas well ever drilled in the State.

The late Senator Voohees left his mark in Greencastle while a student in old Asbury University in 1847. Many of the students used to live in the old Lynch home at the foot of W. Washington street. In an upstairs room it was the custom for many of them to record their heights. Voorhees' mark measures six feet and one inch.

Mrs. Amanda Harter of North Manchester, a widow living alone, was found dead on the floor of her bedroom. Her bible lay on a table and her spectacles were on the floor. She was in her night clothes and her face was bruised from a fall. The Coroner will likely return a verdict of death from apoplexy.

Word reached Bluffton recently that Marion Glass, who, some time ago, moved from the northern part of Wells County to Green City, Mo., is in jail charged with murder. He was recently married, and when the neighbors assembled to serenade him he raised the window and fired his revolver into the crowd, killing one man.

A SCIENTIST SAVED.

President Barnaby, of Hartsville College, Survives a Serious Illness Through the Aid of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the Republican, Columbus, Ind.

The Hartsville College, situated at Hartsville, Ind., was founded years ago in the interest of the United Brethren Church, when the State was mostly a wilderness, and colleges were scarce. The college is well known throughout the country, former students having gone into all parts of the world.

A reporter recently called at this famous seat of learning and was shown into the room of the president, Prof. Alvin P. Barnaby. When last seen by the reporter Prof. Barnaby was in delicate health. To-day he was apparently in the best of health. In response to an inquiry the Professor said:

"Oh, yes, I am much better than for some time. I am now in perfect health; but my recovery was brought about in rather a peculiar way."

"Tell me about it," said the reporter.

"Well, to begin at the beginning," said the Professor, "I studied too hard when at school, endeavoring to educate myself for the professions. After completing the common course I came here, and graduated from the theological course. I entered the ministry, and accepted the charge of a United Brethren Church at a small place in Kent County, Michigan. Being of an ambitious nature, I applied myself diligently to my work and studies. In time I noticed that my health was failing. My trouble was indigestion, and this with other troubles brought on nervousness.

"My physician prescribed for me for some time, and advised me to take a change of climate. I did as he requested and was some improved. Soon after, I came here as professor in physics and chemistry, and later was financial agent of this college. The change agreed with me, and for awhile my health was better, but my duties were heavy, and again I found my trouble returning. This time it was more severe, and in the winter I became completely prostrated. I tried various medicines and different physicians. Finally, I was able to return to my duties. Last spring I was elected president of the college. Again I had considerable work, and the trouble, which had not been entirely cured, began to affect me, and last fall I collapsed. I had different doctors, but none did me any good. Prof. Bowman, who is professor of natural science, told me of his experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and urged me to give them a trial, because they had benefited him in a similar case, and I concluded to try them.

"The first box helped me, and the second gave great relief, such as I had never experienced from the treatment of any physician. After using six boxes of the medicine I was entirely cured. To-day I am perfectly well. I feel better and stronger than for years. I certainly recommend this medicine."

To allay all doubt Prof. Barnaby cheerfully made an affidavit before
LYMAN J. SCUDDER, Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk, or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

To Drill Holes in Glass.

The Bulletin d'Apiculture states that holes can be easily drilled in glass with an ordinary drill if the spot is moistened with a few drops of a mixture composed of twenty-five parts of oxalic acid in twelve parts of turpentine.

The Nervous Americans.

Americans are a fearfully nervous people. It takes less provocation to send the average American into a nervous spasm than any other person on earth. If there is a nation which should let stimulants alone we are the nation. Yet—to say nothing of liquor, as to which we are no worse than others—we are insatiable coffee drinkers. Yes, and the practice helps fill our hospitals and penitentiaries. Why not drop coffee and drink Grain-O instead? The latter does not act on the nerves, while it does nourish, warm, soothe, cheer and build up the body. It gives you what you need and does no harm. Prepared from pure grain. Try it and you won't go back to coffee. The whole family can drink Grain-O, at night, too, if you like—then sleep soundly. Ask your grocer for a package; 15c. or 25c. each.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL.

The Lowest Rates Ever Made to an Exposition in This Country.

The Exposition in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the admission of Tennessee into the Union is not a local affair by any means. It far surpasses in extent of buildings, beauty of grounds, interesting exhibits and number of both foreign and home attractions any exposition ever held in this country, with the possible exception of the Columbian of 1893. Located as it is on the main line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad it is in the direct line of travel between the North and South, and can be visited en route with loss of but little time. The extremely low rates that have been established make it cheaper to go a little out of your way, even, to take in this great show, while its own attractions will well repay a special visit. Write Mr. C. P. Atmore, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Louisville, Ky., for matter concerning it.

WHY SO MANY REGULAR PHYSICIANS FAIL

To Cure Female Ills—Some True Reasons Why Mrs. Pinkham is More Successful Than the Family Doctors

A woman is sick; some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds something back, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and thus completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it any wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still, we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician.

It was for this reason that years ago Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., determined to step in and help her sex. Having had considerable experience in treating female ills with her Vegetable Compound, she encouraged the women of America to write to her for advice in regard to their complaints, and, being a woman, it was easy for her ailing sisters to pour into her ears every detail of their suffering.

In this way she was able to do for them what the physicians were unable to do, simply because she had the proper information to work upon, and from the little group of women who sought her advice years ago a great army of her fellow-beings are to-day constantly applying for advice and relief, and the fact that more than one hundred thousand of them have been successfully treated by Mrs. Pinkham during the last year is indicative of the grand results which are produced by her unequaled experience and training.

No physician in the world has had such a training, or has such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills, from the simplest local irritation to the most complicated diseases of the womb.

This, therefore, is the reason why Mrs. Pinkham, in her laboratory at Lynn, Mass., is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own suffering who will not take the trouble to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice.

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women establish beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

DISAPPOINTED HIGHWAYMEN.

Tramps Undertake to Relieve the Commercial Reporter of His Money.

Columbia City Post.

Three tenderfoot highwaymen committed a very grave error yesterday by attempting to hold up the Commercial reporter.

Mr. Brown was on his way to the Pittsburgh depot to meet No. 9 passenger, and just after he crossed the Blue river bridge he was stopped by three strangers, who told him to hand over his money. They were of course informed that he had none, but were not willing to accept his word. He was again commanded to "produce" whereupon Mr. Brown "produced" the contents of his pockets, which consisted of a few things necessary to the craft, which everybody knows, does not include money. Naturally enough, he had his nerve with him, and kept it, too. When one of the tramps, for such they seemed to be, took him by the lapel of his coat, he jerked loose, and started on towards the depot, the three disappointed "knights of the road" hurling the vilest expletives at him, but did not attempt to follow.

There were two more watching the proceedings from behind the stone abutments of the bridge, but they took no part in the affair.

These little holdups are getting altogether too common of late. There is a pressing need for some way of disposing of these gangs of hobos that are so frequently seen hanging around the town, and when they become so fearless as to hold up pedestrains on a public street in broad daylight, it is certainly time that something be done with them. Let a few spend a day or so cracking "nigger heads" and they won't be so numerous.

Your Vitality?

The essence of life is force. Every breath you breathe, every heart beat, every motion of your hand, takes force. The measure of force we call vitality. If this is lacking, there is loss of flesh, lack of resistive power, a tendency to catch disease easily, especially a tendency to Consumption. For low vitality nothing is better than Scott's Emulsion. It supplies force by furnishing the nourishing, strengthening elements of food in an easily digested form; enriches the blood, and builds up the system. When ordinary food is of no avail, Scott's Emulsion will supply the body with all the vital elements of life.

Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00. All druggists.

If you will ask for it we will send you a book telling you all about Scott's Emulsion. Free.

NOT LIKE THE ARAB.

Dr. Nusbaum has probably helped us out of a theological difficutlty. Some weeks ago, we said the question of the proper mode of baptism had been settled when we were a blushsng lad. At once several grave and dignified editors rose up and denied it. But one day last week it was settled our own way again. Dr. Nusbaum and his son Jay, were driving along Seventh-st, and at the bridge concluded to ford the stream. Cedar Creek has been pretty high lately, and a deep hole had been formed, into which all hands plunged with the least hesitation or formality. For an instant only the barren spot on Doc's head was visible above the waves. The water filled the pistol pocket in his coat. Now as Doc aims to do the proper thing in the proper way, one of two things must be true: Either immersion is the right form or else the Senator's recent stay in the legislature gave him an unaccountable taste for water. All escaped with a good clean, cold bath.

TRAMP NUISANCE.

Butler Herald.

Probably no town between Toledo and Chicago harbors more tramps than Butler. They are a nuisance, not only by their begging, but in other ways.

The Lake Shore company is responsible for their being landed here, for quite often as many as 25 are seen on a single freight train.

Deputy Marshal Revett reports the following number of tramps lodged in the calaboose for the past six months:

November	130
December	250
January	206
February	166
March	228
April	134
Total	1114

During the summer months, of course, not so many will be lodged in the calaboose, but there will be more on the road.

But the 1114 who staid here over night are not all, for many of them land here during the day and beg for food while the trains are being coaled. This number with the extra number who travel in warm weather will no doubt place at least 3000 tramps who annually ask Butler people for something to eat.

Traveling with Profit.

That "the dunce that goes to Rome" is not always the superior of the "dunce that stays at home" is shown by the following anecdote from Mr. A. J. C. Hare's "The Story of My Life:"

Gibson, the eminent English sculptor, used to relate with great gusto something which happened to him when he was traveling by diligence before the time of railways.

He had got as far as the Mont Cenis, and while crossing it, entered into conversation with his fellow-traveler—an Englishman, not an American. Gibson asked where he had been, and he mentioned several places, and then said, "There was one town I saw which I thought curious, the name of which I cannot for the life of me remember, but I know it began with an R."

"Was it Ronciglione?" said Gibson, "or perhaps Radicofani?" thinking of all the unimportant places beginning ith R.

"No, no; it was a much shorter name—a one-syllable name. I remember we entered it by a gate near a very big church with lots of pillars in front of it, and there was a sort of square with two fountains."

"You cannot possibly mean Rome?"

"Oh, yes, Rome—that was the name of the place."

COMMISSIONERS' SPECIAL.

A List of the Bad Orders outstanding.

The commissioners had a long, hard pull of work at the special session just ended. It was a laborious, careful inspection of books, bills and orders, to see what ones were not good. Those that are good, will of course be paid. Those that are not good will not be paid, and the parties holding them will lose them. A list of the bad orders has been made out, and the auditor ordered to furnish a correct copy to the treasurer and the latter officer is ordered not to pay them. It will be of interest to many of our readers to look over this list They are all in "Series O," or in "Series P." Most of these orders are wholly forged, but a few have been "raised," the true amount being put into the last column.

BAD ORDERS.

It is ordered by the Board, that treasurer of DeKalb county refuse the payment of the following orders as being unlawfully issued, to wit:

The total amount of these orders is $6,700.07. But this will be reduced by the accounts shown in the last column, $243.87, which the commissioners have ordered paid, as it shows the original and honest amount allowed on those bills before they were raised. Taking this $243.87 out, leaves a net loss to the holders of these orders of $6,456.20. And even this may yet be changed a little, for no doubt a few of the holders may be able to show that their orders are good. But a bulk of it will be a dead loss to them.

Mrs. Borst's bondsmen are Augustus Bartels, L. J. Miller and M. Boland. They have paid up all they are responsible for, which means the amount of bad orders chargeable to Borst, which the county has already redeemed. This amount is $2,337.03. They are still holden as bondsmen for al; that may happen during the rest of Borst's term. But as the office is now carried, they are safe from further losses. The $6,700.07 of bad orders in the above list is made up of the orders still outstanding and which the county has not redeemed.

Various newspaper reports are out, giving this or that, sums as chargeable to this or that officer, but they are unreliable. The forging and raising are so mixed up that it will be difficult to say in many cases, which did it.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any person, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store.

AN OLD LAND MARK GOING.

Mrs. Swineford is having the old frame building west of the hotel torn down, and will have it removed. It was a part of the old frame hotel that stood on the site of the present one. And we believe it was the handiwork of Samuel Ralston. The front part of the hotel was moved away, and used as a dwelling while this old building was moved back far enough to give place to the new brick structure. Now it is removed to make place for a new building to be erected soon. This new one will be for laundry, store house and similar purposes. It will be a great improvement both as to looks and usefulness. Mrs. Swineford will be counted as one of the progressive business people of Auburn.

'Squire Walter's Court.

Two cases were set for the J. P. court to-day. One was a case brought, by Mrs. Armstrong to get possession of her house, now occupied by Ed. Mason. Mr. Mason wants to stay and Mrs. Armstrong wants the house herself.

The other case is for malicious trespass, brought by Alvin Griffin against Charles Depew, both residing in Butler township. It appears that they had been having some trouble, and among other things it seems that DePew claimed Griffin had some of his, Depew's fruit trees. One night some of these trees, apples and plums, were taken up and carried away by someone, and Griffin claims DePew did it. Hence the suit. A malicious trespass is a criminal offense, and can be punished by fine or imprisonment same as any other criminal offense.

This last case is going on as we go to press.

Policemen Killed.

James H. Rose was at South Bend Tuesday and Wednesday, and came near witnessing the fight with the tramps, when Policemen Christensen was killed Tuesday night. He was on duty, watching for a train coming in from Elkhart, on which the authorities were informed there were a lot of tramps. When the train came in, two tramps jumped off and ran, and soon after that, several shots were heard, and people who came up, found the policeman lying dead, with a bullet through his head. There were other tramps on the train, and the police gathered them in, and also sent word to Elkhart, for them to arrest every hobo found there. In al they got together about 100 at South Bend yesterday. But there seems no evidence that any of the tramps killed Christensen and it is now believed he was killed by a railway detective who came in on the same train with the tramps and that in shooting at the tramps, he hit the policeman. There is another theory, and that is that the detective who came in on the train, saw Christensen and took him for a tramp, as he had on a mackintosh that concealed his uniform. The detective is under arrest for murder.

COURT.

We were not able to make a report yesterday, but the first arguments were made in the case brought by Miss Nettie Chamberlain, of Waterloo, against W. H. McIntosh to recover the value of certain county orders she bought of Mr. McIntosh, but which proved to be of those that had been forged. Her attorneys are Roby and Link and those for McIntosh are McClellan & Garwood. This morning Mr. Link's argument was made, his intention being to show that McIntosh in a general way, would be responsible for these orders, although he did not know them to be fraudulent. He read many decisions in favor of his view. Among these, was one which says, that though both buyer and seller believe the thing sold is as represented and as both think it is, yet it is not to be lost by the buyer. As, if both think a bar of gold is being transferred, and it still turns out to be brass, it must be lost by the seller. But if it is only sold as a bar of "metal," any metal will be good, but not a bar of wood. At the conclusion of Link's argument, Judge Penfield decided that the man who sells a thing of this kind must be held responsible. Judge McClellan then entered a genial denial. This will call the case up for trial.

The case of Claflin vs Louis Wolf from Fort Wayne, came up next. W. P. Breen represents the Wolf interests and Samuel L. Morris represents the interests of the mortgagees of Wolf. Claflin sues for his bill, and also asks to have set aside a mortgage which Wolf gave to certain parties. Judge Zollars and Judge Ninde are for Claflin. They say that Wolf's transfer of his goods was fraudulent. The suit is a sort of three-cornered one. W. P. Breen represents Wolf as far as the suit of Claflin for recovery of his bill concerned, and then Jamuel L. Morris represents the people to whom Wolf made the mortgage. Claflin will try to show that last year from August to October, Wolf bought heavy bills of good and represented that he had property worth $30,000 to $35,000, and owed only about $2,000. But they claim he really owed all he was worth and that he made the mortgage to avoid paying the debt.

PROBATE WORK.

A good deal of work in the settlement of estates and hearing reports of guardians has been done.

Henry L. Houser, guardian of John L. Houser heirs, is continued two years. Same for G. W. Crooks for the Sarah J. Henning heirs; same for Wilson Miller guardian of Ralph Miller; same for Jeff Boyle, guardian for the John Shull heirs.

Henry L. Holbrook was released as guardian of Lesta Simon, but continued as to Elva Simon.

James O. Blake resigned as administrator of the Daniel Yoether estate.

In the Thos. Bubb estate some property was ordered set aside for the widow.

O. C. Clark filed his final settlement report in the Adelheit Wartensleben estate and was discharged.

Mary Mark administrator of the Jacob Mark estate, was continued till next term.

THE GARRETT ELECTRIC LIGHT CASE.

The case of Frederick W. Brandt vs the Garrett Electric Light Company was disposed of by special Judge Brown of Angola to-day. The action was brought to appoint a receiver for the corporations for the alleged reasons that the officers, Wm. H. McIntyre and George W. Lackey were neglently managing the business. The court made a special finding of facts to the effect that the corporation is solvent, and practically out of debt, and that McIntyre and Lackey have employed only competent persons to operate said plant, have made repairs when required with reasonable promptness and managed the business of the corporation with ordinary care and ability, and the court refused to appoint a receiver, and rendered judgment against Brandt for costs. And he also said in his findings that Brandt had, after he ceased to be employed by said company, tapped the company's wires, attached a wire to an incandescent light in his own dwelling and used the company's electric current to run said light. As we reported at last term, Brandt had claimed the plant was not managed properly, that they had tried to freeze him out as a stockholder, and had voted themselves excessive salaries one year, aggregating $4,000.

The ten a m. train brought from Angola, W. G. Croxton, F. M. Powers, and Mr. Stiefel probably interested in the Claflin vs Wolf case. The 12-30 train brought Charles Worden from Fort Wayne, to assist Zollars & Ninde for Claflin in the case brought from Fort Wayne on change of venue. This case is still going on.

We did not finish this matter yesterday. In the Garrett Electric Light case, the judge also said the salaries taken by the officers were excessive and made several other statements in regard to the case as to both sides, but we failed to get all of them. The judge also alluded to the extra stock the officers issued from which the salaries were paid.

The preparatory steps in the Fort Wayne case closed in time to let the attorneys go home on the afternoon train. They return this morning and begin the trial proper.

This morning work on this case was resumed. There is a hard fight by able attorneys. Among other things brought up by the defense, was that by Attorney Breen, showing that Wolf did not make the statement to Claflin, that he was worth $30,000, but had told to another firm, a silk house, where he had bought goods, some statement like this in order to get the usual sixty days time on the bill Moses Steifel of New York and Louis Steifel, of Angola are here being interested in this case with the other Stiefel heirs.

Judge Adair is in court this afternoon as is also Attorney Wheaton, of Fort Wayne.

There seems to be a good deal of work for the grand jury, as witnesses are going into their room and coming out all day. There is but one change in the makeup of the jury as we had announced it, H. H. Slaybaugh could not serve, and J. McClintock took his place. The latter is foreman.

PROBATE DOCKET.

Edwin Lockwood, administrator for the Oscar Lockwood estate was continued till next term.

J. D. Leighty made a report in the James Draggoo estate, which was approved.

J. M. Stonebreaker in David Wiley estate filed final report and was discharged.

John Wilderson for the Albert Spurgeon estate, was continued one year. Same for R. Blum in the Mary A. Shaffer estate.

Thomas Wiseman for the James W. Wiseman estate, was continued to the October term. Same for D. B. Keller in the Louisa Cherry estate.

In the Eliza Blaker estate, a motion was made to set aside a former order of continuance and to ask for a settlement.

James Carnahan, for the Wm. McKinley estate, was continued to the October term.

Wm. Seeley, administrator of the Winfield Nelson estate, filed a report of sale of land. Report accepted and deed ordered made.

The case of Lewis Brown vs Mary Brown estate, asking for a sale of real estate, was dismissed. Same for George Haskin vs the Belle Lewis estate. Same in case of D. B. Batdorff vs the T. H. Kirst estate.

Jacob Walborn administrator for Alfred Hall estate reported sale of the land. A deed was ordered to be made to the purchaser.

Wm. Seeley, guardian of Glenwood Ashelman was given an order to sell some land.

James L. Perry vs Mary Somerlott estate. W. H. Leas, attorney asks to have the complaint made more specific.

F. C. Waterman, administrator of the Henry Miller estate, appears by attorney, W. H. Leas and asks privilege to sell land. J. H. Rose was appointed "guardian ad litem" and land ordered sold at public sale.

It will go... Right to the spot

Ayer's Hair Vigor will go right to that bald spot and begin to bring the hair back.

It Makes Hair Grow.

The Fort Wayne case has been going on right along, and to-day they examined several witnesses, including Louis Wolf himself and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Stiefel, of Angola. The Angola people except Mr. Croxton went home at noon. Afternoon, Mr. Wolf was again put on the stand, and was was kept there till 2:30 when court adjourned. This case is set for the last week in June. Court begins again Monday forenoon with jury cases.

The grand jury has finished its work and this forenoon was discharged for good. They have found several indictment, but these have not yet matured so as to be available for publication, except one. Dorris France, the man accused of stealing meat from Mr. Wyatt in the south part of the county, has been indicted and will be tried shortly.

The Claflin vs Wolf case must have a good deal of money in it for the several interests are represented by eight high-priced attorneys.

Barn Struck..

The barn of Wm Feagler, south of town, was struck by lightning about five o'clock Thursday evening. It was not set on fire, but some of the boards were torn off, along down the mow of hay, but the hay not ignited. A few shingles were torn from the peak and one rafter broken. Mr. Feagler's son was at the moment, just starting out of the door to go to the barn to see that the horses were all right. It turned out pretty lucky after all, as had he reached the barn, he might have been killed.

Something to Know.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centers in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very be t blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. NOTHING BUT STRAW.

The zephyrs of May took a fancy to Harry Trentman's new straw hat this morning, and Harry had to give it up and come home bareheaded. He was at the Lake Shore station when the train went south and his hat was blown off and falling under the train was again reduced to its original condition of mere straw. Harry is not bald headed and he succeeded in getting home in comfort with only the inconvenience of a few additional freckles.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, and Commerce, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

EVIDENCE UNMISTAKABLE.

Dun's Agency Points Out Where Signs of Business Activity Appear.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Unmistakable evidence of improvement is found in the general increase of commercial loans mostly for Eastern merchants or companies, though some well-known houses in the middle West appear with considerable rediscounts from the South. Not for a long time have the commercial loans been fully half the whole. The distinct change gives proof that the new business has been larger than many have supposed. The receipts of money from the interior exceed the shipments $1,500,000, most from the middle West. The exports of gold have no influence, only to signify the willingness of Russia to pay a price for the gold needed. The excess of merchandise imports to answer the demands for a half year to come, involves the greater excess of exports when the anticipatory movement ends, and the crops begin to move, which fact renders the large outgoes of gold harmless, and looks likely to and does give the country a stronger position in the international markets. Meanwhile there is a continuing increase, distinct though gradual, in the volume of business, and in the demand for products of manufacture, and, considering the time of year, in the movement of grain and produce.

Fifty Persons and Four Thousand Houses Consumed by Fire.

Victoria (B. C.) special: The steamer Empress of India, from Yokohama brings news of a fire which completely destroyed the town of Hochioji, in the silk district of Japan. Nearly 4,000 houses were destroyed, and between forty and fifty lives were lost. All the houses were frail, wooden structures, and the fire took but a short time to sweep the town, giving the helpless members of the community little chance to escape.

Gas Explosion.

Near Sugar Grove, Warren County, Pa., a test well drilled for oil was being shot with a torpedo. There was no flow of oil, but natural gas in great quantities gushed from the casing. A spectator wanted to light a cigar and the flame of his match ignited the gas. There was a terrific explosion which scattered the spectators in all directions. Postmaster Balton, Dr. Kelly, L. W. King and two other persons named King were frightfully burned about the head, face and hands. Several others were slightly burned.

A Banker Kills Himself.

George A. Taylor, who has been in the banking business in St. Louis, Mo., for thirteen years, and who was known as a man of integrity, was found dead in bed at the Normandie Hotel. An empty bottle labeled "hydro-cyanic acid" and a number of letters showed that he had committed suicide in a most deliberate and dramatic manner. The dead man clasped in his hands the picture of a woman not his wife. Nobody there knows who she is. His wife had entered suit for divorce.

Fatal Gasoline Explosion.

An explosion of gasoline at St. Louis, Mo., resulted in the death of Mrs. Ada Moher, 38 years old, her 18-months-old baby and Hugo Howard, 15 months old. Mrs. Bessie Howard and William Howard, her 5-year-old son, were probably fatally burned, while Max Gumpert and Henry Surman were badly burned in attempting to rescue the unfortunate victims. The explosion occurred in the upper rooms of 2341 Menard street, occupied by Mrs. Moher. In order to make the fire in the cook stove burn faster, Mrs. Moher poured gasoline over the wood.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A TRAIN.

Two Hundred Passengers on the Jersey Central Face Death.

The crew and 200 passengers on the Central Railroad train which left Newark, N. J., at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon had a narrow escape from an awful death. The fact that no one was injured is little short of miraculous, for the train jumped the track while crossing the Passaic river bridge, and the engine and every one of the four cars left the rails. The train was traveling at a speed of twenty miles an hour across the bridge, the upper part of which is of steel construction. It was on a straight track unbroken by switches or anything else. When the big draw of the bridge was reached there was nothing to indicate danger. It was closed and everything was apparently all right. Instead of riding over the joint of the rails as usual, however, the first wheels of the engine seemed to catch the ends of the rails on the draw. In an instant the engine left the tracks, going to the left and heading slightly toward the center of the bridge, tearing up the rails and breaking the heavy bridge ties as it went. The four cars behind it followed, and as they bumped along there was a panic among the passengers. Men shouted and clung to the car seats; women screamed and prayed. Some were thrown to the car floor by the shock, and, quickly scrambling to their feet, waited breathlessly for what for an instant everyone thought was inevitable, the dropping of the train into the river. The engineer shut off power at the first shock, however, and after traversing nearly half the length of the long draw over the ties the train came to a standstill, and in a few seconds the 200 passengers had clambered out of the cars on to the bridge.

MURDERED FIVE VICTIMS.

Ahvote, the Piute Renegade, Killed by a Sheriff's Posse.

The Kingman, A. T., sheriff's posse has returned from the chase after Ahvote, the Piute Indian murderer. They report that the body of Judge J. M. Morton was found in a cabin at Gold Bug, seven miles below Eldorado Canyon, shot through the head. Morton had lived thirty-six hours after being shot and the body was not cold when found. Ahvote was killed on Cottonwood Island in the Colorado river, thirty miles below the canyon. The bodies of five of his victims have been found. The Wallapin Indians held a big powwow and expressed a desire to go out and exterminate the southern Nevada band of Piutes. They say that for years Indians have reported the killing of whites by this band of renegades. Chief Levy-Levy offered the services of 100 warriors to the whites for the purpose of driving all the Piutes away from the Colorado river.

REAPERS SOON TO HUM.

Wheat Harvest in Oklahoma Will Begin Next Week.

Next week wheat harvesting will begin in Oklahoma. Reports from every county in the territory show that the crop will simply be enormous. In Noble, Pawnee and K counties, three of the most easterly counties of the Cherokee Strip, the wheat acreage is very large, and old wheat farmers say they will get from 40 to 60 bushels per acre. In Noble County alone there are about 25,000 acres in wheat and the stalk is nearly as high as a man's head. Good authorities place the crop in the territory at 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 bushels, and if the price will remain good the farmers will be happy.

OUTDOES SHYLOCK.

The Unspeakable Turk Shows that He Is Also Considerable of a Hog.

The Sultan of Turkey literally outdoes Shylock in dealing with defeated Greece. He demands the annexation of Thessaly regardless of the treaty of Berlin. An indemnity of £10,000,000 is also required from the little Hellenic nation. The Turkish army will continue to advance if these conditions are not accepted. Ambassadors of the powers have met to consider the perplexing attitude of the porte. The powers are not willing to concede all that is asked, and the peace of the Balkans, if not of Europe, seems now seriously involved.

CATTLE DEALER FATALLY SHOT.

Alleged Rustler Uses a Gun on Gid Summers at Ord, Neb.

Gid Summers, a cattle dealer at Ord, Neb., was fatally shot by a stranger named McBride, supposed to be a Boyd County rustler. It is alleged that McBride was sent to Ord by the Boyd County gang of rustlers to kill Summers, who had angered the members on a former occasion by informing against them. McBride is being trailed by a sheriff's posse of fourteen men through the sand hills, to which he escaped.

Has a Good Hand.

The representatives of the powers in Constantinople held a long meeting and drew up a note which will be presented to the Turkish Government as soon as one of the ambassadors receives the necessary instructions from his Government. This note does not deal with the peace conditions, but merely repeats the request for an armistice, and declares the powers will not permit Greece to be crushed. Although it is assumed in some quarters that the porte, in accordance with Eastern usages, has demanded more in order to obtain less, it is pointed out that if the Turkish Government desired to bargain it would not have formulated its conditions officially. The tone of the Turkish military officials is most emphatically against abandoning Thessaly. They argue that if Europe has been unable to make Greece evacuate the island of Crete, how will Europe be able to force Turkey out of Thessaly? Fighting between the Greeks and Turks at Domokos began shortly after noon Monday. A dispatch was received at Athens from Crown Prince Constantine, dated from Domokos at 8:30 in the morning, saying that the Turks, numbering about 30,000 men, had appeared in sight marching on Domokos, and that the attack would apparently be directed against the two wings, and especially the left wing of the Greek forces. Another dispatch from the crown prince, dated at noon, stated that the Turks had drawn nearer and were then about four and one-half miles distant.

Sarcoxie's Great Army.

The strawberry picking season opened up at Sarcoxie, Mo., with the greatest and in many respects the most picturesque gathering of people ever assembled in the community. The Sarcoxie Horticultural Association, controlling a farm of 1,400 acres in strawberries, advertised for 10,000 pickers. The circulars were responded to by fully 20,000 people, who besieged the hotels and lodging houses of Sarcoxie. The overflow was so great that thousands were forced to sleep upon the ground and prepare their meals in hastily improvised dugouts and shanties constructed of branches and leaves. The line of campers extends for ten miles up and down on either side of Spring river, the long string of tents and brightly burning campfires reminding one of army life during the exciting days of the war. Men representing almost every known avocation are represented. Some of them have seen better days, but poverty having forced them to leave the ranks of thousands of unemployed in large cities, they have sought the field as a means of keeping soul and body together.

One Thousand Present.

The most important of the May anniversaries of the northern Baptists began Wednesday morning, when President H. K. Porter, in Pittsburg, called the American Baptist Home Mission Society to order for its sixty-fifth annual meeting. About 1,000 delegates from all parts of North America were in their seats when the convention opened. After bidding the delegates welcome, briefly referring to the offer of John D. Rockefeller to give $250,000 to clear the society of debt, if a similar amount was raised before July 1, 1897, Mr. Porter said that, while the amount was not yet in hand, it would be before the date named. The report of the executive board was read by Chairman Harrison, who stated that the fiscal year ending March 31, 1897, had been the most perplexing in the history of the society. The year began with a debt of $86,245.41, and with a scale of expenditures considerably in advance of the anticipated receipts. No new work of importance was undertaken and retrenchment was made where advisable. The new plan of co-operation with the white and colored Baptists of the South, which went into effect in 1895-96, in North Carolina and Alabama, had been extended to South Carolina and Virginia with most happy and beneficial results. The number of churches aided by gifts and loans during the year was 91.

TO EXTEND POSTAL SYSTEM.

Administration Favors Policy of Establishing New Offices.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has inaugurated a new policy as to the establishment of postoffices. The last administration exercised a very conservative policy in dealing with this question, holding that there were already too many offices in operation, and that it would be better, as a general proposition, not to have the offices too close together. The present regime has determined to establish offices wherever any reasonable amount of business can be secured, with the idea of accommodating as many people as possible. While some attention is being paid to the rule that offices generally should not be closer together than three miles, this is not a fixed limit, and many exceptions have been made. The scheme is to provide mail facilities wherever there is a sufficient number of people or amount of business that would make it pay, such questions as location near a star or other route, however, of course, figuring in the matter.

BELIEVES JURORS ARE BRIBED.

Judge Wofford, of Kansas City, Makes Startling Declaration.

"It's beginning to look as if any man with money can kill another in this county and get clear." This was the startling statement made by Judge Wofford from the bench of the criminal court at Kansas City, Mo. The judge seemed to be angry when he spoke. He said afterward that he was annoyed by the fact that several persons charged with murder and other serious crimes had recently been acquitted or their trial had resulted in hung juries. He had particularly in mind the case of Benjamin Cates, indicted for the murder of Monroe Balesat, who had been tried twice and each trial had resulted in a disagreement of the jury. The judge believed, he said, that in each case jurymen were bribed.

Atrocities of Turkish Soldiers.

The Manchester Guardian publishes a dispatch from its special correspondent with the Greeks, which says: "The destitution of the Greeks in Epirus is appalling. Everything they had in the world has been burned or pillaged. The scenes in their flight were dreadful. Young girls flung themselves from the rocks and a youth shot his two sisters to save their honor. A boy who was captured by the Turks had his lips, nose and ears cut off and his eyes torn out before he was killed."

Freemasons to Celebrate.

All the high dignitaries of the order from every town and county in the United Kingdom, as well as many distinguished Masons from abroad, will be present, and the event will, it is given out, be the most brilliant in the records of English Masonry.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

THE WEEK'S DOINGS IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Comprehensive Digest of the Proceedings in the Legislative Chambers at Washington—Matters that Concern the People.

Lawmakers at Labor.

The Senate Monday passed a measure appropriating $50,000 for the relief of American citizens in Cuba, in accordance with the suggestion contained in a message from President McKinley. Several members of the House insisted upon amending to incorporate a recognition of Cuban belligerency, and the matter was hung up temporarily. The House resumed consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The Senate was occupied Tuesday chiefly by the Cuban question. Mr. Mason spoke in favor of the Morgan resolution, and Messrs. Hoar and Hale opposed. The debate was bitter. Among the bills passed by the Senate were those authorizing the construction of bridges across the Missouri River between its mouth and the mouth of the Dakota or James River, and across the Illinois and Des Plaines Rivers between the mouth of the Illinois and Joliet, Ill., and to prescribe the character, location and dimensions of the same; also for a bridge across the Red River of the North at Drayton, N. D. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was presented and agreed to. The House did nothing of importance.

Another stirring debate on Cuba occurred in the Senate Wednesday. The main speeches of the day were made by Senators Foraker, Cannon, Lindsay and Hoar. Mr. Foraker spoke in favor of a reference of the resolution to the committee, but on the general question declared his purpose of supporting the resolution recognizing Cuban belligerency when it should be reported by the committee. Mr. Cannon was bitter in his denunciation of Spanish atrocity. Mr. Lindsay declared if the information furnished by United States consuls was so shocking as to subject them to danger of assassination if their names were disclosed it was time to send warships to Cuba and to terminate all diplomatic relations with that country. It was developed in the course of a colloquy between Senators Foraker, Morgan and Vest that the State Department had withheld the names of United States consuls reporting on the serious condition of affairs in Cuba because it might lead to their murder. No action on the resolution was taken.

The Senate Thursday passed the Morgan-Cuban-belligerency resolutions, by a vote of 41 to 14, after a most exciting debate in which Messrs. Mason, Morgan, Gallinger, Hall, Fairbanks and Hoar participated. In the House the resolution appropriating $50,000 for relief of destitute American citizens in Cuba passed without a dissenting vote. An attempt to incorporate the Morgan resolution failed, but the debate was sharp and exciting. Both houses adjourned until Monday.

BOY'S PLUCK SAVES HIS LIFE.

Fred Lawson, Five Years Old, Clings to the Ties of a Railroad Trestle.

Fred Lawson, 5 years old, the son of a resident of Edgewater Park, Ill., was crossing the Northern Pacific railroad bridge at that point the other day when the sharp whistle of an express train caused him to stop short in alarm. Turning his head, he beheld a swiftly moving train approaching, the ties beneath his feet quivering as the engine thundered on to the trestlework.

Escape seemed impossible, and for a second the boy was stricken with the terror of impending death. Acting upon sudden impulse, however, he threw himself flat upon the ends of the ties outside the rails and clung desperately to the projecting timber. The whole bridge vibrated as the train sped on its way, but the child clung to his position until the last car had passed. Spectators of the incident were horrified at the boy's peril, for the projecting gear of the car axles almost brushed his back as he lay upon the ties. The danger passed, they came to his assistance and led him in triumph to his home.

CHARGED WITH FOUL CRIME.

Chicago Sausage-Maker Arrested for Having Killed His Wife.

Adolph L. Luetgert, who is in jail at Chicago, charged with having murdered his wife on the night of May 1, is president of the A. L. Luetgert Sausage and Packing Company. Should he be hanged for the crime charged against him, the wedding ring he placed upon the dead woman's finger eighteen years ago, when he swore to love, honor and protect her, will be the thing of all things which will put the noose around his neck. Acid and quicklime, it is alleged, all but made away with her frail body, but they left untouched the golden band of wedlock.

A. L. LUETGERT.

The story of the crime, as recited by the police, is replete with details of one of the most diabolical murders ever committed in this country. Luetgert is charged with having planned the killing a week in advance, and, when all was ready for the deed, with having enticed his wife from the handsome family residence at 10 o'clock that night, after which he led her into the adjacent factory and there struck her down.

The story next has her body thrown into a huge vat, into which had been dumped a barrel of quicklime and a large quantity of chemical liquid. The quicklime and the acid failed to entirely eat away the flesh from the bones and otherwise reduce the body. After a wait of an hour or two portions of the remains were raised and placed into a sausage curing recepticle, around which are steam coils capable of producing a heat of 200 degrees. Apparently the destruction was not complete enough to satisfy, and what was not wholly removed in the "smoker" was transferred to the boiler furnace in the engine room. Action here was more thorough.

MRS. LUETGERT.

The most damaging evidence is in two rings which were identified as the property of Mrs. Luetgert. One of these was the wedding ring, the other a plain guard ring of gold. The finding of the charred bones was good evidence, but not strong enough to warrant an arrest. Afterward, however, the vat was examined and then came the climax. Close to the bottom of the vat is a draining hole, and after the body had been removed the murderer evidently turned the hose in and overflowed the receptacle, withdrawing the plug from the hole near the bottom, thinking that the contents would go to the sewer. The mixture thus diluted with water ran off, but enough remained in the bottom of the vat to betray its character. Upon examination the sediment and the rings were found.

The attorneys for the defense brand the whole story as a fabrication. The rings alleged to have been found in the vat in which the police say Mrs. Luetgert was murdered are declared not to be the property of Mrs. Luetgert, and Luetgert asserts that bones were often burned in the furnaces under the boilers. The prisoner states also that he used caustic soda in the vats in the preparation of his sausage, and that this explains the presence there of alkali. The supposition of the defense is that Mrs. Luetgert left home while in a demented state, and they claim that her disappearance has been seized upon by Captain Schaack of the police department to make a "record" for himself.

Suit for $25,000 damages has been entered by Mary Siemerling, Luetgert's house servant, for false imprisonment in connection with the case; charges of misconduct in office have been preferred against several police officials, and the end is not yet.

MONETARY DELEGATES IN PARIS

Messrs. Wolcott, Stevenson and Payne Reach the French Capital.

The United States bimetallic commission, consisting of Senator Edward O. Wolcott of Colorado, ex-Vice-President Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois and Gen. Charles J. Payne of Massachusetts, has arrived in Paris. The commission will not take any steps officially until Gen. Horace Porter, the new United States ambassador to France, has presented his credentials. Then, through Gen. Porter, the commission will ask President Faure for an audience. Upon that occasion the commissioners will present their credentials to the president and will await the appointment by the French Government of special delegates with similar powers to their own, with whom they will confer.

The United States commissioners will remain in the French capital for about a month and will then proceed to London. According to the French premier, M. Meline, there is not the remotest likelihood of France taking the initiative in calling a monetary conference until Great Britain agrees to take part in such a conference if it is called.

He was well known throughout Indiana, being a member of the Seventeenth Indiana in the late war. Mr. Massey was a wealthy citizen.

J. H. Tooley of Anderson, has just unearthed an interesting Stradivarious violin which has a pedigree dating back to when it was turned out by Antonius Stradivarius in Milan, Italy, in 1721. He found it in the country, and the owners had little conception of its worth, though they could trace it back with perfectly clear records. It has a wonderful sweet tone.

The Clark well, twelve miles south of English, which was bored more than 30 years ago, is spouting oil. Mr. Clark, the proprietor, says that the jet is as large as might be thrown by a half inch hose and is thrown twenty or thirty feet high. An odd feature is that the flow occurs only at about 4:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. and lasts only about a half hour.

Mrs. Simon Weaver of Terre Haute, had a dream the other night, that her husband died. She was visiting in the country, and when morning came she walked straight to the city, eight miles away. There she found her husband dead in his home. He had committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. He had been out of work and was thoroughly disconsolate.

Charles W. Kersey, aged 19, son of Levi Kersey, shot his father at the home of his mother, twelve miles north of Indianapolis. It is thought that he cannot live. The father is divorced from his wife, and he went to her home and kicked the door in. His son resented this and the old man hit him with a club. The son then got the revolver and fired. Kersey went to New Augusta and gave himself up.

The Governor has appointed John Quincy Thomas of Pushville, and Orin Perry of Indianapolis, as a commission to prepare plans and estimates for a monument to Pleasant J. Hackleman, the only Indiana General killed during the war. He was shot while leading his troops in a charge at Iuka, Miss. The work of the commission will be submitted to the General Assembly of 1899.

Thayer Thompson, aged 7, and Ferris Lancaster, aged 5, were taken in charge by the police of Anderson for postoffice robbery. They were caught in the act of rifling scores of letters which they had stolen from combination lock postoffice boxes which had been left unlocked and were held shut only by a spring. Many box holders have been accustomed to do this. The boys were not high enough to reach above three rows, but in the list were the bank boxes. Several drafts and checks, one for $100, were found. The boys' ages will protect them from prosecution.

After being gone three days and nights, Mrs. John Denton of Huntington, was found in a wood. She mysteriously disappeared from home. She is a raving maniac now, and was hiding in the top of a fallen tree. During the three days she had been there without food. She may die.

William Phillips of Jeffersonville, aged 43, married, was dragged under the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern passenger southbound by a runaway horse and killed. He was frightfully mangled. A companion, Walter Creamer, was badly injured. Phillips was an engineer on the Pennsylvania road.

At Madison, a new city ordinance forbidding the use of cigarettes on the streets or in public places has gone into effect. It also imposes a license of $150 a year for the sale of the same by any dealer. A rigid curfew law will be enforced, children under the age of sixteen being forbidden the streets after 8 p. m. unless accompanied by parents.

Albert Moffitt, a wealthy farmer, residing near Noblesville, was instantly killed in a runaway, while attempting to check the speed of his team by holding to the bridle. He fell on the brick pavement and the wheels passed over his head, crushing his skull and causing instant death. He was 25 years old and leaves a wife and three small children.

THE LAST OF HIS REGIMENT.

His face is bronzed by summer's suns,
His locks are white as winter's snows,
His form is bent, his eye is dim,
For war and age have left their woes.

Yet bravely steps the veteran,
And proudly beats the old, worn drum.
To him no music half so sweet
In days gone by or days to come.

No comrades march with him to-day
Along the narrow village streets,
The last of all his regiment,
No soldier face his vision greets.

In trenches rude their bodies lie,
And glitt'ring stars lone vigils keep,
No more the bugle call to arms
Shall rouse them from their dreamless sleep.

From Appomattox to the Gulf,
The Mississippi to the main,
'Neath Southern skies, in alien soil,
They rest in long surcease from pain.

The rough, gray stone with legends brief
Reveals their home beneath the sod;
And some, perchance, lie with the dead
Unknown to man, but known to God.

To others happier fate awards
Repose beneath their native clime;
And now the mounds above their dust
Take on the green of glad springtime.

By loving eyes their graves are watched,
And loving hands fond off'rings bring
Of roses, lilies, violets,
No fairer flowers deck bier of King.

But while no comrades keep him step,
The veteran treads not alone
The way that to God's acre leads Past fruitful fields with daisies strewn.

A lad of soldier ancestry
Strides by his side—a drummer true—
And troops of happy children bear
Their tribute to the Boys in Blue.

With heads uncovered, bended low,
They pay the meed to valor due.
The simple prayer, the glist'ning tear
Proclaim their faith and love anew.

The last of all his regiment,
All honor to this passing type.
The last of that Grand Army host
For Death's grim harvest soon shall ripe.

DECORATION DAY.

A Story for the Little Ones.

ONE bright Sunday morning in April, many years ago, the telegraph wires could be heard repeating the same things all over the land. "Tic, tic; tic-tic; t-i-c, tic, tictic; tic, t-i-c, tic; t-i-c; tic, t-i-c; t-i-c, t-i-c, tic," they called out, and the drowsy telegraph operators sat up in their chairs as if startled by the words the wires were saying. Any looker on could have seen that something dreadful was being told by the wires. Even the bravest among the operators trembled.

Then came the rapid writing out of the fearful words that the slender wires had uttered, the hurrying to and fro, and messenger boys were seen flying to the great newspaper offices and the homes of the mayors of the cities, and to the churches where the people were already beginning to assemble. For the deep-toned Sabbath church bells high up in the steeples had been ringing out their welcome to all, even the strangers in their midst. "Bim, baum, bim," they sang, which everybody knew meant, "Come to church, dear people. Come, come, come." And the people strolled leisurely along toward the churches. So one family after another filed into their pews, while the organist played such soft, sweet music that everybody felt soothed and quieted by it.

In many of the churches the prayer was over, the morning hymn had been sung, when a stir and bustle at the door might have been noticed, as the messenger boys, excited and out of breath, handed their yellow envelopes to the ushers. First one and then another read the message, and from some of them escaped in a hushed whisper the words, "Oh, God! Has it come to this?"

And all looked white and awe-struck. The head usher hurried tremblingly down the aisle, and, without waiting for the clergyman to finish reading the announcement of the week, laid the telegram upon the pulpit desk.

The clergyman, somewhat surprised, glanced at the paper, stopped, gasped, holding on to the desk, as if he had been struck a blow by some unseen hand. The congregation knew that something terrible had happened, and their hearts seemed to stop beating as they leaned forward to catch his words.

"My people," said he, in a slow, deliberate tone, as if it were an effort to steady his voice, "I hold in my hand a message from the President of the United States." Then his eyes dropped to the paper which he still held, and now his voice rang out clear and loud as he read, "Our flag has been fired upon. Seventy-five thousand troops wanted at once. Abraham Lincoln."

During the next two weeks men came home, hurried and excited, to hunt up law papers, or to straighten out deeds, saying in constrained tones to the pale-faced women, "I will try to leave all business matters straight before I go." There were solemn consultations between husbands and wives, which usually ended in the father's going out, stern faced and silent, and the mother, dry-eyed, but with quivering lips, seeking her own room, with eyes that showed she had been weeping. There were gatherings in the town halls and in the churches and school houses all over the land. The newspapers were read hurriedly and anxiously.

And when little Robert looked up earnestly into his grandmamma's face and asked, "Why does mamma not eat her breakfast?" grandmamma replied, "Your papa is going away, my dear—papa is going to the war, and may never come back to us. But you and I must be brave about it, and help him get ready." And if Robert answered, "Why is he going to the war? Why does he not stay at home with us? Doesn't he love us any more?" then mamma would draw her boy to her and, putting her arms around him, and looking into his eyes she would say, "Yes, my darling, he loves us, but he must go. Our country needs him, and you and I must be proud that he is ready to do his duty." Then Robert would go to his play, wondering what it all meant, just as you would have wondered if you had been there.

Then came the terrible, terrible battles, more awful than anything you ever dreamed of. Men were shot down by thousands, and many who did not lose their lives had a leg shot off, or an arm so crushed that it had to be cut off. Still they bravely struggled on. It was for their beloved country they were fighting and for it they must be willing to suffer, or to die. Then the men who had not been killed or who had not died of their sufferings came marching home again, many, alas, on crutches, and many who knew that they were disabled for life. But they had saved their country. And that was reward enough for heroic hearts. Though many a widow turned her sad face away when the crowd welcomed the returning soldiers, for she knew that her loved one was not with them, and many little children learned in time that their dear fathers would never return to them.

Then by and by the people said: "Our children must grow up loving and honoring the heroic men who gave their lives for their country." So in villages and towns, and cities, monuments were built in honor of the men who died fighting for their country. And one day each year was set apart to keep fresh and green the memory of the brave soldiers, and it has been named "Decoration Day," because on this day all the children, all over the land, are permitted to go to the graves of the dead soldiers and place flowers upon them.

Birth of the Day.

It comes to us of to-day like a strange, tragic dream, this memory of a war of more than three decades ago, when the sound of shot and shell rent the silence and peace of the beautiful summer days, and there was a vacant chair in the home of every patriot in the land. Then the soldiers were divided into two factions, the boys in blue and the boys in gray. Now they are united in one band—those that are left—and they are all boys in gray. Time has given them their uniform.

The blue was mingled with the skies,
And we were boys in gray.

Southern women gave to our country its first Memorial Day—the women of Alabama, who paid tribute to their soldier dead on April 26, 1866.

The first formal services in commemoration of the soldiers who gave their lives for the Union was on May 5, 1868, by order of Gen. John A. Logan, who was at that time commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The first State to take legislative action on Memorial Day was New Jersey, and New York was the first State to make it a legal holiday. Congress adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the men who had died fighting their country's battles.

On the first occasion when the order was general for an observance of the day, which was that proclaimed by Gen. Logan, there was a great display of soldiery, and most pathetic scenes were witnessed, for the scars of war were yet fresh. At Arlington, where 15,000 soldiers reposed, Gen. Garfield—afterwards President of the republic—made an oration that melted all who heard it to tears. It was not only a magnificent tribute to the dead, but a classic and valorous lesson of encouragement to the living. It was on that occasion that he uttered this grand peroration:

"If silence is ever golden, it must be here beside the graves of 15,000 men, whose lives were more significant than speech, and whose death was a poem the music of which can never be sung."

Men in Gray Predominate.

"It has often been said of the veteran soldiers, when they have appeared on parade, as upon Decoration Day," said an observer, "why, how many young men there are among them! but that cannot be said many years longer. There are still to be seen in the ranks numbers of men comparatively young in appearance, but I was struck on last Decoration Day by the number who have now grown gray."

MAY LEAD TO A WAR.

SENATE PASSES THE MORGAN BELLIGERENCY RESOLUTION.

Forty-one Members Vote Yea and but Fourteen Say Nay—Success of Measure Brings Cheers from the Galleries—President's Policy Defined.

Decisive Senate Vote.

The long and exciting debate on the joint resolution recognizing the existence of a state of war in Cuba and declaring that strict neutrality shall be maintained by the United States passed the Senate by a decisive vote of 41 to 14 at a late hour Thursday afternoon. The announcement of the vote was received with tumultuous applause. The resolution as passed is as follows:

"Resolved, etc., That a condition of public war exists between the Government of Spain and the government proclaimed and for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States of America shall maintain a strict neutrality between the contending parties, according to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory of the United States."

Following is the vote on the final passage of the resolution:

The following pairs were announced, the first-named Senator being in favor of the resolution and the second opposed to it:

Faulkner with Elkins.
Harris (Tennessee) with Morrill.
McEnery with Platt.
Daniels with Gray.
Allen with Platt of Connecticut.
Vest with Nelson.
Roach with Perkins.

Analysis of the Vote.

An analysis of the vote shows that the affirmative was cast by eighteen Republicans, nineteen Democrats and four Populists, and the negative by twelve Republicans and two Democrats.

Prior to the final vote the motion of Senator Hale to refer the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Relations was tabled—yeas, 34; nays, 19. Mr. Fairbanks of Indiana proposed a substitute providing that the President extend the good offices of the United States to Spain toward securing an end to the conflict and the ultimate independence of the island. This, too, was tabled—yeas, 35; nays, 15. Then followed the adoption of the original resolution.

The voting occurred after an exciting debate participated in by Senators Thurston of Nebraska, Elkins of West Virginia, White of California, Fairbanks of Indiana, Hale of Maine, Spooner of Wisconsin and Gorman of Maryland. Mr. Thurston spoke of the bloody contest which had raged during the last two years. There was ample information as to its extent, from American correspondents who had written their dispatches on the field of battle, from the reports which filled the records of the Senate and in the archives of the State Department. Every man in the United States ought to be ready for action on this question at this time, and if any Senator was not sufficiently informed Mr. Thurston commended him to the consideration of his constituents.

RIOT IN A LEGISLATURE.

Wild Scene of Disorder in the Illinois House.

Bloodshed and rioting occurred Thursday in the Illinois House. An attempt was made to pull Speaker Curtis from the chair. P. J. Meaney was hit on the cheek bone with an inkwell which was hurled directly at the Speaker, and which would have struck Mr. Curtis but for the fact that Meaney was in the way and received the missile instead. An ugly gash was cut in Meaney's face, from which the blood flowed freely. It was the stormiest scene witnessed in the Legislature for many years.

The trouble started immediately after Speaker Curtis called the House to order at 3 o'clock and lasted for an hour and a quarter. So great was the disturbance that it was heard plainly at the Leland Hotel, six blocks away. During the turmoil bill files were smashed by pounding the desks, waste baskets were hurled indiscriminately across the hall, members shouted themselves hoarse, and a free-for-all fight was prevented only by the action of cool-headed Democratic members.

The excitement was at fever heat during all the session, but reached a culmination point when Mr. Novak, who had been shouting for recognition for an hour, left his seat and proceeded up the aisle to the Speaker's desk. The Republicans, thinking it was his purpose to drag Speaker Curtis from his chair, made a rush to defend the Speaker. Mr. Novak reached the Speaker's platform, and, in the midst of a war of words with the presiding officer, he was seized by the coat collar by Mr. Needles and dragged from the platform. This was the signal for a rush from the Democratic side to defend Mr. Novak, and in the scramble that ensued there was a general "mix-up."

Mr. Galligan attempted to use a wooden mallet which he had procured. Galligan, with mallet in hand, made a leap for the Speaker. He was angry at being intercepted, and tried to use his mallet on the heads of those about him, but was prevented. He was dragged down, with a half-dozen members on top of him in the aisle. It was here that the cool-headed members succeeded in partly restoring order by separating the combatants and getting the members to take their seats.

THE TURKISH "PLENIPO."

Sultan's Minister at Washington Is a Notable Figure Just Now.

Moustapha Bey is the man who will tell Secretary Sherman all he is entitled to know about the war between Greece and Turkey. Moustapha is the Turkish "plenipo" at Washington, and he is a notable figure in the capital. No matter what official society may think about the unspeakable Turk at Constantinople, it takes very kindly to his suave and polished representative in America. The Turkish minister had a great run with the ladies when he first came to Washington. Anxious inquiries were made at once as to the number of his wives, and the relief was great when he swore by the beard of the prophet that he had but one. Like all the Turkish representatives in America, Moustapha has left his wife, or wives, and his family at his home, a great palace on a high hill overlooking the city of Constantinople, surrounded by tropical gardens and vineyards. When at home he is a practical, busy man, and devotes much of his time to affairs of state, in which he is an adept, and to the education of his children, all of whom are now grown to womanhood and manhood. Moustapha is descended from a long line of noble ancestors, and his family has been prominent in the affairs of the Turkish Government for many generations. He is wealthy, able, diplomatic, and does not resemble the "villainous Turk" of tradition.

It is reported that the British cruiser Powerful, said to be the largest cruiser in the world, will shortly be sent on a full-power run to New York and back, in emulation of the run of the United States cruiser Columbia.

THE AIRSHIP THAT WENT UP AT NASHLILLE.

BARNARD, OF AIRSHIP FAME.

The Man Who Made the Successful Trip at the Nashville Fair.

Prof. Arthur Wallace Barnard, physical director of the Y. M. C. A. at Nashville, Tenn., has drawn to himself the attention of the scientific men of all the world by his successful trip in an airship at the Nashville exposition. It may be that he has at last solved the mystery of aeronautics. In a ship of his own construction he journeyed over twenty miles through space and finally landed at a point twelve miles from where he started. During this time, he says, he had absolute control of his machine and steered it at will. The ship has an air chamber shaped like a cigar and is 46 feet long by 18 feet in diameter. It is made of silk and cotton and filled with hydrogen gas. This chamber is confined in a network of small rope which holds the metallic frame work and aeroplanes underneath. The seat is made on the order of a bicycle frame, and from this the operator controls the wings, or aeroplanes, on either side. The two propellers, or screws, extend in front of the operator, acting on the principal of an auger. In guiding the airship the operator moves the screw from the right to left in the direction he wishes to go and ascends or descends by raising or lowering the side wings. Prof. Barnard does not claim all the credit for his invention, as he is using, by permission, several features employed by other experimenters in aeronautics.

PROF A. W. BARNARD.

Barnard is a native of Massachusetts and is 32 years old. Since his 23d year he has been engaged in gymnastic work for the Y. M. C. A. He was first director at Albany, N. Y., and since then has been located in Tonawanda, N. Y., Auburn, Me., Pawtucket, R. I., and Nashville. He is a noted athlete, as well as a mechanical genius.

AN UNLAWFUL AGREEMENT.

New York's Highest Court Makes an Important Decision.

Employers and workingmen throughout the country will be much interested in the decision of the Court of Appeals of this State in the case of Curran vs. Galen, involving the legality of an agreement between a brewery association and an assembly of the Knights of Labor, whereby no brewery belonging to the association was to employ any person who did not belong to that particular assembly or to retain any one for more than four weeks in its service who should decline to join that labor organization. Such an agreement has been pronounced unlawful in all the courts. The case was originally heard in March, 1893, at Special Term in Monroe County, by Judge William H. Adams. The complainant was Charles Curran, who charged the Ale Brewers' Association of Rochester and the Brewery Workingmen's Local Assembly of the Knights of Labor there with conspiracy to prevent his obtaining employment. It appeared that Curran had been employed by a brewery belonging to the association, that he declined to join the Knights of Labor, and that he was consequently discharged by reason of the agreement already mentioned. Justice Adams held that the defendants had no right to combine for the purpose of depriving a person of his right to labor simply because he did not consent to join a specified labor union. His judgment was affirmed upon the opinion written by him, by the General Term of the fifth department in March, 1894; and that affirmance has not been upheld by the Court of Appeals.

JOHN W. KEELEY.

Man Who Invented a Motor that Didn't Mote.

John W. Keeley has dug up his motor again, and Philadelphians smile when they are told that soon the elevated trains in New York will be operated altogether by power furnished by the inventor's wonderful mechanism. W. J. Fransioli, the general manager of the Manhattan Road, has seen Mr. Keeley's motor turn a big engine at very high speed, and is quite sure his cars can be operated by it. This is probably the fifth or sixth time that Mr. Keeley has convinced capitalists that he has discovered a wonderful secret. He began years ago in his laboratory in Philadelphia to find some way of applying his "vibration" to machinery, and every now and then a grand announcement is made that the motor is certain to mote, but thus far these announcements have never been realized. Mr. Keeley is now growing old. He is past 60, and his motor has been before the public since 1872. At least it was in that year that he announced his discovery of a new force, and the motor itself was put on public exhibition in 1874. Capitalists who saw it were so impressed with it that $100,000 was raised to enable him to proceed. Since then nearly $500,000 has been expended in experiments, but without tangible results. In 1888 Mr. Keeley was confined in jail for contempt of court for refusing to tell the secret process by which he produced many most remarkable results in the presence of experts, but up to the present time that secret is known to no one but himself. The motor which he exhibited to the New York men is no larger than a man's stovepipe hat.

JOHN W. KEELEY.

Bogus Butter in France.

The French Chamber of Deputies has passed a very stringent measure by which it is made illegal for dealers in butter to keep oleo for sale, or vice versa; the fraudulent compositions are only to be sold at places especially assigned by the municipality of each town. Moreover, all boxes, firkins, or other packets containing oleo, must bear the word "margarine" in large characters, and a full description must be given of the elements employed in making the composition. In the retail trade all oleo must be placed in bags, on the outside of which are to be found a description of the article with the name and address of the vendor.

Full authority is given to the inspectors to enter butter factories and shops, and take specimens for analysis; in the event of the specimens being found pure the cost will be borne by the state. The penalties for an infraction of the new law will vary from six days to three months' imprisonment, and a fine of from twenty to one thousand dollars, while in the event of the same person being convicted a second time within a year the maximum fine will also be imposed. There will also be a heavy fine imposed on persons who place hindrance in the way of the inspectors.

Lord Leicester's Record.

The celebration of the Queen's diamond jubilee will bring many veterans to the front, but there can scarcely be one more interesting than Lord Leicester. His statement, according to the Birmingham Post, that he acted as page to the Duke of Sussex at her Majesty's coronation can be supplemented by the fact that he is probably the only man who, having himself lived through the longest reign in British history, can claim that his father lived through the next longest, that of George III.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana Office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..... MAY 27, 1897

A STATEMENT BY THE STEUBEN COUNTY AUDITOR.

Angola Magnet.

Editor Magnet:—In view of certain current falsehoods which have been circulated, I desire to make the following brief statement:

A few weeks ago I was ordered by Mr. L. A. Hendry, to call the board of County Commissioners into session in order that they should act upon a petition for the inspection of the public records of Steuben county, by a competent expert accountant. He refused to exhibit any petition, and not being aware of any statute which allowed me to call the board, I declined to do so. I then asked Mr. Hendry whom he wanted to examine the books. He replied, W. H. Ernst, the man who had recently completed the examination in DeKalb county.

I communicated to the commissioners individually the desire of a number of persons, that the books be audited, and also the statement of Mr. Hendry as to the person desired. They entered into negotiations with Mr. Ernst and made a contract with him as has heretofore been stated in the public press.

On Tuesday forenoon, L. A. Hendry, John Andelson, Chas. Orton, Andrew Craig, Hod VanAuken, Frank Jackson, and several others came into my office, bringing a man with them whom they represented as being an "expert," and demanded access to the books of the office for the purpose of making an "examination" of the same.

We were, and are engaged in making the annual settlement and could not at this time allow any persons to take possession of the office. I so informed the gentlemen. On Wednesday morning a written instrument was read to me, purporting to be signed by Judge Penfield, stating that ther was no impropriety in allowing reputable citizens to examine any proper record for a proper purpose. I do not have any copy of this instrument and can only give my recollection of its contents.

I am charged by law with the preservation of the public records. I am in favor of a full and complete examination of the public records to ascertatin the truth. I will assist and faciliate in every proper manner such examination. I have used my influence to secure the employment of the man named by Mr. Hendry to me for that purpose and such an examination will begin about June 1st. I understand the law to be as follows:

"No person has the right to examine or inspect the records of the office except in his—the auditor's—presence, and under his observation. If he may do this for a minute, the clerk—auditor—is not keeping them safely and secuely. A blot or a scratch may be made in a minute that may alter a record. A leaf may be extracted in a minute; * * * If this may be done, except under the clerk's immediate inspection, no record can be safely kept. If the complainant has the right to do what he claims, he has the right to keep the clerk's attention and the auditor's, from minute to minute, from day to day until his work is finished. He has the right to the services of the public officer for months together without pay; for not only this law, but every principle of propriety requires that no person shall inspect the books except under the watchful supervision of the officer."

The records of the auditor's office are safe. They will not be falsified with my consent. They can be examined for proper purposes and at proper times. I believe that the board of County Commissioners who are honorable men, at least, can be trusted for the present, and I do not admit the authority of the persons named to direct me.

JAMES B. WATKINS,
Auditor of Steuben Co.

THE EXAMINATION OF THE COUNTY RECORDS.

Angola Magnet.

The Magnet does not believe that there is a desire on the part of any one in Steuben County to prevent a thorough examination of the county records. Many persons thought an examination unnecessary; but there was no attempt, so far as we can learn, to prevent it. We have nothing to say against the gentlemen who have attempted to begin an examination separate from the one ordered by the Commissioners, save that we think them to have erred in judgment. It is the duty of a county officer to keep his records inviolate. For a brief examination of the books it is proper that any citizen should be given the courtesy of the office; but it seems quite plain to us that no one has the right to demand any such privilege for an examination which will require weeks and perhaps months. Certainly the work of the office would, by such an examination, be obstructed. And no such detail work should be entered upon save by order of the proper authorities.

Section 7831 of the Revised Statutes, 1894, reads as follows:

"All the books, accounts, vouchers, papers and documents touching the business or property of the county shall be carefully kept by the Auditor, and open to the inspection of any person."

We do not know that this statute has ever been construed by the Supreme Court. But we venture the assertion that the ruling would not be such as to allow the weeks and months of inspection that would be necessary in this case. The intention is that such examination shall be under proper supervision, so that the interests of no one may be jeopardized. And there is a ruling to the effect that the Commissioners may employ persons for a thorough examination.

If any believe to the contrary, they have legal remedy. The law is, that a county officer may by mandate be compelled to perform an official duty.

It is greatly to be regretted that so much controversey has arisen over the matter of the investigation. If Mr. Ernst were a man to be bought by any one fearing exposure, four DeKalb county men would not now be in the penitentiary. We wonder if the gentlemen asking for an investigation without the ordering of the proper authorities are aware of the fact that it has been this week, asserted by several honorable citizens that there are men clamoring for such an investigation who would not scruple to make way with papers of the utmost importance if they should fall into their hands. The Magnet desires an investigation, but desires one fair throughout. County officials and ex-county officials must be protected in all their rights. The taking of some voucher from the office of the County Auditor might result in the sending ot an innocent man to the penitentiary. And already, without trial, people in some parts of the county have landed some of our public servants at the doors of the penitentiary. Let the investigation proceed; but let it be in unquestionable form. Thus and thus only can justice be done.

We have no doubt that the gentlemen contending for this unofficial investigation want it fair for all. Some, it is well known, think differently as to a few who are clamoring for it. We also believe that the Commissioners and the Auditor desire fairness. And there is no reason why a man should not be hired by these parties to act with the expert employed by the Board This would in all probability be allowed by the Commissioners. if such request should be properly made.

Tttle Called.

C. W. Tuttle, of Columbia City, has been appointed by the president, as commissioner of the Territory, of Alaska. The pay is both in fees for service rendered individuals and a salary by Uncle Sam, and altogether will amount to about $5,000 Tuttle was formerly a democrat and as such, was at times honored by his party. But our recollection is that these honors did not come quite as thick and fast as Tuttle wanted, and so he sidetracked on a "reform" local ticket in 1874. Afterwards he went over body and pants into the republican camp. He has made himself solid with Senator Fairbanks, and now put at a good job caring for our great Northwestern refrigerator, Alaska. He will likely find the pickings good up there, as the many new gold mining interests will bring in plenty of business and capital.

BURNED 700 PHONES.

A queer fire is reported from Fort Wayne. It happened Sunday morning at about six o'clock. and the trouble was caused by a live wire from the electric light plant coming in contact with the wires of the Home Telephone Co. In some way, that does not yet appear plain, the result was the burning out of nearly half the wires of the Home Telephone Co. The number spoiled is placed at 700, which of course is a great loss and for a few days will greatly interfere with the telephone service.

BURGLARS AGAIN

Not less than three dwellings were entered by burglars last evening They got into Al Zerwis' house, about 3:30 this morning, when it was light enough to see them, and had fairly gone through things when Al. woke up and went for them. But they escaped. They took his wife's gold watch and chain, and Al's pants in which were about $3:50 in cash, and his keys. He afterwards found the pants at corner of Railroad and 6th-sts. but the pockets were empty. Will Schaab's house, was also entered at about 2 a. m. Mrs. Schaab heard them, but waited a little to be sure what was the trouble. When satisfied it was burglars, she wakened Will, who got his revolver and waited for the man to come up stairs, and as he came up, Will gave a war whoop, that sent the fellow flying. He had left all the doors open so that it was easy to escape. When Will got out on the street, no one was in sight. The thief had opened the back door by inserting a small pair of pincers and turning the key. The key shows the marks made by this tool. Nothing was taken except some bread. He also broke into S. C. Snyder's and got some milk, but nothing else. There is no clue so far. We learn, also that the dwellings of Mr. Roby and Mr. Scoville were entered, but nothing taken.

COURT.

The case brought by Rev. Mr. Pearce against Mr. Murray, of the Garrett Herald on a charge of "provoke" came up yesterday forenoon. It will be remembered that we made a note of this case at the time it came up before 'Squire Walborn.

Pearce had gone to the office of the Herald to pay for some printing he had got them to do. There was a difficulty about the price, and sharp words ensued. Then Mr. Pearce sued both the editor, Mr. Miner and his assistant Mr. Murray. The case was thrown out by 'Squire Walborn, as the complaint was defective. Now it came up in the circuit court, and made a jury trial. The testimony was heard, and the pleas, and at about four p. m., the jury retired. In about an hour they "came in" and said the defendent was not guilty. We suppose the other case, that against Miner will not now be called up at all.

John S. Potts is the executor of the will of the late John Potts, his uncle. There is considerable property, the most of which will go to John S. Potts, who has for many years cared for Mr. and Mrs. Potts. The latter is yet living, but is unable to help herself. Mrs. Albert Buchanan, the only child receives $600. J. E. Buchanan son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Buchanan, receives $200. The rest of the estates goes to John S. Potts as before noted.

The preliminary work for the Fair trials has been done and the trial will come on at an early date.

They are now working at the Fairfield case of Baltz vs Rowe.

The grand jury indicted Frank Shull on a charge of attempting to poison his wife, and to-day he was arrested and put in jail. He will make a nefense, that she ill treated him, we are told. He was put in jail yesterday without bail to await trial. His wife is Carrie Kelley, a step daughter of Dr. James Adams.

TERRIBLE!

Four Workmen Crushed Under Tons of Falling Earth.

AT FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

All the Unfortunate Leave Familie in Poor Circumctances.

A horrible accident occurred at Ft. Wayne shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Four men were killed by the caving in of a trench on St. Joe boulevard. The cave-in was sudden and unlooked for, and although the poor fellows saw the earth toppling over their heads, thep were unable to get out of the way, and were buried under tons of earth. They were employes of the city water works department, and all of them leave families in poor circumstances. The dead are:

JAMES CHRISTIE, aged 40, dead when taken out.

ALBERT DENNIS, aged 35, dead when taken out.

ALEXANDER BROWN, aged about 40, dead when rescued.

PATRICK SHEEHEY, aged 39, died at Hope hospital.

The noise of the cave was heard by all the workmen, and in a few seconds twenty-five men, with shovels and picks began the work of rescue. In about ten minutes the four men were taken out. Christie, Dennis and Brown were speechless and it was seen in a moment that they were dead. Sheehey opened his eyes and muttered a few incoherent words. Brown's head was crushed, and the faces of all were covered with blood, which oozed from their mouths and noses, forced out by the awful pressure of the earth over them.

The section of the trench which caved in was about fifty feet in length. The cause of the fall of earth is a mystery, as the earth was hard and unyielding. Other parts of the trench are through soft sand, where such a cave might have been expected, but at this point the men had to dig through hard soil, blue clay and solid earth mixed.

The horrible fatality cast a shadow of gloom over the entire community. What makes the results of the affair all the more pitiful is the fact that all the men had families, and were in poor circumstances. James Christie leaves a wife and three daughters, the oldest of whom is twelve years of age. Albert Dennis leaves a wife and four children, Alexander Brown leaves a wife and three children, and Patrick Sheehey leaves a wife who has a grown up daughter by a former marriage.

A Calf Should Have Rope.

The Dispatch is a little awkward as an organ of reform as might be expected of one who has never practiced it. If that paper will point to a single bill it ever charged less than regular rates for, we shall be pleased to publish it as a piece of startling news. When it gets its reforms all finished and "shined up," when it is able to point to a single paper that has "cursed the Dispatch for its reform tendencies" or to a single reform act the Dispatch ever did except in wind, we may have something to say on the subject. But there is no hurry. When a man sets out seriously to make an ass of himself, he ought to have plenty of time allowed him.

POOR CUBA.

The Chicago Record says:—"The President will veto the Morgan resolution if it passes the house of representatives." Why? because it originated from some other source than his own dictation, and by a democrat?

The Record says "Because it interferes with his own plans concerning Cuba."

Thus far no one has been able to learn what McKinley's plans are "concerning Cuba," or any other important questions. Then why should the house of representatives delay? It is possible that imperative and immediate action should be delayed. Can Americans and American interests be allowed to suffer because an automatic president is not ready to act.

In other words, unless you, the senate and house of representatives do as I dictate I will not play, says McKinley.

"The executive plans" are perhaps like the McKinley platitudes of the last campaign. Absurd and inconsistent. When he said "Open the mills and factories to American labor, rather than our mints to the silver of the world." When those mills and factorys at the time were packed from cellar to attic with manufactured goods awaiting a market which had been cut off by the limited purchasing power. And a still scarcer amount advocated by this autocrat and his coherts. It would be a very easy matter to "Open the mills" when you create a market for the already accumulated stocks of manufactured goods. These latter conditions however can never be brought about by antagonizing the commercial interests of all nations with whom we have trade relations. Mr. McKinley should endeavor to give the people something tangible, something real, something more substantial, and less platitudes and mysteries, else Uncle John Wananamaker may give him another scorching.

It is not only the cauterized spots in Uncle John's anatomy that are so painful, but the patience of a betrayed and suffering people have been tried to their fullest extent.

—Thursday, a messenger from the telegraph office brought in a telegram to Mr. Morris in the court room. He did not once remove his hat. But it is good form to remove the hat on entering a dwelling, church or hall, and an inflexible rule of court that a man must remove his hat while in the court room. We mention this mainly to call attention to it, so as to save someone, some day from having the judge call his attention to this bit of carelessness.

He has a good position, being a sort of general assistant for the several foremen, helping each when needed, and is not a regular salesman now. He likes his work much better than before.

—The other day, when the electric street lights were being cared for as usual it was found that in one of them the birds, probably an English sparrow had twisted a small flexible wire around the two "binding posts," and there it was in good shape to make a "short circuit." It would also have made lively times for any bird that should happen to step on it when the current was on. It is supposed the bird was using this wire among other things it had brought to build its nest, for the hood of nearly every arc lamp on our streets has a bird's nest in it.

Brosy corrected a mistake by saying this was the first time he had been called upon to preach a memorial sermon to the soldiers. His subject was: "Heroic Sacrifice," and was replete with patriotic thoughts earnestly expressed. The preacher is most deservedly popular for the ready willingness to respond to such occasions and for the heartiness with which he ever enters upon the pending subject. Preacher, church officers and congregation have the thanks of the veterans and their friends for courtesies shown. They are deeply prized as they were seen to be unstintingly and most courteously given. The Sons of Veterans mustered some thirty-strong and this order shows vigorous growth. They are to have the honor and responsibility of conducting the memorial day exercises will be new and interesting. Tramp Fight at Btuler.

Special to the DAILY COURIER:

We had a veritable battle with tramps last Saturday night. The gentlemen of the road, came in on all trains and established a camp near the coal docks, where our worthy saloon men helped them to a couple of kegs of beer and sundry other drinks supplies and after purchasing or stealing a quantity of food, they had a high old time. About 9 o'clock they held up a freight crew on the Lake Shore, drove a brakesmen across the fields at the point of revolver, and attacked the firemen who dealt one of them a murderous blow with a pick that effectualy laid him out. The crew succeded in pulling out, leaving the brakesman, who after circuiting the town came in and reported. Then Butler's braves to the number of about fifty headed by the new marshal, and nightwatchmen Reach and Grindle made a dash upon the tramp camp scattering them right and left, bringing in one wounded tramp and eight of his associates and safely landing them in the crippled calaboose from which Dick Abrams made his escape. At this writing they are waiting further developments. Butler has long been a paradise for tramps. Perhaps our people will now wake up to the necessity of inviting this class of of gentry to move on.

(Since receiving this special, we learn that Mr. Emanuel, who went over to investigate the matter, found there was not proof sufficient against the men they had captured, to make it worth while to hold them. The injured tramp was no doubt in the fight, but as he had no revolver, he could only be held for assault and battery and would by quite an expense to the county, and do but little good. The tramp who got the worst beating got away.

It seems they were so drunk, they did not know what they did want, and held up the trainmen without any reason for it. The trainmen resisted and pounded the tramps over the head with their lanters and drove them off. Then the man worst hurt, got a revolver from the tramp camp and came at the brakeman and tried to shoot him. He even went into the cab to hunt him. He shot once at the conductor, thinking he was the brakeman. He got on that train or another and when out west three miles, near the Hines school house, he made the engineer stop at the point of his revolver, and let him off. Near there he found a couple young men who had been making purchases in Butler and stopped them. From them he got a new suit of clothes they were taking home. He is the man the authorities want, but are not likely to catch.

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Obituary.

John Potts was born in Stark, county, Ohio, Feb. 4, 1813, and died at his home near Sedan, Ind., after a short illness, on May 20, 1887, aged 84 years, 3 month and 16 days.

He was the eldest son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Triplet) Potts, and of a family of twelve children but three brothers now remain, who reside in Southern Indiana. When five years of age he moved with his parents to Wayne county, Ohio. In 1846, he moved to DeKalb county, settling on the farm where he continued to reside until he died.

On Feb. 6, 1834, he was united in Wayne county, Ohio, to Elinor Metcalf who preceded him to life eternal in 1866. To this union were born two children, Elmira L. who died in 1855, and Hannah E. wife of Albert Buchanan. In 1867, he was united again in marriage to Mariah Shaffer. He leaves an invalid widow who has been confined to her bed for more than a year, one daughter, one grandson, one great grandson, and many other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

He united with the Christian church in 1856 and remained a member until death. He was chosen justice of peace for Fairfield township in 1864, and served continuously for twenty years during which time he married more than one hundred couples.

The funeral services were conducted in the Lutheran church at Fairfield Center on Saturday, May 22, 1897, by Elder Minnick, pastor of the Corunna Lutheran church, and the remains were laid at rest in the cemetery near by.

Agricultural Advertising

Chicago has made enterprises peculiar to itself. The great agricultural resorces of the Mississippi and Misouri valleys, of which Chicago is the central market, has led business genius to devise special means to meet the requirements of the diversified interests surrounding him. It is a known fact that the advertiser has kept well in advance of the procession, and in the great city by the lake is located the only special agricultural advertising agency in the world that is doing so much to further advertising interests along this particular line.

Every year agricultural advertisers and agricultural newspaper publishers hold an annual round-up in this city and confer together for the sole purpose of bettering their business interests by employment of the most modern methods of advertising. No other phase of the advertising subject receives more thorough and energetic attention than that branch of it which has to do with the agricultural press.

This is the age of the specialist, and it is largely due to the genius of the advertising specialist that manufacturers that deal with agriculture in Chicago and the west have gained such an advantage over eastern competitors as they have within the past recent years.

ART AND SCIENCE EMPLOYED.

The elements of art and science are employed by the specialist. He must have artistic ability to prepare attractive and forceful advertising, and to successfully do this must understand the science of the business being advertised. He must also have a familiar acquaintance with the character of the class to be reached.

In olden days. "All roads led to Rome." It is equally true to-day that all roads lead to Chicago. Closer proximity and an inter-dependence make Chicago the most desirable headquarters for the specialist's work. There is no doubt about Chicago being the advertising center of the west, and none can doubt its future possibilities. Here may be found, in the preparation of advertising matter, some of the brainiest and best men of our country.

Agricultural advertisers distribute through the city each year over $500,000, which goes into the columns of agricultural newspapers. The larger percentage of this expenditure is made by agricultural implement manufacturers. Seedsmen are also liberal patrons, as are live stock men, and an industry that little is known about—the poultry business—contributes to the cause of advertising about $50,000 per year.

Advertisers from every part of the United States patronize Chicago specialists, and this is particularly true of those who desire to reach the farmers of the mighty empire of the west—Chicago Journal, March 4, 1897.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

TOO MANY GRABS BY TRUSTS.

The revised Dingley tariff bill will not raise revenue sufficient to defray the expenditures of the Government. This, too, in spite of the dip into internal revenue made by the Republican members of the Senate Committee on Finance. That is the opinion of tariff experts, who have been carefully studying the new schedules since the bill was reported to the Senate. The only recourse left, say the experts, is to go deeper into internal revenue.

The Republican leaders expect to get from customs revenue the first year about $200,000,000 and from internal revenue an increase of $40,000,000. Tobacco and cigarettes are expected to produce from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000; beer, $15,000,000 and tea $9,000,000.

Those who are well posted as to the money derived from customs revenues declare that the bill will not produce anywhere near the figures named by the Republican members of the Finance Committee. Instead of producing an increased revenue from the start, the bill will hardly come up to the present law for the first year because of the extraordinary concessions to the great trusts.

To offset the prodigal way in which Republican campaign obligations are repaid in the bill now pending, a number of Senators on both sides of the chamber are seriously discussing the adoption of the proposed anti-trust amendment, which provides that all articles controlled by a trust shall come in free of duty until the trust shall have ceased to exercise this control.

In this way the Hanna ante-election compact with the syndicated trusts may be made ineffective. At least the people who pay the taxes would not be compelled to bear all of this political burden.

The Sugar Schedule.

The debate in the United States Senate over Senator Allen's resolution relating to Chapman, the contumacious broker, showed that even so reckless and vitriolic a tongue as Senator Tillman usually plies in that august council may become an instrumentality for good. Not that Tillman threw any real light upon the culpability of speculating Senators, but his speech will show to the country that the charges of trafficking in sugar stocks by Senators who were in a position to gain inside information about the revised schedule are of sufficient definiteness to be touched upon in the course of a discussion upon the floor of the Senate.

To a mind untutored in the technicalities of tariff computations, the revised schedules as they came from the Senate committee were unintelligible and mystifying, but the fact that the market jumped immediately and that certain Senators were credited with handsome earnings on the advance, is regarded as the best of evidence that the sugar trust fared exceedingly well in the construction of the new schedules, as it was predicted it would.

It is impossible to fix the guilt of men who would so shamefully prostitute their exalted position, as the futile investigation of two years ago proves, but the taunts and intimations of a Tillman will serve to arouse the sentiment of the country in a way that may prompt respectable and highminded members of the Senate to kill a section of the tariff bill that seems to be so tainted with roguery and corruption. The whole country should bring a pressure to bear upon the Senators that will avert a repetition of the disgraceful scandal of 1894.—Detroit Free Press.

Unwisely Shutting Their Eyes.

Some of the protective statisticians have set themselves at work to prove that the exports of pig iron, steel rails and other of the rougher iron products from the United States to Europe are not only small in relative amount, but of accidental occurrence. These experts could more profitably employ their time in endeavoring to prepare the way for new conditions. The antediluvian who stood with his umbrella shouting to Noah that "it wasn't going to be much of a shower" not only lost caste as a prophet, but he lost his umbrella and his identity.—Philadelphia Record.

Ex-Senators as Lobbyists.

The lobby of ex-Senators is growing in size and boldness of operations. For some years these former members of the upper house who have set up in business in Washington with their prestige and special privileges as a stock in trade have led all the lobbies in daring ventures and their services have been generally recognized and handsomely rewarded by the various interests that seek to secure favorable legislation by the particular methods known best to members of Congress and hence to retired statesmen.—Washington Star.

Iowa's Corrupt Legislature.

Two things have been strongly developed at the extra session of the Legislature. One is that the administration of State affairs has been extravagant and corrupt. The other fact developed is that the Republican State machine and the Republican State leaders are absolutely under the control of certain large corporate interests, and its and their reinstatement in power simply means power of attorney to govern the State given to the select circle of corporation attorneys and corporation lobbyists.—Des Moines Leader.

A Struggle Between Highwaymen.

Experience has shown that no tariff bill levying taxes for private purposes can be constructed by any committee without the committee's being held up by selfish interests that threaten to smash things if they are not appeased. Under such circumstances, the fight degenerates into a free-for-all, in which the strongest highwaymen get the biggest prizes.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Sort of Protection Needed.

Sugar refining is one industry which certainly is not in need of governmental protection. It is controlled by such an aggregation of wealth and of business power that the only protection called for is the kind which will protect the people from the unfair exactions of the sugar company. That can be secured by making an open field.—Kansas City Star.

Tea Tax for the Barons' Benefit.

Knowing that the tariff rates demanded by the favored manufacturers will cut down importations and reduce the revenue from customs the Republicans propose to eke out the revenue by taxes on the breakfast table. The tea tax represents an increase of the people's burdens for the support of the Government in order that the tribute levied on the people by the tariff barons may not be cut down.—St. Louis Republic.

No Revenue from High Tariff.

The Senate seems to have learned intuitively what Dingley did not know, that it is nonsense to speak of a protective tariff as one for revenue and that just in proportion as a tariff begins to be really protective it ceases to be a revenue producer. When the new bill goes to the conference committee the country will have an opportunity to see whether Congressman Dingley is too old to learn.—Detroit Free Press.

Driving Away Canadian Trade.

This country exported $62,574,004 of goods to Canada last year and imported $37,353,317. This neighborly trade has grown to fair proportions under the Wilson tariff law, but the majority of the people voted last fall against encouraging foreign commerce, and the Dingley protection wall will shortly checkmate the abominable traffic across the border.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

McKinley and Currency Reform.

The country should at once have some assurance that the administration is in earnest in its desire for monetary reform. As things are now, everyone is coming to think that the Republicans can see nothing and think of nothing but tariff; that they have the opinion that the only thing in the way of legislation that can be done to improve industrial conditions is to put more taxes on certain articles.—Indianapolis News.

The Paternalists' Sole Idea.

It is not surprising that a party that has taught the doctrine of government protection and paternalism so long should at last come to view the government only as a great reservoir from which favorites are to be rewarded. The thought that the reservoir must be replenished by the people does not often enter the Republican noddle.—Utica Observer.

Political Potpourri.

If Dingley continues growing in unpopularity at the present rate it will not be long before his name can be used as a deadly epithet.—Kansas City Times.

A man who would not dream of resorting to rascality or felony for himself, or even for his church, will sometimes wade into trickery and crime up to his neck for his political party.—Minneapolis Tribune.

The advance of $3 a share in sugar trust stock on the day that the Senate tariff bill was reported is perhaps all the comment that it is necessary to make on the sugar schedule of that measure.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

It is significant that none of the Republican county officials whose terms expire this year are particularly anxious for a renomination. These same Republican county officials can look as far through a stone wall as other people can.—Dayton Times.

In the Senate discussion on the Chapman case yesterday Mr. Allen spoke of the Senate as "representing 70,000,000 people." While this is true, it is also true that the gentlemen whose cases are behind the Chapman case represent $70,000,000, and the pull on both sides seem to be about even.—New York World.

The first requirement of national commerce is to have something to sell which meets the demands of the age in utility and superior workmanship; the next is to let other nations, and especially those deficient in these lines, know it; the last is to be an intelligent buyer in foreign markets.—Portland Oregonian.

The population of the United States is now nearly double that of the British isles, yet notwithstanding the disparity in natural resources the commerce of Great Britain is more than double that of the United States. The British coax trade to come to them; the United States repel trade by hostile tariffs as if it were a plague.—Philadelphia Record.

Private interests can get the ear of Congress without difficulty, and can secure the active support of politicians in their campaign for higher taxes for their benefit. But when there is a great cause, in which the people of the whole country are deeply interested, its representatives are told nothing can be done until it is known whether or not there is to be a tax on hides. Public business is sacrificed to private greed.—Indianapolis News.

The fact is that the Republicans are afraid to touch the money question. They have always been afraid of it. They bungled it whenever they touched it. They are not agreed among themselves. Mr. Reed could form no committee on banking and currency with a harmonious Republican majority. They will do nothing effective at either this or the long session, except to try to devise some scheme of postponement.—St. Paul Globe.

Senator Tillman is erratic and wild on some things. But he struck the heart of the matter in the Senate yesterday when he proposed that the sugar trust investigation of 1894 be reopened and Chapman, Havemeyer et al. be forced to testify in regard to the United States Senators charged with speculation in sugar stocks and other crookedness in connection with the sugar schedule of the Wilson-Gorman law.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

SOME DISTINGUISHED VICTIMS OF THE PARIS FIRE HORROR.

THE Duchesse d'Uzes, leading patroness of the Parisian charity bazaar in which so many members of the French nobility were burned to death, has the reputation of being the wealthiest woman in France. She is also one of the noblest in point of blood. She is a daughter of the family of Rochechouart-Mortemart, and she was married at 19 to the Duc d'Uzes, who was one of the most eminent statesmen of his time. She was slightly injured in the fire. The Duchesse d'Alencon was the most distinguished victim of the fire horror. She was the sister of the Empress of Austria and a member by marriage of the royal family of France. Her widower is Prince Ferdinand of Orleans. She was born in the royal family of Bavaria and was 50 years old. She was married in 1868 to Prince Ferdinand. The Duc d'Aumale, a prince of the House of Orléans, was residing in the beautiful Mediterranean island and thither came the announcement of the tragic death of the Duchesse d'Alencon. She was the wife of the duke's nephew and the duchess and the old nobleman were closely attached—so closely, indeed, that the announcement of her death killed him instantly. Mme. Chevals, whose remains were easily identified among the bodies in the Palais de l'Industrie after the fire, was one of the leaders of the charity in the work of which she lost her life. Her husband, Gen. Chevals, has not cut much figure in recent affairs in France. Comtesse de Greffulhe was the wife of the noted conservative deputy. A French noble himself, he wedded his own class, and the dead woman was a member of the ancient and distinguished family of the De la Rochefoucaulds. The Countess Greffulhe was one of the leaders of the aristocratic set in Paris, and her entertainments were among the most gorgeous of the Paris season. The Duchesse de la Torre, who escaped death, but who was severely burned, is one of the statelliest grandes dames of France. She was popular in the ultramontane set of French nobles who cling to church and crown in spite of the rank republicanism that surrounds them. Mme. George Eugene Haussmann, who perished, was the widow of the famous baron of that name, who was one of the foremost figures in French politics at the time of the second empire. Mme. Haussmann spent considerable time in writing a large part of the baron's memoirs, which were published in 1891.

robust condition since he was stricken with paralysis some time ago. The aged warrior is the last of a famous line of fighters. He is a nephew of the original Black Hawk of the wars of 1832, and fought in the battle of Bad Ax. When the Indian forces were finally overthrown on the shores of the big Mississippi the young Sac warrior drifted northward, and soon became a noted hunter in the land of the Winnebagoes. His prowess and imperious ways soon made him the absolute master of a large band of the tribe, over which he has ruled for many years with an iron hand. He was present at the great council of the tribes which assembled on the return of the original Black Hawk. The young chief openly accused his powerful uncle of cowardice when he said that the white men were as countless as the sands of the rivers. When old Black Hawk dies he will leave no heir. His only son was killed three years ago in a fierce encounter with Jim Swallow, a stalwart brave of the Winnebagoes. Black Hawk will be the chief attraction at the Iowa State Fair, in case he is able to bear up under the unaccustomed journey.

MARRIED EIGHTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Aged Couple Whose Eldest Child Is Now 82 Years Old.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hiller, who live near La Grange, Ind., have just completed eighty-seven years of married life, and both bid fair to live a few years longer. Mr. Hiller is now 107 years old and his wife 105, and the little frame cottage they occupy has been their home for nearly eighty-five years. This house consists of one room, and this room contains all the aged couple's earthly possessions. Mr. Hiller is a vigorous looking man for his extreme old age. His hand is as strong and his step as firm as those of a man of 40. His eyes are bright and his long hair falls in unmixed whiteness almost to his shoulders. His wife has long since passed under the spell of old age. She is bent almost double with the weight of her years and is totally blind. "It's a caution," says Mr. Hiller, speaking of his age. "I never counted on living so long or anything like it." He tells how he was born in Jamestown, near Kingston, Canada. He was 22 years old when the war of 1812 came along, and he describes Canada as a very wild country in those years. The first year of the war he and his wife left Canada and settled near Marine City and went from there to Emmett, whence they came to their present home. They were married when Mr. Hiller was 20 and his wife 18. With his old age have come symptoms of a second childhood, the most amusing and amazing of which is the cutting of two teeth lately. The old couple have eleven children—the eldest 82 and the youngest 57.

BAYARD'S GOLD CUP.

Presented to the Ex-Ambassador by the American Society in London.

The marvelous gold loving cup which was presented to Thomas Francis Bayard at the banquet tendered him in London by the American Society is a representation of the giant pumpkin given to Mr. Bayard by the United Service Club of New York City on Thanksgiving Day. The enormous vegetable was grown by Capt. Kramer, of the Third New York Cavalry. The cup's cover is surmounted by a portrait bust of the ex-Ambassador. On either side of the bust is a standing figure of Columbia and Britannia clasping hands and bearing palm leaves, as signs of peace, which cross above the head of Mr. Bayard. The cup proper is of solid gold. Its base is of sterling silver and upon it, in relief, is a map of the United States. At the corners of the map are four eagles with outstretched wings, upon whose backs rest the golden cup. There is a wreath of Indian corn upon the bowl and within it appears the following inscription: "Presented to the Hon. Thomas Francis Bayard, first ambassador of the United States of America to the court of St. James, by the members of the American Society in London and other Americans in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in recognition of his exceptional service to his country and of his zealous work in strengthening the sentiments of mutual respect and affection which bind together the people of the two great English-speaking nations. London, May 7, 1897."

A Southern Acadia.

There are but few counties in Georgia in this day of progress and development which have no railroads running through their borders, but Lincoln is one of them. Lincoln has no railroad, but she has what is better than a railroad. She has the name of being the most moral county in the State. Court is held in Lincoln twice a year, and each time it lasts only so long as the grand jury can make out some kind of report to submit as a matter of form.

There is never a court there which lasts longer than a day and a half. The jail, as a usual thing, stands open from year to year, and crime is a thing unknown in Lincoln. The people are peaceful, happy and contented. They make good crops from season to season, and have a good time one way or another throughout the year. In the summer they have their barbecue season, and in the autumn they indulge in the pleasures of neighborhood parties, dances and entertainments. In this way they have a good social time, and while they may be said by some to be side-tracked from this great world of business and activity, they are fully up with the great vanguard of American citizenship, and are doing their full part in the upbuilding of the country.

There is truly something picturesque about Lincoln County. It is the most delectable land the sun ever shone upon, to be sure.

MAP SHOWING RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAY SYSTEM.

When Russia shall have completed the railway enterprises it has under way, together with those which it now has decided to inaugurate, it will not only have the vastest railway system in the world, but it will have paved the way for future territorial conquests. The Trans-Siberian Railway, which, when completed, will carry passengers from St. Petersburg and Moscow across Siberia and China to the very threshold of the American continent, now is completed between Tcheliabinsk and Irkoutsk. The line between Tcheliabinsk and St. Petersburg also is in operation, and that between Irkoutsk and Vladivostok is in course of construction. It is proposed to carry the same line down from Vladivostok into Korea. A not less ambitious project is that which contemplates bringing the Persian coast of the Indian ocean within reach of the Russian capital. To effect this the Government proposes to extend the Trans-Caucasian Railway from Tsaritsin over the mountains to Teheran and thence to the southern coast of Persia. With the two lines in operation, one may look forward to an unprecedented development of the resources of northern and western Asia and eastern Russia, while the strategic significance of a move which will enable Russia to place her troops on the coast of the Indian ocean in a week's time is by no means inconsiderable.

Playin' Possum.

"Playin' possum" comes from the fact that the possum will feign sleep or death when pushed into sudden danger of being captured. But pains and aches never play that kind of a game. They never try to fool anybody, and go to work to wake up people, leaving no chance to feign sleep On the other hand, there is a remedy known as St. Jacobs Oil that will lull a pain or an ache so that it won't wake up again in the cure that follows its use. Pains and aches are great or less in intensity just in degree as we treat them. Prompt treatment with the best remedy—St. Jacobs Oil—prevents their increase and by curing prevents their return. Everything is gained by taking pains and aches in time for a prompt and permanent cure, and there is nothing better than the use of St. Jacobs Oil.

Troopers Guided by Signs.

In New York the other day, Capt. Dodd's famous Troop F, Third United States Cavalry, showed the effete Easterners some riding not equaled by the Russian Cossacks and hardly approached by the American cowboys. The New York World says the control the men had over their mounts was wonderful. The riders sat almost motionless in the saddle and guided their horses through all sorts of intricate and difficult movements in the half-hour's music ride. No commands were given beyond a slight movement of Capt. Dodd's hand, but the entire troop moved simultaneously. The troopers rode horseback, stood on their heads in the saddle, charged standing up in shortened stirrups, slashing at imaginary heads with their sabers, and all the time going at top speed.

An infantry company from the Thirteenth Regiment, under Lieut. E. S. Butts, gave an equally striking exhibition. After a gymnastic drill with and without rifles, led by the Lieutenant, in time to music, four big ten-foot wooden walls were brought and Uncle Sam's men showed how they would scale barricades in actual warfare. They lined up in four files and at the command the first file rushed to the wall and gave a hand step to their followers in the second file. The latter were over with their rifles in a trice and advancing on an imaginary enemy they blazed away industriously. The third and fourth files followed the last one, firing from the top of the wall. Then the dead and wounded men were carried back oer the wall and to the rear, the first file retreating slowly and holding the enemy at bay. Then Lieut. Butt's men formed a human pyramid and climbed a thirty-five-foot wall built from the floor to the balcony.

The way in which live American towns recover from a great calamity was shown in the rapid restoration of Chicago after the fire of 1871, and again in the case of Johnstown, wiped out almost completely by floods. In 1887 the borough had a population of 9,592; now it is a city of 30,000 inhabitants, and taking in the immediately surrounding territory the population of what is really the new Johnstown numbers about 35,000.

It has recently been discovered that there is in Birmingham, in the very center of Christian England, a factory where idols are made for heathen nations! Idols of all kinds are turned out, representing the gods of all heathen nations from Tokio to Timbuctoo. The export trade to heathen countries is a fairly large one, although more goods are sent out to foreign dealers in curios in the bazars of Cairo, Damascus, Colombo, etc., for sale to unsuspecting travelers anxious to take home mementos.

The Pope has issued an order forbidding priests not belonging to the Roman diocese or not having any regular employment in Rome to dwell there. All priests who continue to stay in Rome in contravention of this rescript will be suspended. A note is also being taken of the resident priests who are seen out of doors after a certain hour, and measures will be taken against them in case they can plead no justification. There is an hour fixed in the evening by the ringing of the church bells when all members of the clergy must be indoors.

The Oleander.

The history of the oleander is almost coeval with the history of the human race. It was the rhododendron of the ancients, and when we read of the rhododendron in the classical writings of the Greeks and Romans, the oleander is to be understood. The rhododendron, as we know it, was unknown to the ancients, so far as evinced by the writings that have come down to us. The flowers occupied a prominent place in their funeral practices, and were especially employed in the funeral ceremonies of females.

KIDNAPING A RIVER.

WONDERFUL ENGINEERING FEAT IN COLORADO.

Waters of a Mountain Stream Forced to Climb Over the Range and Go Down Into a Valley Wherein It Was Before a Stranger.

Laramie Successfully Abducted.

To make a river climp its own watershed and go down a valley that it never intended to traverse would seem, at first thought, to be no easier than to construct a perpetual motion machine. But in Colorado it has been done. There, along the great Continental divide, all waters on the western slope naturally find their outlet into the Gulf of California, and those on the eastern slope reach the Gulf of Mexico via the South Platte, the Platte, the Missouri, and the Mississippi. But on the western side there is an abundance of water and a scarcity of arable land, while on the eastern side good land is abundant, while the supply of water is insufficient. The latest project is to turn the upper waters of the Grande across the watershed, and along the slopes extending east.

The crest of the Continental divide rises into peaks 14,000 feet high and descends into passes as low as 10,000 feet. It thus happens that, while some of the tributaries of the Grande have their rise at the elevation of 11,000 feet or more, the Lulu pass on the Continental divide is only 10,000 feet above sea level. It is thus clear that if the river can be tapped at any elevation considerably above the height of the Lulu pass the waters can be led craftily along in sidehill ditches and ultimately across the divide and down the eastern slope of the range. This is what it is proposed to do, the surveys have already been made, and the work will probably be undertaken next summer.

What it is planned to do with the waters of the Grande has already been done with the waters of the Laramie River, which have been taken across the watershed of the Medicine Bow range and turned into Chambers Lake, from which they pass down to the arable lands of the Poudre valley. This enterprise is in the same general district as the one now proposed, and serves as a model.

The head waters of that branch of the Laramie which have been diverted come very near having their rise in a glacier. They start in a canyon so deep, so shaded, and located at such an altitude, that the snows of one winter are hardly melted out before those of another come. From the ridges on both sides the winds sweep the snows into the narrow gorge until they lie 200 feet deep or more. Solodified by pressure and partial thawing, the mass of snow becomes a mass of ice, and the sun has an all summer's work before him to convert that ice mass into water. Water from such a source is particularly valuable because it is what they call "late water;" it comes at a time of the year when many of the lowlands streams are dry, and yet when water is still needed to mature the crops. A flow of one cubic foot per second through the entire season is worth not less than $1,000, and as this branch of the Laramie often runs 250 cubic feet per second at the time when water is most in demand, it will be seen that the flow was well worth capturing.

To abduct the Laramie at this point required a ditch five miles long, circling about the two sides of the Medicine Bow range, which crosses at an altitude of 8,500 feet. For three-fifths of the distance the side hill along which the ditch was led was so nearly vertical that the material excavated could not be held to form the lower bank of the ditch without crib work. In surveying the route the ordinary clinometers had to be discarded, and the common surveyor's "loving rod" had to be extended to an instrument thirty feet high. The way was so broken and difficult and the timber in places so dense that it often made there, as it has since on the Grande, a very hard day's work for two men to chain half a mile. Along some of the line the forest is so dense that no good picture of the works can be obtained by ordinary solar photography, and at places the incline is so steep that the man with a camera can find no place to stand while taking his view.

The altitude is a great difficulty to be encountered in the prosecution of such a piece of work. A large number of men can not do heavy work at that altitude at all. Any one with heart trouble is barred to begin with. The strongest of the men can not do more than half work at such an elevation. During the two years and more that the work was in progress the company was sending in a constant stream of men who were as constantly leaving with or without notice. A large number were physically unable to endure the work, but even those that did not get positively sick became homesick.

With good wages, good board, and short hours of work, they would get to brooding on their situation, to worrying abut their families, to fancying sickness when they did not have it, become sleepless, and rather than wait for the end of the season and be hauled down comfortably in the company's wagons they would fold their blankets and kits and silently steal away on the seventy-five-mile tramp to civilization.

Two devices used for the protection of the canal deserve notice. One is to keep it from slopping over. A little spill on the lower side might speedily wash a gully that would not only empty the canal, but might soon be so much of a canyon that it would give a new engineering problem to get across it. Where the incline is so nearly perpendicular no chance of a break must be left. Accordingly an automatic spillway is provided, so that when the water reaches a certain height in the ditch the rise of the water alone raises a water gate and the surplus goes careening down a channel prepared for it.

The second device referred to is that whereby a stream crossing the path of the ditch is led harmlessly over it, but contributes water in so far as such contribution is needed. The method adopted was to lead the stream over the ditch. The ditch follows the side of the ravine until it intersects the watercourse. Then fluming is pushed back to bed-rock in the stream's course, and it is made to jump the ditch. Right over the ditch is placed a grating of heavy timbers so inclined that rocks and driftwood do not lodge, but are washed over without resistance, while the water flows through the grating into the ditch. This lands the debris far down the mountain side, but saves the precious water, or so much of it as the canal is able to carry at a given time.

When, after more than two years of work, the canal was finished in 1894, it was found to deliver into Chambers Lake a constant flow of water of 192 cubic feet per second. The value of this water was so great that the canal paid for itself the first season after its completion.

Even in This Rhyme.

The English language must be tough,
At least, that's what I've reckoned,
For it is still alive to-day
Though murdered every second.
—New York Truth.

THIS BOAT WAS BUILT TO CROSS THE ATLANTIC IN TWO DAYS.

Capt. Carl J. H. Flindt, a native of Denmark, but now a resident of New York, hopes to have his novel craft Dolphin launched in the course of a week or two. The strange little ship is certainly a new departure in naval architecture. The boat, so far as contour is concerned, is not unlike the fish after which she is named. Her designer, Capt. Flindt, thinks she will be fleeter than the fish. His ambition is to cross the Atlantic in two days.

The Dolphin much resembles the whaleback type of vessel except that her lines are finer, her keel deeper and her run cleaner. She has about 2,000 pounds of lead on her keel, with sufficient inside ballast, combined with the weight of her machinery, to give her the necessary stability. The boat will cut through the waves. The pilot house is in a dome-like superstructure forward, from which she will be steered. She is 67 feet long, with a beam of 6 feet 6 inches, and from the top of the pilot house to her keel she measures 16 feet. She will draw between 5 and 6 feet of water. Her power will be derived from a gasoline motor of 20 horse-power, but her speed, according to Capt. Flindt, will be extraordinary. The captain says he will start from New York to Queenstown with a crew of four, and if the water is moderately smooth hopes to make the passage in from forty-eight to sixty hours.

A Sure Deliverance.

Not instantaneously, it is true, but in a short space of time, persons of a bilious habit are saved from the tortures which a disordered liver is capable of inflicting by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an anti-bilious medicine and aperient of the first rank. The pains in the right side and through the right shoulder blade, the sick headache, nausea, constipation, and saffron hue of the skin, are entirely removed by this estimable restorative of tone to the organs of secretion and digestion.

Drunk for Twenty Years.

A correspondent writes: "I was drunk on and off for over twenty years, drunk when I had money, sober when I had none. Many dear friends I lost, and numbers gave me good advice to no purpose; but, thank God, an angel hand came at last in the form of my poor wife, who administered your marvelous remedy, 'Anti-Jag,' to me without my knowledge or consent. I am now saved and completely transformed from a worthless fellow to a sober and respected citizen."

If "Anti-Jag" cannot be had at your druggist, it will be mailed in plain wrapper with full directions how to give secretly, on receipt of One Dollar, by the Renova Chemical Co., 66 Broadway, New York, or they will gladly mail full particulars free.

In judging others a man labors to no purpose, commonly errs and easily sins, but in examining and judging himself he is always wisely and usefully employed.

Then Sleep Soundly.

You can't afford to lie awake o' nights. Nothing compensates for loss of sleep. Eight hours of good sleep every night is what you need if you hope to keep healthy nerves in your body and a clear head on your shoulders. Yet you cannot get rest enough while you persist in drinking coffee. No habitual coffee drinker can depend on his sleep. Why not break off the coffee habit and drink Grain-O in place of it? Grain-O is made from pure grains, has the rich seal brown color of Mocha or Java, is nourishing and palatable—a food drink—without any of the noxious properties of coffee. Having used it a short time you will prefer it to the best coffee that was ever set on your table. Two points gained—health promoted, money saved. All grocers. In packages at 15c. and 25c.

Motherhood.

A mother who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution.

The child fairly drinks in health from its mother's robust constitution before birth, and from a healthy mother's milk after.

Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

Do you know the meaning of what is popularly called those "longings," or cravings, which beset so many women during pregnancy?

There is something lacking in the mother's blood. Nature cries out and will be satisfied at all hazards.

One woman wants sour things, another wants sweets, another wants salt things, and so on.

The real need all the time is to enrich the blood so as to supply nourishment for another life, and to build up the entire generative system, so that the birth may be possible and successful.

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for twenty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be fewer disappointments at birth, and they would not experience those annoying "longings."

In the following letter to Mrs. Pinkham, Mrs. Whitney demonstrates the power of the Compound in such cases. She says:

"From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three, I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon relieved. After I was married, the doctor said I would never be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and a half. The next time I commenced at once and continued to take your Compound through the period of pregnancy, and I said then, if I went my full time and the baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as one could wish.

"I am so thankful that I used your medicine, for it gave me the robust health to transmit to my child. I cannot express my gratitude to you; I never expected such a blessing. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 3 George St., E. Somerville, Mass.

The Man who is Raising a Big Crop

—realizes that the harvest time is ahead. Ideal farming comprehends not only the growing of the tallest grain—the most tons-to-the-acre of hay; the best farming—the farming that pays—must contemplate something more than this; for there is a harvest time, and just in proportion as a crop is saved successfully, speedily and economically, in just that proportion may be measured the season's profit or loss.

JOHN AND EDITH

Were Afraid of Papa and came to Auburn to get Married.

A couple of weeks ago the COURIER wrote up John Russel and Edith Airhart a young couple, who had spent the night at the Glazier hotel and the next morning were married by 'Squire Walborn. There seemed to be some mystery connected with this marriage, as they almost refused to be interviewed concerning their whereabouts. The Albion New Era of this week throws some light upon the subjet. It says concerning them:

"The couple are well known in Albion where the groom has resided for years and the bride also has lived near here. They made application of the clerk of Noble circuit court a short time ago but an irate father learned of their intentions and "spoiled the honey moon." He wrote the clerk that the bride was not 18 years of age and that he would prosecute anyone who made an affidavit to that effect. He can now go after Clerk Long of DeKalb county or the person who made the affidavit as to residence and age."

Clerk Long received a letter of inquiry this morning from Mr. Airhart who is now at Ellwood. It contained practically the same information as the above clipping does. We are afraid the old man is just a little slow.

BROUGHT THEIR BLUSHES.

Wednesday's Daily.

The grand jury is getting hot on someone's trail. Editor Higley of the Butler Record is on the string. Editor Gardner of the Butler Herald, Editor Miner and his assistant Mr. Murray, of the Garrett Herald were all here today, and feverishly anxious to see the honorable members of the grand jury. Each had in his pocket one of the regular gilt-edged, d——nask, perfumed invitations for which our grand jury has become so famous. And each had a sweet smile of innocence dancing on his cherry lips and a blush mantling his delicate, rosy cheeks. Gentlemen, don't make a monopoly of this thing. Give the other newspaper men a chance. Remember "There are others."

John Wanamaker

Even the Philadelphia millionaire don't know where the "Advance Agent" is hiding. In a recent speech at the Business Men's Republican League banquet in Philadelphia, he criticised the McKinley administration like this:

"The country is not prosperous. Since the outset of the last presidential campaign the party press and political leaders generally fixed the November election of 1896 as the date of the beginning of good times. A full half of the year has expired since the will of the republican party was declared. Thus far but one of the important issues of the campaign is nearing settlement, and hardly any noticeable improvement of the wretched times is manifest. The tide will soon set in strongly against the republican party unless the depression of business is altered. Idleness and want breed a bitter discontent, which will never be overcome until there are ample employments.

"The foes America has to fear are not the sullen savage Turks, nor the insurrectionists of Cuba, nor, the territory-grasping British, but they are our patient and heart-tried people, our own suffering much-promised people, who, betrayed and disheartened, no longer have faith in their party, and will turn to any leadership that offers promise of better times, believing that worse times can never come than those now existing. It is a terrible thing to observe public sentiment adrift and uncaptained and the people sweeping away from their affection to the old party."

50 lbs. of Coal

A day would keep your rooms warm in winter. But that small stove will burn only twenty-five. Hence, discomfort and misery.

A certain amount of fat, burned daily, would keep your body warm and healthy. But your digestion is bad, and you don't get it from ordinary fat-food. Hence you are chilly, you catch cold easily, you have coughs and shivers; while pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption finds you with no resistive power.

Do this. Burn better fuel. Use SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil. Appetite and digestive power will revive; and soon a warm coating of good flesh will protect the vital organs against the cold and the body against disease.

STEUBEN OPENS THE BOOKS.

For she Don't Propose to let DeKalb get ahead of her in Modern Improvements.

After hearing from DeKalb county's investigations into official crookedness, Steuben county people concluded to keep up with the procession and investigate also. So the Board of county commissioners, on request of a number of tax payers, hired Mr. Ernst to go up to Angola about June 1, and look over their books. But all this was done so quietly that most people knew nothing of it, and set about it to have another man employed to do the same thing. To make the matter plain, we copy an article from each party paper in Angola. The following is in the Republican of May 19:

Notwithstanding the fact that the board of commissioners have employed Mr. Ernst, the skillful and courageous expert who investigated the records of DeKalb county so successfully, to make a like investigation here, the work to commence in a few days, and that his employment was made at the instance of a large number of taxpayers, there are a few who still refuse to be comforted. Accordingly a delegation consisting of John Anderson, Andrew Craig, John Wilcox, L. D. Creel, H. VanAuken, Thomas Johnson, John Stroh, Frank Jackson and L. A. Hendry visited the auditor's office yesterday in company with a stranger who we are informed, represents himself as an expert from the state of Ohio, and demanded that Auditor Watkins turn over to him the books and papers in his custody for investigation. This somewhat very remarkable request Mr. Watkins very promptly declined. He stated to the gentlemen who had accompanied the stranger that inasmuch as what he had said on a previous occasion when visited by some of them, had been grossly misrepresented, he would this time give them his answer in writing, which he did as follows:

"Gentlemen, as I understand my duty as auditor of the county, I am charged with the care and custody of the records, certificates, vouchers, warrants and other papers belonging to the auditor's office. Many of these are of great importance to the people of the county and their loss or destruction might work irreparable injury. The commissioners have already employed an expert, Mr. Ernst, of Bluffton, the man whom many taxpayers desired to have do the work, to investigate these records and papers and report to them the condition of the county's affairs therefrom, and in the absence of an order from said board or from the circuit court authorizing me to do so, I do not feel justified in turning over such important records and papers to a stranger until Mr. Ernst has made his examination of them as authorized by the county commissioners."

The auditor then proposed to them that they have their expert join Mr. Ernst is his examination of the books and papers next month, but this proposition they promptly declined. Mr. Hendry and Mr. Creel then went to Auburn to procure an order from the circuit court. This Judge Penfield declined to make, but wrote a letter to Watkins regarding the matter, suggesting that he saw no impropriety in his permitting any reputable taxpayer to examine any record of his office. On their return they declined to permit the auditor to take either the letter or a copy of the same, and we are not therefore able to more fully state its contents. Mr. Watkins this morning went to Auburn himself to see Judge Penfield regarding the matter, and should the judge make any order of court, the auditor will doubtless cheerfully comply with the same.

FROM THE HERALD

The democratic paper says:—A little suprise was sprung on Auditor Watkins yesterday morning when Messrs. L. A. Hendry, John Anderson, L. D. Creel, John H. Stroh, H. N. VanAuken, John Wilcox and Alexander McClue, representing the committee for the tax-payers petitioning for an investigation of the county books and records, walked into the Auditor's office and introduced Mr. Frank V. Meagley, an expert accountant from Toledo, Ohio, who has been employed by the committee to make the investigation petitioned for. The Auditor was pleasantly informed of this fact, and a request made that the books and records be opened for Mr. Meagley's inspection. The Auditor would not say whether or not the books would be at the disposal of the committee and the expert, until he had sought legal counsel. Leaving the office, he consulted D. R. Best, the county's attorney, and returned with a type-written answer to the effect that access to the books could not be had without an order from the court.

Mr. Hendry, as citizen and taxpayer, then asked to be shown a certain book containing the record and proceedings of the last regular session of the county commissioners, allowances and vouchers—a book which the Auditor had previously shown him. The Auditor was apparently about to grant this request when his deputy, Fred Snyder, interposed an objection that the first answer should be adhered to. The Auditor, apparently confused and at a loss to know just what to say, simply refused to make any answer to individual or committee demands, and the committee retired from his office, but fully resolved to ascertain whether or not the public records are private property, to be seen and handled only by a certain few who are in favor with the Auditor and his clique.

The S. H. G. Anniversary.

The meeting at the lovely home of John Hebel last evening brought together about seventy-five society and literary people, for besides the twenty-five or more members, each had invited two guests. The program was chosen with excellent taste and was well carried out.

The first on the program was piano duet by Mrs. Moss and Mrs. W. H. McIntyre. Then the president of the Club, Mrs. M. E. Griswold made the guests welcome in a short address at the close of which, in a few well chosen words, she introduced, Mrs. Jennie Ray Ormsby, of Fort Wayne, who was to assist, in the evening's entertainment, by dramatic readings.

The first she gave was from Oliver Wendell Holmes "The Witches' Train," nicely rendered. And this was followed by a vocal solo, by Miss Mamie Buckley. Mrs. Ormsby then read a poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, "My Ship's at Sea," and followed this by the well known lullaby of Harry Edwards, "Mammy's Li'l Boy." It is party sung and partly recited, and is always a captivating little germ of sentiment and character painting. Then came another piano solo, rendered by Miss Verplanck. The "Chariot Race of Ben Hur," was then given by Mrs Ormsby with wonderful vividness and power. It was the masterpiece of the evening and it alone, would place Mrs. Ormsbly in the first ranks of her chosen work. It was intensely enjoyable to the company. The closing exercise was a piano solo by Mrs. Garwood and then followed a half hour social, at the close of which there were light refreshment daintily served and very enjoyable. Altogether the S. H. G. ladies made this meeting a splendid success, and should be especially complimented on the selection of Mrs. Ormsby, who is an able and entertaining reader. The music, both vocal and instrumental was of a high order, and all the fortunate guests feel grateful for an evening delightfully spent.

Mrs. Ormsby is a graduate of the Emerson School of Oratory at Boston. She has a pleasing voice and dignified manner, that captivated all who heard her.

AUB RN SCHOOLS

As Seen by an Outsider Who has Superintedded and Taught Schools for Thirty Years.

Auburn citizens are to be congratulated upon having public schools which rank among the best to be found in northern Indiana and southern Michigan. Your school board are gentlemen who are very careful guardians of your most sacred public interests, your city schools. They aim to be liberal, but not extravagant. This is clearly shown in the salaries which they pay their teachers. No city in this region, the size of Auburn, has better teachers for less money. In fact, no city has better teachers at any price. Your school board is wise in thinking that a poor teacher is dear at the lowest wages, while a good teacher is cheap at even a liberal salary.

It is wise to economize in a great many other ways before lowering the wages of worthy teachers. It is wise to remember that while there are few indeed of really good teachers; also that there are numerous wide-awake cities fishing constantly for these few really good teachers. Auburn is fortunate in having a board that knows enough to keep the good teachers and having good teachers who are wise enough to stay at even fairly moderate wages. The writer has spent two days in visiting your magnificent schools; and he thinks, after witnessing the great efficiency of the different departments that it would be a public calamity for you to lose the valuable services of any one of your noble corps of faithful teachers for the purpose of saving a few dollars. A harmonious school, such as you are blessed with is a great public blessing-one which is not fully appreciated until it is gone. We find every department of your school in excellent condition reflecting great credit upon your cultured, efficient superintendent for his great abilities as a general manager, and giving much credit to each teacher for the skillful management. While your charming high school, reaching far out into the county for patronage, testifies clearly to the ability of its principal and his assistants, the pupils of all departments are courteous and genteel in school and on the streets. We have been in your city for twelve weeks, and we have not witnessed a single discourteous act from a pupil of your schools in all that time. One can tell the kind of a school you have from the conduct of the children on the streets, which has certainly been superb. Last, but not least, your janitor keeps things neat as a pin. We cannot close without frankly expressing our admiration of the excellent public sentiment of this city in favor of your noble schools. This after all is the sum of the whole matter. Cherish it and God will continue to bless you.

BURGLARS ARE BURGLING.

Thursday night, burglars broke into Leighty & McNabb's meat market at the south end and went through the contents pretty thoroughly. They broke open the money drawer, but no money was there. They also broke into the cellar of the Watson House and overhauled it generally. It is not however, believed they got anything. It is probably the work of tramps who often are pretty numerous in the neighborhood of our railway stations.

Winona Assembly.

A visit to Winona Assemby now in session at Eagle Lake near Warsaw will surprise one who has not been there for a year or two.

Not only have extensive improvements been made, but the presence of many hundreds of Presbyterian ministers and delegates from all over the United States and its territories, makes such a gathering as it not often seen. Except for the absence of politics i would remind one of a presidential convention. We believe the number of delegates is over 600, and besides these there are others, visitors and ministers, that must swell the number up to many thousands. And it will surprise most visitors to see what extensive preparations have been made to accommodate such an influx of strangers. Without counting on this great national assembly, the Winona Assembly and Summer School itself, required large accommodations. Even last summer it required about all the room at hotels and cottages that are now required.

A large addition was made to the fine hotel already on the grounds, and then the great "Woman's Building was erected at the south end of the park and near the old exposition grounds. This has 230 good comfortable sleeping rooms, making it the largest hotel in the state. For it is a hotel, complete in all its appointments, including a large lobby and reading room, telegraph offices, a large lecture room, etc. etc. It has extensive balconies on both stories of its long front, and altogether has the appearance of an immense seaside hotel. The original hotel on the grounds now has 160 rooms, making a total of 390 rooms in there two buildings alone. Then there are about 100 cottages along the bluff, in which at all times, several hundred can get room. There is the large Assemby Building capable of seating many thousands in comfort having good opera chairs both in the body and gallery. Besides hotels, these are large and excellent restaurants, where good meals at reasonable rates may be had. There is also a large, two story building, having offices in the second story and store rooms below. The stores have various supolies needed on the grounds and a large "Book Room" in which the Assembly society keeps a stock of choice books on sale for the benefit of students at the summer school, and for ministers at meetings like this. Everything is at reasonable prices and their sales are good. All along the lower part of the grounds are rows of little buildings named for the various colleges in the country, and used as headquarters for their students at the summer school. The grounds have been extended and beautified and numerous new cottages built. The stock of the Assembly has proved a good investment and is paying dividends. Our people should go over there while the meeting lasts, the fare for round trip from Abuburn being but $1.60. The Assembly will close Monday evening, and will be followed by the state meeting of Women's Clubs.

GOOD STREETS.

The first requisite is good drainage. The second, a good road-bed, then the material, crushed stone in the proper quantity and depth well pounded, or rolled down, brick or asphalt. Gravel we have not in the necessary quantity and of proper quality. The principal streets, Main and Seventh should be paved from curb to curb in the business part of town, then at least a 16-foot roadway to the depots.

The other most traveled streets should have a 16-foot roadway of the cheapest and best material or a steel wagon way of say 8 foot as is in use in many localities with great satisfaction.

Granted that the town of Auburn is not able, at present, to inaugurate a general reconstruction of our streets as to drainage, grading and paving, but could we not make a small begining by paving well, one or two squares in the heart of the business portion, say from the National Bank corner to Hebels' and the Farmers Bank corner. This would be, at least, a starter, and in the interest of every taxpayer of Auburn, then as the times improve and the people realize the many advantages of a systematic plan of improvement to the streets, branch out in the mostneeded directions. Let us, at least, agitate this matter and get the views of our business men on this all-important sucject, the most important, in my opinion, now before our local population, the subject of good streets and roads.

THE DeKALB BOY.

Willis B. Powell, formerly of the Herald office at Garrett, is still pushing to the front. The last we hear from him, he is owner and publisher of the Lacon Journal, published at Lacon, Ill. It is an old, well established paper, and Will has just got out a mammoth illustrated edition on pink paper, to celebrate its 60th anniversary. The date of this issue is May 13, 1897, and Will has a copy of the first issue, May 13, 1837. This first issue states they have received no mails for two weeks on account of high water. It must have been a rainy season like the present one.

COURT.

The case of vs Rowe was closed up Wednesday evening and the jury retired at about 7 p. m. They wrestled with the case all night, and till ten this forenoon, when they brought in a verdict that gave plaintiff the principal and interest of the note in dispute, amounting to $280 and over. They also allow him attorney fees of $20.

The next case called is that of Howey vs Myers & Mounts, to get back an attorney fee of $20 she paid them. It appears that she held a note of $200 against a man named E. Furnish which Myers & Mountz undertook to put into a judgment for her, and did so, and were allowed by the court, an attorney fee of 10 per cent. This note it is claimed that Furnish paid including the interest and attorney fees. But Mrs. Howey says Myers & Mountz charged her an attorney fee also, of 20 per cent and got it, She now sues to have it paid back. Her attorneys are Link & Sharpless, while J. W. Baxter is helping Myers & Mountz. It is a jury case.

THURSDAY.

The case of Mrs. Howey vs Myers & Mountz to collect back what she believed an extra charge of attorney fees, was finished up, and Mrs. Harvey was given a verdict for $10. She had claimed $20.

To day came up the case of Hatch vs Wm Seeley guardian of the two Lesure women who are regarded as non compos. Mr. and Mrs. Hatch had agreed with Mr. Seeley to take care of the two women for a certain price. Now, they ask for more pay, as the condition of Mr. Seeley's two wards was worse than they had supposed. It was shown that one of the women had sore feet, caused by some injury, the bones protruding and flesh sloughing off. Her ears and throat were also badly affected. Much trouble was required to dress these, though she seemed now getting better. Mr. Hartman and Gen. Blair represent the plaintiff and Rose & Rose are for Mr. Seeley's side of the case.

NINE MEN DEAD.

A Terrible Locomotive Collision at American Falls, Idaho.

A head-end collision between freight and passenger trains at American Falls, Idaho, caused the death, so far as known, of nine men and the serious injury of eight others. Two of the latter will die. The westbound passenger train was waiting for the freight at American Falls, standing in front of the station building. The freight, coming east, ran away on the hill west of the Falls. It is thought the air brakes were tampered with. The freight, which was running fifty miles an hour, crashed into the passenger train which was already backing up right in front of the station. Two men were on the station platform and one was killed, the other fatally injured. The station building was shattered. Both engines were converted into scrap iron and twenty freight cars were piled up in a heap. Eight box car passengers—sheep shearers and tramps—were crushed to death. Five bodies so far have been taken out. George Moore, the engineer of the freight, is seriously injured.

PLAN A TELEPHONE WAR.

Managers of the Independent Companies Meet.

An important meeting of independent telephone managers was held at Fort Wayne, Ind., and a committee appointed to organize a meeting of all independent companies in the United States to combine together in opposition to the Bell Company. George W. Beers, President of the Home Telephone Company of Fort Wayne, was instrumental in getting up the organization. Judge R. S. Taylor, counsel for the United States, was retained as permanent counsel and made a long report to the members of the meeting. The gist of his report was that the suit has been of great benefit to the independent companies, giving them opportunity to enter the field and keep at bay for four years the Bell Company. In that time they had enlisted the patronage of the people and gained their friendship and placed them in condition to make a strong fight against the old company.

The next meeting will be held in Pittsburgh in thirty days, to take further steps to make a National organization.

MEN OF GOD CONVENE.

PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT EAGLE LAKE.

Legacies to Be Expended for Current Work Hereafter—Southern Assembly Discussed Women in the Pulpit—Reformed Church on the Work in India.

Presbyterian Assemblies.

The governing body of the Presbyterian Church, the general assembly, has been holding its one hundred and ninth annual session at Eagle Lake, Ind. This convention is one of the most important religious convocations in the country: It represents nearly 8,000 congregations, comprising almost 1,000,000 church members. These are scattered in every State in the Union. So great a church must needs exercise a powerful influence for good. Besides its home church work, it carries on a missionary organization covering fifteen countries, for which purpose there was contributed in 1896 the sum of $3,643,230.

REV. DR. JACKSON, MODERATOR.

THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY GROUNDS.

Its home missionary work is conducted by eight powerful boards. The assembly this year concerned itself mainly with routine business affairs.

The assembly was opened with prayer by Dr. Arthur J. Brown, secretary of the board of foreign missions. The devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. John L. Withrow, the retiring moderator. The scriptures were read by Dr. George L. Springing of Orange, N. J., and the assembly was led in prayer by the Rev. Dr. "Father" Byron Sunderland of Washington. The opening sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. Dr. John L. Withrow, was upon the "Chiefest Grace of Christianity," and was based on first Peter, fourth chapter and eighth verse.

At the close of the sermon, the assembly was constituted with prayer by the retiring moderator.

Dr. Sheldon Jackson, the United States commissioner of education in Alaska and one of the most widely known home missionary workers in the whole church, was elected moderator.

The gavel was presented to Moderator Jackson by ex-President Benjamin Harrison on behalf of the Presbyterians of Indiana. The donor spoke at length upon the symbolism of the woods used in its construction, and the moderator replied in a few appropriate words. The moderator announced chairmen of committees, and afterward first order of the morning was made report of committee of eleven on Presbyterian building in New York.

The financial statement showed that 90 per cent of the office portion of the building was already rented. On April 1 actual rental amounted to $82,438 out of total rental value in entire building of $125,353, or over 65 per cent. On above basis income account showed credit balance of $707 over all expenses. When entirely rented there will be a net income of $43,000, or 5 per cent on investment of boards on building. The cost of building was $1,760,000.

The annual report of the board of ministerial relief shows receipts of the last year to be $61,000, with expenditures of $182,000. While the permanent fund now amounts to over $1,500,000, it is considered too small owing to the increase in the number of applicants. Collections from churches and Sunday schools are gradually falling off, being decreased nearly $25,000 a year since 1888, showing all the worse when it is considered that the church is one-fourth larger and the collections one-quarter less than nine years ago. The average gifts of communicants have fallen from 13 cents to about 7½ cents each in that time. What makes the showing still worse is the fact that in 1888 but 564 families were under the care of the board and last year it had 835. The entire cash receipts from all sources, including interest, is $197,995, less than 4 per cent of the sum being used for expenses. The board is compelled to report an indebtedness of $30,000 due to the permanent funds.

DIVINES WHO HAVE BEEN MODERATORS.

Dr. Craig [1893]. Dr. Johnson [1881]. Dr. Marquis [1889].

After reviewing the work of the year the committee recommended approval of a change of rule by which legacies will be expended for current work instead of being invested in the permanent funds. Efforts were recommended to increase contributions to this fund. The selection of Dr. Benjamin L. Agnew of Philadelphia as secretary of the board was approved.

Southern Assembly.

The Southern assembly at Charlotte, N. C., after the usual devotional exercises, received and referred various communications. The committee on Bible and overtures made a partial report. It recommended that women be forbidden the use of pulpits for public addresses to mixed audiences, and that it be pronounced improper to give notices of such meetings. This precipitated a lively debate. Dr. Pitzer took the position that while the Bible absolutely forbade female ordination it did not forbid all kinds of public testimony by woman. Dr. Walden and Dr. Smoot strongly advocated the adoption of the report. The order of the day put an end to the debate.

Dr. McLean of the American Bible Society made a stirring appeal in behalf of the institution, whose labors, he said, were essential to the doctrine and activities of the church in America and abroad. The assembly then listened to Dr. Daniel on polity and worship in connection with Westminster celebration.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIANS.

General Synod of the Church Convenes in Pittsburg.

At the session of the general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church in Pittsburg, Rev. Thomas Peebles of Minneapolis was unanimously elected moderator. Rev. James Y. Boyer of Philadelphia was again chosen as stated clerk and Rev. J. H. Kendall of Tarentum, Pa., assistant clerk. The subject of foreign missions was taken up, and Rev. Dr. George W. Scott spoke again on the work in India. Some of the stations, he said, were self-supporting, and the Christian Endeavor Society had been started with the help of the natives.

The report of the treasurer of the board of education, which was next presented, showed receipts of $5,246.04. Of this amount $4,000 was the Gibson bequest for the Cedarville (O.) college. The committee on finance appointed to raise an amount sufficient to defray the expenses of the general synod advised that each congregation be assessed to pay the expenses of the delegates, and that a special taxation be made pro rata upon the membership of the churches.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIANS.

The Sixty-seventh General Assembly Meets in Chicago.

The sixty-seventh general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church met in Chicago with about 250 delegates present, representing twenty-five States and territories, most of them, however, coming from the South. It is the first time in the history of this denomination that it has come as far north as Chicago to hold its annual assembly. Retiring Moderator Rev. A. W. Hawkins of Decatur, Ill., called the assembly to order in First Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Stewart avenue and Sixty-fourth court. One of the features of the assembly was the dedication of the church in which the meetings were held and which was recently completed.

His education was obtained at Hobart and Yale Colleges, and after his graduation from the latter in 1853 he spent two years in Europe, being attached to the American legation at St. Petersburg when the Crimean war was in progress. He returned to America in 1856 and the following year accepted a professorship in the University of Michigan. In 1862 he returned to Syracuse and the next four years represented Onondaga County in the State Senate. In 1867 he was made president of Cornell University, being the first person selected for that position, and for eighteen years he filled it with zeal and distinction. While serving in this capacity he represented the United States as a commissioner in Santo Domingo in 1871 and from 1879 to 1881 was minister to Germany. He resigned the Cornell presidency in 1885. In 1892 he was appointed minister to Russia by President Harrison and resigned in 1894. Recently he has served in the Venezuelan Boundary Commission. He is a powerful writer and the author of several books and essays.

Detailed Proceedings of Senate and House—Bills Passed or Introduced in Either Branch—Questions of Moment to the Country at Large.

The Legislative Grind.

Representative McMillin Monday introduced in the House a resolution providing for the consideration of a Senate resolution recognizing the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents "from day to day until disposed of." The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules. The resolution appropriating $50,000 for the relief of distressed American citizens in Cuba reached the White House at 12:20 o'clock, just as soon as it could be sent up after being signed by both houses, while they were in open session. The President signed the resolution immediately. The conferees on the sundry civil appropriation bill have agreed. The most important amendment to the bill was that revoking the order of President Cleveland of Feb. 22, 1897, setting apart 21,000,000 acres of lands as forest reservations. The appropriation for Pearl harbor, Hawaii, is reduced to $10,000. The Senate amendment for improving Salmon bay, Washington, is stricken out. The appropriation for a Government exhibit at the Omaha exposition is left at $200,000, the $75,000 increase of the Senate being stricken out. The amendment for investigation of sugar production remains in the bill. The appropriation for the improvement of the lower Mississippi River is increased to $2,933,333. The net reduction from the Senate amendments is $500,000. The Mobile bay improvement is made $25,000, instead of $40,000 inserted by the Senate. The total of the bill as agreed to is $53,622,651.

The debate on the tariff bill began in the Senate Tuesday with crowded galleries and a large attendance of Senators and the tariff leaders of the House. Mr. Aldrich, Mr. Vest and Mr. Cannon were the speakers. Early in the day Mr. Mallory, the new Senator from Florida, was sworn in and took his seat. Senator Cullom introduced by request a bill to amend the interstate commerce law. The bill prescribes relations for pooling, requiring that pooling contracts shall not extend beyond five years and that they shall name the maximum and minimum rates to be charged, requiring the approval of the interstate commerce commission before the agreements can become effective. The bill provides for a complete revision of the interstate commerce law. The House was not in session.

The Senate Wednesday resumed consideration of the tariff. Mr. Vest, opposition leader, moved a reduction in the duties upon boracic acid, and was defeated, 34 to 20. The debate was participated in by Senators Vest, Jones of Arkansas, Aldrich, Perkins, White, Caffery, Gray, and Stewart. Mr. White, a Democratic member of the Finance Committee, opposed Mr. Vest's amendment, urging that the California industry required the rate allowed by the committee. Seven paragraphs of the bill were considered during the day, the committee being sustained in each instance. The resolution was agreed to authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to employ any suitable ship in forwarding relief supplies to India. The House was not in session.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Guileless Farmers in Many States Are Heavily Victimized—Sisters of Charity at Fort Wayne Deny Hiding an Illinois Man's Sweetheart.

Gold Brick Men Secure $150,000.

Indianapolis authorities claim they have unearthed a gold brick trust which has been operating for three years from Indianapolis as headquarters. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is placed as the trust's profits from guileless farmers. David Murray, one of the accused, is under arrest for return to Sandusky County, Ohio. His neighbors thought him a commercial traveler for an Eastern firm. The gang is wanted in Ohio for beating John Bright, near Troy, out of $5,000 on the tin box scheme; for catching William Jones, near Chillicothe, for $7,000 by the same method; for swindling Mrs. Disley, near Sandusky, out of $4,000 with a gold brick; for catching John Crole, near Toledo, for $6,000 on the box game, and a farmer named Mercer, near Huron, for $5,000, and John Druckenmiller, near Fremont, for $3,000 by the same game. In Indiana they sold a gold brick to a farmer near South Bend for $7,000, and have swindled the following people by their favorite tin box game: Oliver P. Brown, Montezuma, for $7,000; John Catt, Greenfield, for $4,000; a farmer near Bloomington for $6,000. They got William Beck, near Champaign, Ill., for $5,000, and have other indictments hanging over them in Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Vermont.

Unable to Find His Betrothed.

The habeas corpus of Joseph Slomenski of Chicago against the Poor Handmaids of Christ in Fort Wayne, in which the petitioner stated that the sisters were holding Clara Wagner of Peru, Ill., against her will, came up before Judge Dawson. Attorney John Morris, representing the sisters, presented an affidavit that the girl is not now nor was she at the commencement of proceedings with the Poor Handmaids of Christ and as the girl could not be found the habeas corpus was inoperative. Slomenski threatens to continue his search until he has located his alleged fiancee, who he believes is not far from Fort Wayne.

All Over the State.

At Anderson, the Indiana Spiritualists' Association took steps toward the erection of a college and $3,500 was pledged. They need about $6,000 more to begin building.

Charles Glessner, Fort Wayne correspondent for the Kansas City Sun and Indianapolis People, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for attempting to blackmail Valorous Brown.

Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, the female suffragist of Lafayette, appeared at the polls in 1894 and demanded permission to deposit her ballot in that election. She was refused and brought suit against the election officers, but was beaten in the lower court and also on appeal. She filed a petition for a rehearing, but Friday it was overruled and her hopes of suffrage under the present Indiana constitution are blasted. The court holds that the privilege is to be enjoyed by males only.

Mail has been missing regularly for the past month from certain boxes at the Anderson postoffice. Ferris Lancaster and Thayer Thomas, aged 5 and 6 years respectively, were caught in the act of rifling several letters, which they confessed to having taken from the boxes in question. There were several checks and drafts, one for $100, and many business letters of importance were found. They claim this was the first time they had indulged in the thievery. They were taken in charge by the police, but were later released, their families and age protecting them. The case may, however, be taken up by the Government.

Eighteen Anderson property owners, against whom the receiver of the American Building and Loan Company of Chicago has brought foreclosures on loans made by that company, effected an organization and will fight foreclosure. A test will be made of the foreclosure against Michael Kenney. He borrowed $800 and paid back $600 and the 15 per cent interest. The receiver's demand is for the entire $800 and interest. The fight will be made on the grounds of illegal interest, the State laws limiting interest to 6 per cent. The case is of great importance all over the State. The same company had probably 5,000 loans in Indiana, all of which are being foreclosed.

Insurance companies who carried risks amounting to $20,000 on the life of the late Dr. W. A. Dunn, long a practicing physician in Wabash, whose death occurred in March at Naples, Italy, have declined to pay the policies on the ground of insufficient proof of death. The doctor was seized with Roman fever at Naples. His demise was sudden, and the remains were placed aboard a steamer and brought direct to America, only two of the ship's officers knowing that the box contained his remains. Certificates of death were forwarded to the insurance companies, but they decline to pay until absolute evidence of Dr. Dunn's death is furnished them.

A case which will determine the right of corporations to harvest ice from small bodies of water without compensation to persons owning land adjacent has been brought in the Laporte Circuit Court by William Zahert, who lays claim to $10,000 damages for such infringement by the John Hilt Ice Company. The Hilt company cut ice from the lake in proximity to Zahert's land, and this test case has been brought to determine the legal status of such action. Icemaking is the great winter industry in northern Indiana, and a decision awarding damages to Zahert will be followed by almost endless litigation, which would affect large Chicago corporations owning immense warehouses in Laporte and St. Joseph Counties.

At Valparaiso, the large lumber yards and mills of Henderlong Bros. & O'Neill were totally destroyed by fire, together with the woodwork for the new government building at South Bend, for which they had the contract. The loss is estimated at $25,000, with $5,000 insurance.

The Indiana Supreme Court has denied the defendants a rehearing in the case of the Auditor of Tippecanoe County against the estate of Job M. Nash, who, it was discovered, had sequestered about $280,000 from taxation for a period of twelve years. The court holds that the Auditor of the county acted within his authority.

Jimmie Garver, a lad 9 years old, at Bunker Hill, shot and literally tore off the head of his brother, aged 3 years. The boy was undecided whether a gun he was playing with was loaded or not.

Twenty policy holders in the Indiana Mutual Life Insurance Company filed a petition in the Circuit Court at Indianapolis asking Judge Harvey to order the receiver to call a meeting of all the policy holders for the election of officers. It is claimed that no officers of the company ever legally existed, and the petitioners say that the business can be conducted according to law and without loss if the court will permit the election of new officers and turn the property over to them.

Still Waters.

Here, dreamily, with soft deceits,
The pool repeats
A summer sky; bright clouds that pass
On this brown glass.
Here imaged is the phantom moon
Of afternoon
And a swift bird that dips its wing,
Home hastening.

Soon, yonder, where the path is laid
In hush of shade,
A glimmering gown, a dusky tress,
My sight will bless;
I'll lean above an olive cheek,
So cool and slick;
And eyes where veiled reflections shine
Of love in mine.

Little Heroine-Cat.

BY LEANDER S. KEYSER.

They were "thrashing" over at Neighbor Shanewalter's that afternoon. The Shanewalters lived only half a mile from the Bensons as the crow or the bee flies; but around by the road, as men walk or ride, it was more than three-quarters of a mile.

As Katie Benson stood on the portico, looking across the intervening valley along the crow-and-bee line, she could see the straw-carrier of the thrashing machine pointing obliquely upward out of the back door of the barn, while the straw floated in ragged-edge clouds of yellow from its upper end and then dropped airily upon the great round stack where three or four men were laboriously trudging about to trample down the straw.

Now and then a cloud of dust and chaff would pour out of the door, driven by the fresh breeze, and completely enveloped the workmen on the stack. At intervals the hum of the machine would reach Katie's ears. One of the men was her father—he was building the stack—and she wished that she was over there herself, jumping about on the springy straw.

But it was Katie's duty to stay at home that afternoon with her sister Liza, two years older than she, and Neddie, the "baby" of the family, 4 years of age. Shortly after dinner Mrs. Benson had said:

"Now, girls, I must go over and help Mrs. Shanewalter to cook supper for the thrashing hands. Stay close to the house all the afternoon. Don't go away for anything. And take good care of Neddie."

"Yes, of course, you can play anywhere about the house."

"And mayn't we haul Neddie in his little wagon out in the road?" persisted Liza.

"If you promise not to go more than a few rods from the gate."

"Oh, we promise, don't we, Katie?"

Katie nodded her promise readily enough, but there was a strained expression on her pale little face as if she were trying to suppress some agitating emotion.

"What's the matter, Katie?" her mother queried. "You're not afraid to stay with Liza and Neddie, are you?"

A little red rose-bud suddenly blossomed out on each of Katie's pale cheeks and her eyes scrutinized a crevice in the floor into which she was trying to thrust her bare little toes.

"No—I guess not—just a little," she stammered, in a self-contradictory way.

"You needn't be afraid at all, Katie," said Mrs. Benson, putting all the assurance she could into her tones. "There isn't anything to harm you."

"Oh, Katie's such a 'fraidy-cat," scoffed Liza. "She'd be scared at a mouse's shadow, so she would, if she was alone. The other day she saw a little snake in the yard, two rods away from her, and what do you think she did? She just stood in her tracks an' screamed as loud as ever she could, till I got a stick an' killed the snake. Pooh! It wouldn't have hurt her."

"I can't help being afraid of things," Katie sobbed.

"What's the use to be afraid!" boasted Liza. "I'm not at all afraid of anything. I wouldn't be such a 'fraidy-cat as Katie is! I'd have more spunk!"

Liza's lofty way of putting her own heroism in contrast with Katie's timidity stung her little sister to the quick, bringing hot tears to her eyes. She knew she was a "'fraidy-cat," and that was just what made her sensitive to her sister's jibes.

For awhile after her mother had gone, Katie could not revive her courage. She stood on the portico, and gazed longingly across the valley at the thrashers. Every sound about the house and barn startled her, and she had visions of tramps and robbers galore, if not of wild and savage beasts pouncing down upon the unprotected children left alone in charge of the large, rambling farm-house. Liza guyed her for awhile, making her weep still more.

But presently a game of hide-and-seek in the large, bushy yard drove all the little "'fraidy-cat's" fears out of her mind. A jolly afternoon they were spending, sometimes putting Neddie into his small wagon and pulling him back and forth along the road in front of the house. The wagon was an old-fashioned, home-made one, with a rough box and pole and heavy little wheels hewn out of a thick board; but it was strong and serviceable, and no doubt pleased the children fully as well as the trig express-wagons of today please our own boys and girls.

At about half-past three they were playing with the wagon in the road. Katie began to feel a little tired with her vigorous romping, and presently she said to Liza:

"I'm going to sit on our post and rest awhile."

She opened the gate and stepped into the yard, and then followed a little path winding through a thick clump of rose bushes and berry stalks to one corner of the yard, where a couple of steps enabled her to climb to the top of a large fence-post. This was a favorite perch for the children when wearied with their play. The tall, sharp pickets prevented their climbing down on the outside into the road, but made a convenient support for a tired back. Perched on top of the post, Katie watched Liza and Neddie playing in the road, her cheery laugh often ringing out at the roly-poly little fellow's comical looks and conduct.

But suddenly there seemed to be a change in all their surroundings. A strange obscurity was falling over the landscape, wrapping everything in gloom.

"Oh! oh!" cried Liza, "it's getting dark!"

Such really seemed to be the case. A kind of flickering twilight enveloped the earth, filling the children's hearts with dismay. The chickens began to fly up into the trees, intending to go to roost, as if they thought the evening had come. Brindle and Spot, the two gentle milk-cows standing at the bars of their pasture-field, began to low.

"Look, look at the sun!" screamed Liza, growing pale with terror.

Sure enough, the sun had turned almost red, and—oh! oh!—a huge black sphere was slowly creeping over its disk and blotting out its light. The children had often read and talked about the end of the world and the Judgment Day, and such thoughts had always filled them with awe and terror.

"The world's coming to an end! The world's—coming—to an end!" cried Liza. "Oh! oh! o-o-h! Come, come, Katie, let's run over to Shanewalter's and find papa and mamma."

Panic-stricken, Liza seized the pole of the wagon, in the box of which sat Neddie too much frightened to cry, and then she ran, as fast as her nimble feet could carry her, down the road in the direction of the neighboring farm. She did not wait for her little sister perched on the fence-post.

Katie was almost paralyzed with fright as the darkness gathered about her. She could dimly see Liza and Neddie and the wagon speeding down the slope, but the high palings, sharpened at the top, made it impossible for her to climb over into the road. By the time she had clambered from her perch into the yard, and had shouldered her way through the bushes, her brave little sister was scampering far away.

Her first impulse was to dash out of the gate and follow; but, with all her cowardice, Katie was an obedient child, and even in her intense agitation she remembered that her mother had bidden her and Liza in no case to leave the house.

How she wished she were a brave girl—brave and fearless like Liza, and not such a "fraidy-cat!" Still, she would do as her mother had bidden her, and if the great Judge came, he would find her at her post, as the preacher had said last Sunday in his sermon. This resolve infused new courage into her palpitating heart, and slipping back from the gate, she found a cosy hiding-place among the bushes, where she sat and tremblingly kept watch in the shadows. She lisped a prayer to God to make her brave and forgive all her wrong-doings.

"I believe its getting lighter," she whispered to herself a few moments later.

Looking up, she saw that the shadow on the sun was gradually moving across it, exposing a part of its red disk. A few more moments of breathless waiting, and then the twilight was succeeded by sunlight almost as radiant as it had been before the eclipse came. For, of course, it was only an eclipse of the sun, although Katie did not know at the time what the strange phenomenon meant.

"Maybe it wasn't the Judgment Day, for all," she thought. "Well, if 'twasn't, I'm glad I stayed at home, any way, and didn't run away from the house. I'm glad I obeyed mamma."

The chickens began to crane their necks in wonder, and, finding that daylight had come again, they flew down to the ground, and resumed their picking and scratching. Katie was bravely recovering from her fright, when she saw something that almost made her pulse stop beating. A rough-looking man in seedy clothing came stealthily through the front gate, and looking suspiciously this way and that, walked along the path to the front door. Through the aperture in the screening bushes Katie saw him glance around narrowly, then turn the door-knob, and slip into the house, closing the door quietly behind him.

For the timid girl this was the climax. What in the world should she do? The man was, no doubt, a robber. He might steal something valuable from the house—one of the best suits in the closet, her mother's silver spoons just bought a week ago or her father's gold watch, which she had heard him say he would leave at home lest it might be broken at the rough work of the afternoon.

Should she run over to neighbor Shanewalter's and give the alarm? Before she could do that, she reflected, the thief would have ransacked the house. Couldn't she—her pulses beat quickly at the thought—in some way prevent him from carrying out his thieving purpose? It frightened her half to death to think of it; and yet if she could not foil him in some way, no one else could. Everything depended on her coolness and courage. She knew that.

She half started to her feet; then dropped behind the bushes again, the prey of the most terrible panic, her heart leaping into her throat. But presently she rallied her courage, for great, heroic resolve had taken possession of her frail frame. She would be a "fraidy-cat" no longer. She would prove herself a heroine. Now was her chance.

On her hands and knees she crept along the edge of the bushes, keeping herself well screened, until she reached the kitchen door. Slipping through it, she stood still and listened breathlessly, but could hear no sound. Evidently the robber was in a distant part of the house.

With trembling hands she pushed open the door leading into the sitting-room, and then stood still again, listening intently. A moment later she almost screamed out with terror, for she could hear the muffled sound of a footstep in the next room, which was the spare bedroom, and then the creak of an opening drawer reached her ear.

"He's getting at the bureau," she thought. "Papa's watch is in one of the drawers, I think. The robber musn't find it; I'll not let him!" she added, a wave of heroism sweeping through her bosom.

She hesitated no longer. Her whole being was mastered by one supreme purpose—to save her father's gold watch. Swiftly and noiselessly she glided into the hallway, on the wall of which hung her father's shot-gun on two stout wooden hooks. She knew that it was loaded. Under the circumstances she felt justified in touching it, although she had never dared to touch it before. She sprang upon a chair standing beneath the weapon, whose muzzle pointed directly over the top of the door of the room in which burglar was plying his business.

Yes, she could reach the gun. It took but a moment to cock the hammer, as she had often seen her father do; then, bracing her nerves by a supreme mental effort, she placed her slender forefinger against the trigger, closed her eyes, and pressed with all her might. There followed a deafening explosion and a blinding flash, and the load of shot was buried in the opposite wall. The concussion almost stunned the girl, but she had self-possession enough to spring from the chair and dodge into a dark corner for safety, should the robber come into the hall.

A moment of silence ensued, and then she heard a few heavy foot-falls in the next room, followed by a loud crash of broken glass, and she knew that the terror-stricken robber had leaped through the window and made his escape. Her plan, which had been simply to frighten him away, had succeeded, and her heart bounded with exultation.

Through one of the windows she saw the bold robber scampering across the meadow toward a tract of woods. Then she rushed out of the front door and dived in among the bushes, where she lay trembling with excitement and fright for half an hour. Then her father, mother, Liza and little Neddie returned, her parents having become uneasy about her.

"Oh, papa! mamma!" she cried, laughing and crying hysterically, as she sprang from her hiding-place, "I scared him away! I scared him away!"

"What do you mean, Katie?" they asked in surprise.

"I scared the robber away;" and she quickly sketched her adventure.

Her father hastened into the house, and examined the dismantled bureau.

"You dear, brave girl!" he said, pressing her to his bosom; "you frightened the rascal away just in time. He had almost found the watch. See, it was under the pile of clothes that he was tumbling aside when you scared him by firing off the old gun. You're a genuine heroine, Katie."

Her mother, too, had to kiss and hug her.

"And nobody'll call me 'fraidy-cat any more, will they?" she asked demurely.

"No, indeed," declared her father, his face beaming with smiles. "You're a soldier—as brave a soldier as ever fought on a battlefield; and, more than that, you know how to obey orders when—when other people run from the post of duty."

As he spoke he looked slyly at Liza.

Evolution of the Shoe.

In the eleventh century various materials were used to make shoes, fine kid leather being then invented and sold for good round sums.

A sacred song says: "How graceful are thy steps in sandals, O Princess!" an allusion to the fact that the Hebrews enriched the hitherto plain footgear with strings of red, yellow and purple ribbons, which they crossed in charming style over the gleaming white skin of the arch of the foot.

There was a time when shoes were ornamented with precious jewels, gold and silver embroidery studded with pearls and, wonderful to relate, had golden soles. Each sex and class wore different shoes, and if a man changed his station in life that fact was expressed by the phrase, "he has changed his shoes."

The Syrians wore yellow shoes. The Greeks and Romans improved the sandal and invented different forms and shades to be worn by the different classes. Plebians wore black shoes with one ribbon; senators and patricians wore red and white shoes fastened with four ribbons. Only slaves and philosophers walked barefoot. The first Christians also walked barefoot.

In the twelfth century boots and sandals were worn, the clergy using the latter exclusively. The next hundred years saw many improvements as well as the introduction of the pointed toe shoe, which was afterwards so strongly attacked by the clergy. Fashion prevailed and the whole civilized world wore the shoe "whose points bend." This point was like a bird's beak—plain people wore the beak half a foot long; more important personages extended the beak to two feet, while princes of the blood added a half foot to that. The beak grew so long that it was fastened to the knee by a narrow gold chain so that the wearer of these monstrosities could walk. This long and uncomfortable toe was discarded in a hundred years and the broad toe, sometimes a foot wide, came in. Then the stilt shoe became the style and heels were worn so high that we cannot understand how the fashionables of that time could walk at all. The most perfect and graceful shoes were worn in the seventeenth century. They were of velvet and brocades. Red heels were the rage in the time of Louis XIV. and during the revolution the shoe with the buckle disappeared. Napoleon I. introduced the patent leather shoe ornamented with a gold buckle.

Horses' Keen Instinct.

The horse has a strong sense of smell. He will leave musty hay untouched in his bin, no matter however hungry; neither will he drink objectionable water, however thirsty. His intelligent nostril will widen, quiver over the daintiest bits offered by the fairest hands. Blind horses, Tit-Bits says, will gallop wildly about a pasture without striking the surrounding fence. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. Others will, when loosened from the stable, go to the gate of bars opening to their accustomed feed-grounds. The horse, in browsing, is guided to its choice of proper food entirely by its nostrils. Blind horses do not make mistakes in their diet. In the temple of Olympus a bronze horse was exhibited, at the sight of which real horses experienced the most violent emotions. It is said that in casting the statute a magician had thrown hippomanes upon it, which, by the odor of the plant, deceived the horses, and therein is the secret of the miracle.

Residents of Jefferson street, Topeka, Kan., have been victims of a trained or perverted dog, which stole their newspapers and took them to its master.

TYPES IN TURKEY'S ARMY AND NAVY.

THE Turk is a born soldier, and is reared with the ideas and training of a soldier. He is not a tradesman, a banker, nor a lawyer; he cares nothing about these things. He is taught that he is to be a soldier and looks forward to being killed or wounded in battle as the sure passport to the Moslem paradise, where eighty houris are to await his coming and be assigned to do his bidding. His religion teaches him that no matter what his record on earth has been, death or wounds in battle entitle him to this paradise. Do you think he is going to run away from danger? On the contrary, he courts it. That is what he is after. The English and French never gave the Turk credit for the part he played in the Crimean war. If there was an assaulting column to be made up, or any extra hazardous task to be undertaken, it usually fell to the lot of the Turkish contingent.

FREAK OF THE FLOOD.

Made a Railroad Suspension Bridge in Ohio.

One of the strange freaks of the recent flood in Ohio was in washing away all the supports of a heavy railroad bridge, and leaving the bridge itself practically unharmed, suspended in midair. A pier was thus transformed into a suspension bridge in a night.

This bridge spanned the Muskingum River, near Clarkesville, Ohio, on the Cincinnati & Muskingum Railroad. The structure was what is known as a two-span truss bridge. Each span was 75 feet long. When the country all about was under water, the bridge stood hard and fast, for it had been strengthened to as great an extent as possible by stone piers and heavy foundations of mixed rock and earth. Finally one night the watchmen located at either end of the bridge heard a crash and a roar and the bridge moved very perceptibly. It did not seem to tilt, but rather sagged, and as the night was stormy and a hard wind blowing the railroad men made no effort to investigate until daylight came to their assistance.

When they did finally look the bridge over the scene that greeted them was startling. All the supports to the bridge had been swept away for 132 feet. Despite this the railroad remained intact. What was more, they held the ties and the stringers in place. In fact, the whole roadbed of the structure seemed as solid as before the flood, except that, of course, it sagged down owing to the "slack" resulting from the giving way of the supports.

THE FLOODS MADE THIS A SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

TO SUPERSEDE STEAM.

New England Railroad Establishes the Superiority of Electricity.

The supplanting of the steam locomotive by electricity has begun. The test was made recently on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad between Hartford and New Britain, when a heavy train was hauled over ten miles in 13½ minutes with less jolting than attends ordinary steam railroad journeying. Furthermore, this means a big saving in fuel, as it requires only half as much coal to make forty-five miles by electricity as would be necessary if steam were employed.

The new appliance which will revolutionize railroading has been experimented with for three years. It was begun on the Nantasket Beach Road, which was selected because it was not believed that electricity was practicable on any road of any great length, owing to the waste of the current in transmission, which would necessitate power houses every few miles. But after many experiments the New York, New Haven and Hartford electricians discovered that by a heavy rail, that looks like a capital "A" flattened down, and laid on blocks of wood, the electrical current could be transmitted without any appreciable loss of power, and at one-fifth the cost of a trolley line. It was this discovery that caused the New Haven Road to spend so much money on the third rail system from Berlin to Hartford.

TRAIN DRAWN BY NEW MOTOR.

The third rails are laid between the running rails, and are banded together and connected by copper wires. They are not fastened to the ties, but are laid on blocks of wood. The running rails are used to carry back the return current. The trolley block consists of a flat cast iron shoe, 12x4 inches, and weighing twenty pounds. This shoe is run along in the flat top of the third rail, just as a trolley pole follows an overhead wire. Inside of this iron shoe a copper wire carries the power to the motor, which is in the truck of the car. The current used is of 600 volts, 100 more than in the overhead trolley system, and, although the third rail, which carries the current, is exposed, a shock cannot be gotten from it without touching the third rail and on of the running rails at the same time. Even then it would not be fatal. The company has fenced in all the stations and posted danger notices along the tracks to warn pedestrians and workmen.

EXECUTION BY ASPHYXIATION.

Illuminating Gas as a Means of Disposing of Criminals.

There is some talk in France of abolishing the guillotine and of substituting for it some other mode of capital punishment. At first it was thought that the verdict would be given in favor of death by electrocution, but French scientists do not seem to favor this method, claiming that as a destructive agent illuminating gas is far more swift, sure and painless than electricity, and for other reasons also is more desirable. Indeed, the opinion of French scientists seems to be that the easiest way to get rid of condemned criminals is to asphyxiate them by means of illuminating gas. M. Berthelot, than whom no one in France is better qualified to speak on the subject, is strongly in favor of this mode of capital punishment.

"There is no scientific objection to the use of illuminating gas for this purpose," he says. "Here in Paris dogs are regularly asphyxiated by means of gas. The animals are placed in a box, which is connected with a gas pipe, and they are stifled very soon after the gas is turned on. As for criminals who might be asphyxiated in this fashion, it is probable that they would suffer at least for some seconds; death would not be instantaneous. There would be contractions, spasms, and, in consequence, a momentary struggle against asphyxia, the result of which would, of course, be a certain amount of suffering. As for illuminating gas, it contains a slight proportion of oxide of carbon, and this latter element produces asphyxia almost immediately. Therefore by means of such gas we could obtain results that would be absolutely mathematical, and our condemned criminals could be put out of the world after a very brief struggle against death."

That there would be strong opposition to any change in the French law regarding executions is certain. Among the bitterest opponents would be the small storekeepers and others who reside near the Place de la Roquette, and who earn a goodly sum annually by renting their windows to persons anxious to see executions. Moreover, the guillotine is, in a sense, one of the national institutions in France, and there are thousands of patriotic Frenchmen who cannot be persuaded that it is not the best death-dealing instrument in the world.

Began Life on a Small Capital.

Two white-haired old women were sitting together in a Lake street elevated train the other afternoon and discussing their grown-up children, says a Chicago paper. The son of one of the two passengers, a dignified-looking man, sat a few seats in front of them reading a newspaper.

"Now, there is William," said the mother, nodding in the direction of the man with the paper. "See how well he has gotten along in life. He says he is worth $300,000 already, and expects to double it if he lives fifteen years longer."

"Yes," said the other old lady, "and he began life in a very small way, didn't he?"

"Well, I should say he did," was the answer. "He only weighed six pounds, and John and I never thought we would raise him." The old lady never understood why the passengers smiled when they heard her words.

The owl's wise look is the result of a physiological oddity, his eyes being fixed immovably in their sockets.

A WONDERFUL DOG.

Boz Could Do Things Which Astonished Kings and Queens.

Old Boz, the famous and world-renowned sable Scotch collie, is dead. That simple sentence will cause many a regret to thousands of hearts, even if Boz was only a dog. He was better known than thousands of men that think themselves eminent. He once slept in Windsor Castle and was petted by Queen Victoria. The Prince of Wales offered $5,000 for him after witnessing his marvelous tricks. The dog walked through the Vatican. He was entertained by the President of France, the Czar of the Russias, King Oscar of Norway and Sweden. In fact, he had been to almost every foreign court and had received the attention of dignitaries in every department of life's activity in this and other lands. President Cleveland stroked his shaggy coat in the White House.

Boz died at San Antonio, Texas, recently. He belonged to D. H. Harris, a stock breeder at Mendon, Mich., and was 14 years of age at his death. The dog was never on public exhibition, but was the traveling companion of his owner, who took supreme delight in showing the animal to his friends.

The dog could select any card in the deck when told, and if it was not there a whine would follow. He could distinguish between colors as well as a human being. More wonderful than all, he could count money, making the proper change to an exact cent. If told to bring $31.31, or any sum from coins of various demoninations, he would do so without a mistake.

QUEEN VICTORIA WELCOMES BOZ.

When told to walk like a baby, he would creep along the floor and imitate a child to perfection. He could pretend he was lame and walk most pitiably. Boz would also wash his feet, or any one foot as directed. He would bring any object that he could carry when sent after it. When once told a person's full name he never forgot it, but would always deliver a letter or package to that very indivudual at any place he had ever visited.

When he was once taken to a place he always remembered it and would return to it if sent on an errand. Many persons who have crossed the sea on the same vessel as the dog will recall his wonderful feats performed on deck for the benefit of the sailors' relief fund. Mr. Harris had often refused $10,000 for the truly wonderful animal.

Boz leaves just as wonderful a descendant, she being Bozzie, owned by a Chicago lady. The daughter in some respects excels her sire. She cannot be puzzled in any arithmetical problem in addition, substraction, multiplication, division, or a combination of two or more of these processes in whole numbers under twenty. She gives results by barks and never makes a mistake. Several persons can hold pieces of paper with numbers on them before her. She looks at each one, designates the units by so many barks, and at the close will add the entire series and give the result by the required number of barks. Bozzie will also tell the time of day in hours by barks. She will go to any room in the house, upstairs or down, and brings any article which she is bidden.

She prays like a tramp dog, with her hind feet in a chair and her front feet on the floor. Then she prays like a pious dog, assuming a most reverential attitude, and will not move until someone says "Amen." No one need talk to her but in an ordinary tone, and she obeys at once. The two dogs perhaps never had an equal. They could perform mental operations which many human beings could not.

BOZZIE DURING A PIOUS MOMENT.

Perils of Match Making.

The white phosphorus used in the manufacture of the modern match is extremely dangerous to handle. It is volatile—that is, it gives off acrid and irritating exhalations, which, when absorbed by the workpeople, remain in the blood and in the bodily tissues, and produce the disease known as phosphorism. A worker suffering from this disease is pale, anaemic and thin, his skin has a special tint, and the odor of phosphorus can be detected even in his breath. Worse than that, this deadly drug promotes in some mysterious way the evacuation from the body of those mineral salts which are necessary to maintain the bones in good condition. The withdrawal of these salts produces in time that frightful disease which the English match-girls call "phossy-jaw," and which amounts to nothing short of the destruction of the bones of the face. Such is the deadly work of white phosphorus, which nevertheless remains incomparably the best material for the manufacture of matches.

Where Is that $2.74?

Uncle Sam's expert money handlers hope to discover $2.74 tucked away somewhere in the New York sub-treasury where it doesn't belong. They are nearly through counting the $200,000,000 in keeping of Assistant Treasurer Jordan, and that $2.74 is the only shortage up to date.

"RUTLAND" CYCLING COSTUME.

Nobby Suit Consisting of Jacket, Skirt and Knickerbockers.

One of the nobbiest cycling suits of the season is called the "Rutland." It is composed of three pieces—jacket, skirt and knickerbockers, and may be made up in any plain or novelty material. A very effective one seen recently was of a golden brown serge. The skirt was plain, and not over full, one circular gore extending across the front and sides. In length it did not reach much below the knees, knickerbockers of the same material being worn underneath. The jacket of the suit was the stylish part. It was made double-breasted, buttoned with three medium-sized buttons, with corresponding ones on the opposite side. The collar was a turn-over affair of white broadcloth, having square revers affixed to it, of the same material, edged with a narrow band of the serge. Tan leather boots and a jaunty Alpine hat, set off with red and yellow plaid bands and bows, made up a more than striking costume.

Expert Opinion.

Physicians as a class are supposed to be indifferent to poetry. They have other and more important things to think of.

"What do you think of my poems?" inquired the young man.

"They betray an astonishing ignorance of anatomy," replied his medical friend.

"But they are not supposed to be scientific, you know."

"That may be the case, but it affords no excuse for your saying they 'spring from an aching heart,' when it is so apparent that they proceed from a deranged liver."—Washington Star.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana Post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..... June 3,, 1897

Commissioners Meet.

The commissioners hold their regular session beginning next Monday. It will be a surprise though, to many who do not read the papers, should they come in then with bills and find they will have to wait for their allowance till next term. They will be disappointed. But the law says bills must be filed five days before the session begins, and the commissioners have no light to violate t e law.

Another DeKalb Man.

All last week there were rumors that another plum was ripening and almost ready to fall into the lap of a DeKalb man. But there was not enough certainty about it to warrant the DAILY in making a statement.

But on Saturday, Judge Penfield received word that President McKinley had decided to appoint him as Solicitor of the State Department. And that evening, the Judge started for Washington to investigate the matter. Of course he wanted to see whether it was or was not a desirable place. He is still there. We do not know exactly what the duties of the office are, but the title indicates a law officer, an adviser or assistant we suppose. If so, it would appear to be rather a desirable place, as the work would be right in line with his legal tastes and training. And it begins to look as if all a DeKalb man had to do to get a plum would be merely to step up and shake the tree. We congratulate the Judge.

AS TO SUGAR.

The debates on the sugar schedule in the new tariff law brings out several interesting facts in regard to sugar. The annual consumption of sugar in the United States is about 2,000,000 gross tons, of 2,240 pounds each, with a value based on foreign prices approximating $90, 000,000. If the high duties proposed in either the house or senate bill should be adopted the annual cost of sugar to consumers would be more than $160,000,000. Of the consumption of 1896, 40,000 tons, or 2 per cent were beet sugars, produced by the United States, and 243,000 tons, or 12 per cent. were sugars admitted from the Hawaiian islands free of duty under our treaty with the Hawaiian government.

The 2,000,000 tons of sugar consumed in the United states constitute nearly 30 per cent of the total consumption of the world, the total sugar crop of 1896 being approximately 7,000,000 tons, of which 4,300,000, or about 61 per cent of the whole, were beet sugars.

MIDNIGHT CALLER.

At about one o'clock this morning, Mrs. Ed. Mitchell was awakened by three or four raps on the door. She got up and loaded her six shooter revolver and stepped towards the door and asked who was there. A man replied, not giving any name, but asked her to open the door. Mrs. Mitchell informed him that she would not do it, and if he wanted to see her, the best thing he could do was to come around in daylight. At this the man walked off the porch. Mrs. Mitchell went up stairs and looked out of the window and saw that the would-be burglar had a partner. Their tracks can easily be seen in the pansy bed. One man wore a No. 10 at least. Had they tarried about her premises a few seconds longer, she would have filled them full of lead.

NEW JUNCTION P. M.

Cyrus Wyland the new postmaster at Auburn Junction took charge of the office there yesterday, and is now a full fledged postmaster. As there is to be a republican officer, the COURIER is pleased to see it go to Mr Wyland. Those who have been saying that no old soldier could get an appointment, are now at least way off. Mr. Wyland is not only an old soldier but is terribly crippled up from the bursting of a shell while facing the enemy. He was a member of the old Twenty-ninth Ind. that went from Camp Jackson at Laporte under the command of Gen. John F. Miller, afterwards U. S Senator from Oregon. Mr. Wyland served well as a soldier and we will predict that he will serve well as a postmaster.

COURT.

The Losure case was finished yesterday afternoon about three o'clock, Gen. Blair making the closing speech. The jury retired after a brief charge from the Judge, and at about five brought in a verdict giving Mrs. Hatch 50 cents a day extra, for the one year which she asked the extra pay, from Sept. 2, 1895, to Sept. 2, 1896, being $182.50 for the 365 days. It appears that under the original contract Mr. and Mrs. Hatch were to have the use of the Losure farm, for caring for the two women. This extra 50 cents a day is now allowed them, for the extra care in the case of the one who had to have her feet and ears cleansed and dressed each day.

After the Losure case was disposed of, the jury was excused until next Wednesday, at 8:30 a. m.

The case against James O. Blake before Judge Adair, is set for June 7. The case against him for perjury will be tried before Judge Marsh later on. The case against D. W. Fair and Perry Fair come up in the first week in June before Judge Adair. The conspiracy case against Fair, Borst, Sawvel and McIntosh is to come up soon after. Of course no exact date can be given for some of these as the one brought on first may take longer than was expected.

Several cases of charge of petit larceny have not panned out. These are Thomas Harrison, M. J. Ryan, Peter Conners, B. Hemingway and Frank Mills. The grand jury did not indict them and they were discharged.

Darius France on charge of burglary and larceny, being under 21, was sent to the reform school for an indefinite term of one to three years, as required by the new law. He was up for stealing meat from Eugene Wyatt.

The Newville boys, Romeo Fusselman and Mack Richmond, who are charged with burglary and larceny, are out on bail. So also is Frank Shull, of this place, accused of an attempt to poison his wife.

It will be remembered that a man and woman have been in jail on charge of living as man and wife, though not married. They came from Garrett. The woman is still in jail, but the man has been taken out by Harry Culbertson bailing him, as he was needed to work in the new hoop factory at Jasper, near Adrian. The woman seems happy, as she may be seen from the court room working and singing like a lark. May be she hopes her fellow will earn money enough to pay the preacher, and that then they can go to housekeeping in proper shape.

there had been a motion for a new trial, but this has now been withdrawn and we suppose that will end it.

W. S. Dancer and J. G. Lawhead had sued the Church of God in Jackson, for money due them. Each got a judgment of $154.

Rittenhouse vs Louisa Cherry estate, a claim for $800. The administrator, D. B. Keller, offered to allow $520. The court allowed plaintiff $702.52. In the same estate Bertha L. Miller asked for $166, and was allowed $50, and H. H. Lilly asked for $350, was offered $150, but was allowed the full claim.

John Amstutz was allowed a claim of $20 in the Wm. McKinley estate.

LAD HURT.

Yesterday afternoon a number of little boys were playing in the yards at the band sawmill and finally concluded to have some fun with the turntable. This is a circular platform onto which the men run the truck that conveys the lumber from the mill to the points where it is to be piled. If the lumber is to be taken to the right, the truck is run onto the turntable and this table then turned to the right, till its track connects with the track running to the right, and then the truck is pushed along in that direction. This circular platform, has its edge running within a couple of inches or so, of the surrounding platform. In this case, the boys were making a merry-go-round of it. H. C. Shull's youngest boy, a lad of about seven or eight, was riding around, with his legs hanging over the edge, and when he came around to the point where the two edges came closest together, his legs were cut and crushed between the rough edges of the boards. He called to the boys to stop, but they had got up steam, and the thing was not stopped till his legs had passed the danger point three times. He was released and taken home and Dr. Swarts called to dress his wounds. The Doctor found the lad's left leg badly torn above the knee and also same torn below the knee The other leg was merely jammed and bruised below the knee. His wounds were carefully dressed, and this morning he was sesting well and had rested well over night. The Doctor hope his injuries may not prove serious, although they possibly may.

THE EEL RIVER CASE.

The Eel River Railroad case came up last week in the circuit court at Kokomo as noted in the DAILY last week. It was the case so long under consideration, brought by Judge Dykeman and other citizens of Logansport and vicinity. It appears that the original charter of the Eel River road, running from Butler to Logansport, (since extended from Butler to Detroit,) had a provision in it, that if the line was ever leased to or put into control of a competing line its charter would be forfeited. A few years after it had gone into operation, it was leased to the Wabash road, which is construed to be a competing line. So this case was brought by those who did not want the road to go into the hands of the Wabash road. It has been in court off and on for several years. It was tried by a jury and the decision is that the charter is forfeited and the control of it is vested hereafter in the state of Indiana, unless this decision is reversed by the supreme court. An appeal has been taken and the supreme court has agreed to have it called up soon. If they affirm the decision of the Kokomo court, there will be one "railroad under government control," and the state will probably order it sold.

The trial was a very exciting one, both sides having able attorneys. Agent I. M. Zent of this place, who is one of the oldest agents of the line, was among the witnesses who were called there to testify as to the advantages or disadvantages of having the road controlled by the Wabash. If the title is finally vested in the state, there will likely be an entire change in the management and working of it. It is doubtful whether it will be any better for the people.

DROWNED AT HAMILTON.

Butler Record.

Tuesday about 1 o'clock p. m. Brice Snyder, of Metz, was drowned in the lake about one fourth of a mile south of cold springs. He had come there in the company of Otto Bectal, John Chandler, Wm. Enfield and Roy Robinett Monday morning.

Tuesday morning he had came to Mr Donaldson and hired a boat and started out alone to fish, the others being in separate boats a short distance from him and after fishing all forenoon he had lain down in the boat and gone to sleep as it was supposed.

In a short time his companions went to the shore and when he awoke he asked some other fishermen where the boys had gone and they told him "to the springs." He then started to that place and all at once he was seen to stand up in the boat, and then to plunge head first into the water, and when boats could get there, his hat was seen floating on the water, and soon his body was found in about eight or ten feet of water.

BUTLER.

George William Hanes an old and well well known citizen of Wilmington township, living two miles west of Butler died last Friday. His funeral, which was very largely attended took place from his late residence, last Sunday, conducted by Rev. Disbro, of the M. E. church under the auspices of the Butler Lodge No. 282, I. O. O. F. of Butler. His remains were interred in the Butler cemetery by the side of that of his brother Charles. His age was 69 years less one day. He leaves a wife and a family of grown up children.

Decoration services passed off very very pleasantly and a very large crowd of people assembled at the church to hear Rev. Disbro's discourse, which was replete with good thoughts. The ceremonies at the cemetery were solemn and impressive.

J. A. Campbell and wife together, with John Wilson, wife, and daughter Edith, were called to VanWert, Ohio, last Monday, by the death of Mrs. Emma Kalb, niece of Mr. Campbells.

—Our new marshal is doing a large amount of street cleaning.

SOME BELATED ITEMS.

It appears that some ingenious methods were used by some of our late county officers to swell their already large salaries. In Mr. Coffinberry's administration it is now found, that new town plats would be prepared and extra pay at big figures, drawn for the work. In one instance as high as $400 was charged, and afterwards that order raised to $1400. At another time there was a charge of $50 for a plan of a building. In all, there was over $7,700 to collect back in the Coffinberry matter.

As to Borst's account, there appears a total of about $8,600 charged against him, of which about $6,300 is in outstanding bad orders that the holders will lose, leaving as before reported about $2,300 to be made good by the bondsmen. Of this, the bondsmen will get back over half, from the office over and above and above the pay of the deputies. It will surprise many to know that the last bad orders issued by Borst were as late as November. He seems to have stopped at the time that the Fairs were exposed.

It appears that Sawvel's accounts foot up against him about $4,600 of of which he paid back about $2,900, leaving his bondsmen to make up about $1,700. But they are to a great extent secured by mortgages on his property. It appears that he forged between $300 and $400 after he had gone out of office.

Altogether the loss to the county, $35,000 on all these officers, is mainly made up, which will assist that much in reducing the county debt. And this with the taxes already paid in and now to be used in paying off orders we hope will leave the county in better shape. But the most encouraging feature is the strict business methods, now in force in the various offices.

RUG PEDDLERS IN HOC.

Arrested Today For Violating the Town Ordinance.

James Heath and Martin Vincent, the two men who have been in the city selling rugs, without a license were arrested to-day on a charge of selling goods without a license. They were taken to 'Squire Walters and after witnesses were examined who had purchased rugs, the two men were fined each $25, according to the penalty as prescribed by the ordinance. They said they were sent here by the company who heard that such an ordinance was passed, and that they would hold that it was unreasonable and would stand them a trial in the higher courts. They refused to pay the fine and were locked up to await the advice of the company they represent. They will be remembered as the fellows who were at the meeting of the council on May 3, and tried to bluff them by presenting some sort of a lense, which was drawn up to evade the license. In being questioned by city Attorney Brown, one of them got funny, and made the remark to him, "Don't get scarastic, we've done business with village attorneys before."

NEW INDUSTRY.

F. P. Myers of Smithfield was in town Saturday, and in a conversation, with him, we learned that several peo- in his part of the county are going into raising peppermint. He has planted this year 2½ acres of it and Eli Stofer about an acre, Frank Smith about an acre and Mr. Grambling near Summit has planted some. Last year his brother, Geo. Myers had an acre and 65 rods planted and got about 60 pounds and John Myers another brother had about an acre, but the crop was injured by being overflowed and he got only about fifteen pounds. Peter Coyle had about fifty pounds from an acre and 15 rods. Geo. Myers has sold a part of the roots of his last year's field, realizing about $100 from selling out every other row. Mr. Myers says it takes a good deal of work the first year, but after that they have covered the ground so completely that no weeds can grow. It may be that this will open up a new crop for farmers to take the place of low-priced wheat. Mr. Coyle has the plant for distilling the mint.

THE NEW ARTIST.

The new artist Mr. O. E Lybarger takes charge of the J. G. Clapp gallery today, June 1. He is a young man of great promise and has a good reputation as an artist having been engaged in that work a number of years, He comes into a gallery that has good business already worked up and an excellent reputation for fine work and we hope to see him maintain its hign reputation. We also hope that our people, especially our young people will make him feel that in Auburn he is among friends,, not strangers. Second Lecture.

The lecture course, is getting better and better. Dr. Frank Bristol, last evening, gave a grand lecture, full of bright ideas well studied up, and fairly well delivered. We look to see the lecture of Mr. Norris to-night please the audience as well as this. Our people will remember his fine lecture on the "Geysers of the Yellowstone Valley."

EXPERTS AS EGG-EATERS.

Shipwrecked Men Hungrily Ate a Barrel of Hen Fruit a Day.

"Do you like eggs?" was the question that stirred up a "49-er" to make some talk in a Bangor store the other day, says the Lewiston Journal. He was an old man and he straightened up to something like the height of his prime and answered: "I had a surfeit of them once. 'Twas many years ago, when I was on the way home from California. We left the isthmus on a good brig bound for New York, but ran into a coral reef in the Caribbean sea and were wrecked. It was a patch of sand just out of the water, but you ought to see the flocks of sea fowl that nestled on it! They had to move out of the way to give us room to stay there and that was about all they would do. Their nests were everywhere, and there were eggs in abundance. We ate about a barrel of them every day during the twelve days we were there. Some of us got off in a boat and went to San Juan, in Nicaragua, where he got a vessel to go after those we left on the reef. That vessel was commanded by William Lawrence of Bath, who was killed by a man called Wilkinson while he was a policeman there. We tried to get to the reef, but bad weather stove us up so we had to set in for New Orleans, where we found the rest of the men rescued by another vessel. But eggs——" the old man's face took on a peculiar expression.

HUNTING WITH A MIRROR.

Effect of Reflected Light Upon Birds and Rabbits in the Woods.

A taxidermist at Northwood, N. Y., has been making experiments as to the effect of light reflected in a bird's eyes. A glass seven or eight inches in diameter has been found most serviceable. The antics of blue jays are remarkable when the light strikes them as they sit in the shadow of an evergreen tree. They jump to another branch and try to look into the light, but they have to turn away, as the light dazzles them Then they fly around the reflection but after practice one is able to keep the light always on them, and the birds not infrequently come within the reach of a man's hand.

A ruffed grouse gives a startled look when the light strikes it. Then up it jumps, and away it goes. Hawks, too, are usually startled or annoyed so that they fly off. Woodpeckers don't seem to mind it at all.

Rabbits blink and stare at a glass for a while, then they go around a stump and sit up again, as if waiting for the light to play tag with them.—New York Sun.

Choosing a Life Partner.

The Washington Star tells the following tale of a girl with an eye to the main chance:

"It was a difficult matter to make up my mind which to accept," said the girl with a practical mind.

"I understand that both are very bright."

"Yes. They're inventors."

"There is something noble in that profession. I cannot think without the profoundest admiration of these men who harness the giant forces of nature to do the bidding of the human will."

"Yes. That sentiment applies to William. He's at work on a flying machine and a new kind of electric engine. But one can't buy moquette carpets and dining-room chairs with fine theories, you know?"

"Aren't you going to marry William?"

"No. I accepted John. He's going to be a rich man. He has an invention under way for fastening on suspender buttons so they can't come off."

—This is the season of the year for travel. It is neither too warm nor too cold. The happy medium is here. Occasional rains furnish a safeguard against dust. The country presents a charming, soul-inspiring appearance. All nature is smiling its prettiest. Mother Earth is clothed in her most attractive garb. If you have a journey in contemplation, make it now. If travel is not on your program, go out and "view the landscape o'er." It will do you good. It will put you in a happy frame of mind. It will dispel gloom. It will convince you that, in spite of all the gloom and misery to which attention is continuously being directed, there is much over which the human mind may rejoice; there is much to cheer the heart; there is much to make one happy.

—L. Bowers and Ollie Clay returned Saturday from their trip into Kansas. They were at Mt. Ida, and in that section. No wheat is raised there, but other crops are in good shape, though a little backward, the same as here. But the most of their corn has been plowed, and some of it the second time. They found excellent wheat after leaving Churubusco, way over into Illinois.

To Get Rid of Mosquitoes.

A correspondent writes that last year she was almost compelled to give up working in the garden by reason of mosquitoes, but a happy thought suggested itself. Getting some kerosene oil she smeared the fences near which she had to weed and trim her plants, and to her delight the insects took wings and departed, not to return till the odor of the oil had entirely gone. A second application rid the garden of them for the season.

Mrs. Johnston will frame those she has and it will be quite a curiosity to see them.

—Angola Herald:—The G. A. R. reports show that during the past year in Indiana there have been issued ten general orders and fifty-five dispensations, $4,084 have been spent for relief, and eight posts have been organized. The collective report shows that the Relief corps during the year expended in cash relief $3,220; in other necessities, $3,603.88, and turned over to the posts $1,219 making a total of $8,044.70.

—There are same people who are never positive in anything. It is always, "I don't know," "I guess so." There is a world of such people, and it is refreshing sometimes to hear a person as one having conviction, like Mr. Chas. F. Snyder, of Bangor, Pa., who wrote, "I can heartily recommend Simmons Liver Regulator to all who are troubled with Dyspepsia or Live Complaint."

—If anyone wants to know how dark Auburn is after midnight let him go along our densely shaded streets at that hour, especially if the weather is even a little cloudy. Our citizens should adopt the habit of going to bed early, for with their eyes shut they can enjoy the darkness without danger of getting off the sidewalk.

should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache, for the relief of which take Simmons Liver Regulator.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

George W. Hanes Dead.

The sad news came here to-day of the death of G. W. Hanes at his home two miles this side of Butler. He had been in poor health for some time, his disease being some form of stomach trouble. He had been for a time at Chicago for treatment, but died at his home, at about three in the afternoon of yesterday. The funeral is to-morrow, Sunday, in the afternoon. Mr. Hanes was one of the best known and most valued citizens in that section.

The first sermon will be on Thursday evening by Rev. Guild of Auburn. On Friday night Rev. Haines of Garrett, will preach, and on Saturday evening Rev. Yager of Waterloo. Sunday at 10 a.m. Rev. Warrick of Warsaw will deliver an able sermon. People should make arrangements to attend this meeting as it will be very interesting.

Got the Bicycle

The prize bicycle at Shull's Shoe Store was drawn to-day, and the lucky number was 155, C. held by a Garrett man, W. A. Mawhorter. To-day was the day for settling the matter, and three men, Dr. J. C. Baxter, Miles Baxter and Herb Weaver, none of whom held a number were selected to do the drawing. The lucky man will have a fine wheel.

Goes Now at 10:20

The Lake Shore south bound train goes at 10:20 now: There are no other changes in the time of trains at this point. People hoped that the train would run earlier instead of 10 minutes later. There will probably be no new Sunday train, as no information to that affect has been received by Agent DeLapp.

Garrett Celebrates.

After all, the Fourth of July is a grand old day, and one recognized the world over more than any other day in the Calendar of red letter days. Last year Auburn celebrated it in grand style. This year Garrett will celebrate, and they expect to have a big time. So, they ask all the sister towns to join them in their neat little city that day and help to make it the great event of the season. We do not know whether any other town will celebrate or not, but, we feel that Garrett is entitled to a good showing from the other towns.

Henry Lembach, an old resident of Dubuque, just dead, had a singular dread of the number 7, which he always considered fateful to him. He was born in Germany on Nov. 7, 1827. Suits are being prepared at Frankfort, Ky., and will be filed immediately against the insurance companies for the amount of policies on the life of ex-Treasurer Tate, which have been kept up for his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Martin. After serving her sentence she returned home and has now brought suit for divorce from West for the purpose of becoming the legal wife of Lair.

A FORTUNE FOR A WARDROBE.

Some New York Women Pay $25,000 for Winter Use Alone.

In speaking of the enormous sums spent annually by some of the society women of New York, such as Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. Lorillard, Mrs. Belmont and others of the same set, the statement has been made that several of them spent from $20,000 to $25,000 for their winter wardrobes alone. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is said to have spent $25,000 for her wardrobe the last season. How this can be done will be seen from the following list:

Ten gowns for ball and opera, $3,000; ten bonnets, $950; one sealskin cape, $400; two fur muffs, $150; one ear muff, $129; one opera cloak, $250; one opera cloak, $300; six pairs walking shoes, $90; four pairs dancing shoes, $48; four pairs kid slippers, $60; three dozen long gloves, $360; four dozen gloves for driving and walking, $144; ten tea gowns, $2,200; six dressing gowns, $500; three riding habits, $400; fourteen corsets, $420; twelve pairs silk stockings, $60; four dozen pair lisle stockings, $144; two pairs bedroom slippers, $20; four suits silk underwear, $200; ten suits woolen underwear, $200; lingerie, $1,500; four dozen handkerchiefs, $45; two dozen handkerchiefs, $48; two dozen handkerchiefs, $36; three dozen handkerchiefs, $36; toilet articles, $1,000; tea gowns for walking and driving, $1,000; three bath robes, $160; three fans, $75; three pairs riding boots, $75; two bicycle suits, $300; two traveling outfits, $200; two winter wraps, $200; two winter wraps, $150; three skating outfits, $275; trimmings, ribbons, etc., $300; four umbrellas, $48; one sable-trimmed wrap, $1,000; three dinner gowns, $1,200; two evening cloaks, $800; one dozen veils, $150; jewelry, $5,000; one fur wrap, $800; two fur boas, $200; two morning gowns, $200; two sleighing outfits, $400; three theater costumes, $300; one fancy dress ball costume, $300; six pairs overshoes, $6; total, $25,749.

This does not include any of her other personal expenses, such as the cost of flowers, the pay of ladies' maids, money given in charity, the cost of opera and theater boxes and the charge for entertainment and household maintenance. On clothes alone Mrs. Belmont spends in a single winter season what would be a fortune to the ordinary man.

What Ten Dollars a Week Will Do.

In the Ladies' Home Journal Mrs. S. T. Rorer shows that a family of two with one servant can live well on an expenditure of eight dollars a week for food in Philadelphia and the East, six dollars in the South, and ten dollars in New England. These figures, she says, cover milk, flour, meat and marketing, as well as groceries, and are based upon the presumption that the woman of the family is a practical housekeeper. "Last summer," Mrs. Rorer writes, "I was superintending very closely and carefully my own household, which numbered at the time eight persons, and without the slightest difficulty I arranged an exceedingly attractive table with an expenditure of only ten dollars per week, and this covered everything used on the table, three meals a day. To do this I purchased beef by the loin, taking out the fillet, using it as a roast one day for dinner; made stock from the bones and rough pieces, quite enough to last for half the week. The back was taken off and cut into steaks, and the tough, lean end divided, one portion being used for Hamburg steaks and the other for a brown stew with vegetables. From this one loin, which cost one dollar and seventy-five cents, I had sufficient stock for three days, and meat for four dinners, freshly cooked for each meal, making an average cost of forty-four cents a meal."

Mrs. Rorer also states that a family of six, with two servants, "can live quite well with an expenditure for the table of fourteen dollars a week. Where people have sufficient means to live as the world calls well, but which, from a hygienic standpoint, is really bad, five hundred dollars a year is a very liberal allowance. On this, in winter, you may have an occasional dish of terrapin, providing you use the 'fresh water,' poultry, at least twice a week; an entree now and then; oysters and the more dainty varieties of fish. The dinner may be served in three or four courses. Breakfast may consist of a fruit, a cereal, eggs or chop, muffins and coffee; luncheon, a little entree, some well-cooked vegetables, and, perhaps, a water muffin toasted, or a little fruit with a light cake; the dinner, a soup, a meat with two vegetables, a salad with wafers and cheese, a light dessert and coffee. Now and then you may put in a little entree following the soup."

Ruined.

Proprietor—What are you taking back, there?

LEAPING FROM A BALLOON.

Incidental Dangers of Circus Life as Related by Dan Rice.

"Circus life, as well as all others, has its incidental dangers, as I found out in my experience of more than a half century under the canvas." The speaker was Dan Rice, the veteran clown and circus proprietor. "One of the dangers I encountered was recalled by a paragraph in a paper the other day about an aeronaut being killed in making a jump from a balloon with a parachute. I had a narrow escape from a similar death away back before the war.

"You see," he continued, "I was always willing to act as a general emergency man, to do any work and fill any position in any circus with which I have been connected, and, in such cases, have been in imminent danger many times. I have been in grave danger of being devoured by lions, crushed by elephants, and 'skinned' alive by candy butchers and other employes who handled my money, but the occurrence I am about to relate was as interesting as anything in my career.

"I believe I was the first circus proprietor in the world to employ a professional to make a balloon ascension and a parachute jump prior to each afternoon performance, picking up an aeronaut named Ed Billings in an Ohio town.

"Now, Ed was a good aeronaut, entirely devoid of fear, and made leaps with the parachute from greater heights than had ever been made before," Col. Rice resumed. "The only trouble was that Ed was too jovial, and at times drank too much whisky. More than once I had spoken my mind to him on the subject, and, as he did not heed my remarks, I made every preparation for opportunely advertising my circus on the day when he should in the natural course of events fall from his balloon or parachute and be killed. With the same fortsight I made a study of aeronautics and parachute leaping, until I felt competent to fill his position when made vacant The occasion for my services came at White Water, Mich., when, at ascension time, Billings lay under a wagon suffering from 'sick headache.'

"When it became evident that I must make the ascension and jump, I did not hesitate, but, donning a tinsel suit, entered the car and began my first journey skyward, amid a chorus of half-suppressed exclamations of admiration from an immense throng of spectators. As I saw the earth dropping from me and the human forms below growing shorter and smaller, until they appeared like the tiniest insects, I contrived to maintain my nerve, and, leaning over the edge of the basket, or car, bravely threw kisses to the gaping crowd almost beneath. When I had ascended nearer heaven than I had ever been before—say 1,200 or 1,500 feet—I prepared to make my maiden leap, being particularly careful that my every movement should be seen by the crowd of spectators away down beneath on the earth.

"After a time I pulled open the escape valve of the balloon, which slowly began to descend after remaining stationary for a brief moment. Then I clutched the trapeze bar, which was attached to the parachute, kissed my hand to the expanse of upturned faces below, shut both eyes, and made a bold jump out into space and shot like an arrow earthward. My feeling at that critical moment can best be described as one of all-goneness, but grimly and desperately I clutched the bar in my hand, and, with heart in my mouth, anxiously awaited the sharp, snapping sound which would announce the opening of the parachute. But the sound did not come. Great God! how the seconds flew by and still the accursed canvas did not open. Though darting earthward rapidly, fatally, hope did not desert me.

"Suddenly the despaired-of snapping sound rang in my ears. Thank God, the parachute had opened! I was saved, and that, too, at the last possible moment. My descent was at once checked, and the earth was not 200 feet away. It was with assumed ease that I finally landed upon the ground, and I doubt if any, save the circus people, in that great crowd knew how near I had been to death.

"When Billings subsequently learned of my perilous leap with the parachute and narrow escape from a terrible death he came with tears in his eyes, and, taking my hand, vowed that he would never again touch an intoxicant."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Equal to the Emergency.

Being equal to an emergency helps one out of plights into which the best of us sometimes fall.

I heard of an actor who came so belated to the theater one evening when he was to play Othello, in the tragedy of that name, that he forgot to blacken his hands and rushed on the stage with them white and his face sooty. Of course the audience giggled, and poor Othello, when he realized the cause of the mirth, was almost unable to proceed with his part, and so deeply mortified that when he made his exit after his first scene he declared he could not finish the performance, but a happy though struck him. He procured a pair of flesh colored gloves, blackened his hands, put the gloves on and walked quietly on again.

There was quite a little tittering as the Moor went on with his lines, but it entirely subsided as during a speech of one of the other characters, the dusky lover carelessly drew off his gloves, disclosing hands to match his face.

Then those whose risibles had been affected felt small and awkward.

Silk from Spider's Web.

The web of the Madagascar spider is to be utilized for the purpose of silk manufacturing by a company of French capitalists. It is still remembered that the Creoles of Mauritius presented Empress Eugenie with a pair of mittens made of this spider's threads, which were so fine that they could hardly be noticed on her hands,

A French naturalist has recently ascertained that the Madagascar spider produces at the beginning of its work more than 100 yards of thread per hour, increasing in quantity until it produces more than 150 yards per hour. A newly-constructed little machine which winds the thread on bobbins automatically immediately from the spider is to be employed in Madagascar. The spiders themselves are to be raised systematically in enormous numbers, and although the fabrics made from the new material may be costly at first, it is not unlikely that the present generation will live to see dresses made of spider web.

Woman in the East.

An old Arab proverb declares, "The best son-in-law is the grave." You cannot insult a Moslem more than to ask after the health of his wife.

If a woman is so much as mentioned in conversation, even though she may be the speaker's own wife, politeness requires one to add the words, "May God elevate you"—that is, above the contamination of such a subject. The same expression is used after the mention of a dog, a donkey, a pig, or a shoe, all of which are held vile and unclean. Nor is this feeling confined to Mohammedans. Doctor Jessup tells how a Greek Christian in Tripoli came applying for help to an American physician.

"There is a woman here who is ill. I beg your pardon for mentioning so vile a subject to your excellency."

"Who may it be?" inquired the doctor.

"May God elevate you, it is my wife."

Dr. Jessup also tells of overhearing the following conversation between a Mohammedan and Doctor Van Dyck:

"Your excellency must be aware that I have a sick man at my house. May God grant you health! He has pain in his back, headache, and he will not eat."

"Has he any fever?"

"A little."

"I will come, and see her this afternoon, perhaps."

"May God increase your goods."

Both Got There.

About fifteen years ago there were in attendance at the Columbia Law School at New York two young students, one from Ohio, J. J. Lentz, and the other from Pennsylvania, E. E. Robbins. The fellow students were roommates at college and cultivated each other's acquaintance to the point of fast friendship. In discussing their plans at school one day young Robbins asked Lentz: "What do you propose doing when you graduate?"

"I am going back to Ohio and run for Congress," was the reply. "What are your plans?"

"I propose returning to Pennsylvania and trying the same idea," responded Robbins. "We will meet some day in the House."

The other day, for the first time during the session, Robbins, a representative from Greensburg, Pa., met Lentz, a representative from Columbus, Ohio. Clasping hands, they remarked, but in the same breath, "Well, here we are."

Naval Tank.

The new naval experiment tank at the Washington yard, in which miniature war ships will be tested, will be 500 feet long and 50 feet across, and inside the water space will be 475 by 43 feet. Its depth will be 14 feet. Running across, close to the water, will be a carriage upon which there will be attached a dynamometer to register the resistance due to towing a model through the basin. Models, varying in size from ten to twenty feet, of every new ship to be built will be attached to this machinery and drawn through the water. The wave motion will be observed and the resistance it offers will be calculated.
